

Bomb Blast, Following Threats, Litters Town With Jewelry

Police are seeking the authors of threatening letters sent to Fred Adsett, Minerva, O., jeweler before a bomb exploded in his store, wrecking it and scattering gems and silver-plate worth thousands of dollars in every direction. Adsett was absent at the time. Nearby stores were damaged. The photo shows the effect of the blast on the Adsett shop.

"THE ECHO," 100 PCT. AMERICAN, IS MUSIC TRIUMPH

(Associated Press Local Wire.)

PORTLAND, Ore., June 10.—Politics came to the fore today in the biennial convention of the National Federation of Music Clubs with the report of the nominating committee, proposing members of the board of directors. The directors will vote all day tomorrow and Friday, the selection of officers will be announced. Candidates mentioned for the presidency are Mrs. Cecil Frankel, of Los Angeles and Mrs. Edgar Stillman Kelley, of Oxford, Ohio.

The educational department had the floor today at the convention. Mrs. William Arma Fisher, of Boston, national chairman of the executive department had charge of the morning session, at which reports of various educational activities were presented.

The world premiere of "The Echo", one act opera held last night was the outstanding event of the musical program. It was declared to be an unqualified success. An audience that packed the auditorium heard the opera and also the prize symphonic poem, "The Pit and the Pendulum", the latter conducted by its composer, Edgar Stillman Kelley.

"The Echo", says Susie Aubrey Smith of the Telegram, "was a hundred per cent American production, composed by an American artist, and the opera presented by an American organization in an American city. Without taking into consideration the comparatively few rehearsals which were possible with full cast, chorus and orchestra, and the relatively small financial outlay made for the entire production, the performance may be characterized as remarkably fine. Frank Patterson has composed some very beautiful and very difficult music for his opera—and in the manner in which both the singers and the orchestra surmounted its technical difficulties, is greatly to their credit."

Seals and Tuna Fish Have Hiding Places

There is a mystery surrounding the fur seal which has never been solved. No one has ever been able to discover where they go in winter. No one has yet been able to make a record of their hiding place.

All that is known, says the Minneapolis Tribune, is that on the islands of St. Paul and St. George, in Alaska, the seals begin to appear about the end of April or the first of May and toward the latter part of August or in the first week of September they disappear as strangely and mysteriously as they came. In this respect they are but less puzzling to scientists than the huge schools of tuna fish which appear and disappear from the waters of southern California regularly each year.

Tuna fish have been caught, marked and turned loose, with the hope that some of them might be caught in other waters during the winter months, but so far none of them have been captured. A similar method of marking seals would do no good, for they are never seen during the winter months.

Years ago the seals numbered 5,000,000 or more, where today they may be counted only up to four or five hundred thousand. Yet even in the days when they were most numerous their habit of disappearing suddenly without leaving a trace of their whereabouts and as suddenly reappearing after an absence of several months was just as mysterious as it is today.

Paris Bank Messenger Needs No Armed Guard

The Paris bank messenger wears a cocked hat with an air of dignity. His coat is liberal in cut and you can see the big brass buttons on it glittering in the sunshine quite a long way off. A brass plate over his heart bears a number and under his arm he carries a leather satchel attached to a big chain secured about his waist.

There is an air of prosperity about him. He is of liberal proportions and plants his feet firmly. He inspires confidence and we might trust our fortune to his keeping and still sleep peacefully at night.

We meet him often in the busy morning near the opera pursuing his steadfast way along the crowded pavement. He, at least of anyone, is in a hurry. He is picturesque, slow and sure. And that we feel we may confide our treasure to him is due not to the chain of shining steel with which he grapples it, nor his glittering buttons, nor the brazen number on his breast, but he is secure, inviolate because he is fanatic and treasure walks the streets unguarded save by the fantasy of a glorious cocked hat.—From the Continental Edition of the London Mail.

When Poachers Flourished

As a profession, poaching has fallen off greatly in Great Britain. A hundred years ago the nights between the harvest and hunters' full moons were the nights of the poachers' delight, and there would be a steady flow of game, not killed by shot, in the cellars of dealers in country towns, to the country inns, and to the boxes of such coaches and guards and country carriers as were willing to do a little business in handling game. A hundred-year-old reciter shows that a few years ago, in the west of England, there were a few poachers in every town and village, hence the threatening notices, "Beware of Mantraps," still often to be seen in British woodlands.

Fires in Forests

It is not practicable to equip forests with lightning rods. No remedy is now in sight for disastrous forest fires due to lightning, such as have occurred in vast scale in the western states during the last season, says Nature Magazine of Washington. When lightning strikes a tree the ordinary result is to splinter the wood or strip off bark through the sudden generation of steam. In the great majority of cases the tree is not set on fire. Nevertheless the aggregate number of forest fires started by lightning is, in many parts of the country, greater than the number due to all other causes combined.

Paper in Farming

A 50 per cent increase in the pineapple crops of the Hawaiian Islands has been accomplished by use of broad strips of brown paper that completely cover the soil around the plants. The paper smother the weeds, thereby leaving all the nourishment for the plants, which forces their way up through the covering. Also, the paper protector conserves the moisture in the soil. The waste fibers of sugar cane, once considered valueless, are used for making the paper. Seventy-five thousand rolls of it at a cost of $250,000 are used yearly to cover the 3,500 acres of pineapple plantations in the islands.

At Last

How often the wild rose has moved its first flame along the skirts of hornbeam hedge or beech thicket, or the honeysuckle begun to unwind her pale horns of ivory and moonlight, and yet across the furthest elm-tops to the south the breeze still unheeded in the windless amber dawn, or when, as in the poet's tale, the myriad little hands of twilight pull the shadows out of the leaves and weave the evening dark. But when the cry of the dove is abroad we know that our welcome spring is come at last.—Flora Macleod, in "Where the Forest Murmurs."

SECURITY PACT NOT FAVORED BY BRITISH LABOR

(Associated Press Local Wire.)

LONDON, June 10.—While the proposed security pact negotiated with France at Geneva by Foreign Secretary Chamberlain is certain to meet strong criticism in the House of Commons, the laborites alone of the political parties have thus far expressed their attitude. They are uncompromisingly hostile to the agreement on the grounds that it involves Great Britain too deeply in possible European embroilments.

Former Premier Ramsay MacDonald, the laborite leader, is quoted by the party organ, the "Daily Herald," as saying:—

"The agreement is the beginning not of a general understanding to maintain peace, but of individual alliances and guarantees. It will not in the end promote peace but increase the organization for war and this is true whether it provides only security for France or security for Germany also."

The "Westminster Gazette," one of the leading mouthpieces of the liberal party, says that while there is some anxiety in liberal quarters regarding the British commitments, no positive exception is taken to such a bi-lateral guarantee as outlined.

If accepted by Germany, the pact will provide a guarantee of the frontiers of France, Belgium and Germany as established under the Versailles Treaty. Great Britain would be pledged to use all her forces against nation making an unprovoked attack on the frontiers, such defensive action to be taken under the aegis of the League of Nations.

PARIS, June 10.—The previously prevailing optimism regarding the prospect for a Western European security pact based upon the Chamberlain-Briand agreement reached at Geneva, regarding Germany's proposals, was slumping somewhat in official circles here today. This was due to reports of some unfavorable reactions in London and Berlin.

It was remarked by some Parisian newspaper editors that the followers of the Poincare government may have been a trifle premature in their enthusiasm, as Germany after all, will have something to say about signing the proposed pact.

Official quarters were uneasy over the emphasis which has been placed on the proposition that Great Britain's air, land and sea forces would rush to France's defense in case of aggression upon France.

LONDON, June 10.—Premier Baldwin today told the House of Commons that the security pact had been concluded with France and that none would be concluded without parliament being given an opportunity for full decision.

Premier Baldwin, who was replying to a question of Sir Robert Hamilton, liberal member from Orkney and Shetland, said:—"In view of certain misapprehensions which have arisen in the public mind, it is well to say that the position to date is that the British and French governments, after carefully considering all German proposals, have reached a complete agreement on certain basic principles to which a settlement must conform and to which there is every reason to expect the adhesion of Belgium and Italy."

Premier Baldwin reiterated that the contemplated settlement would be strictly of a bi-lateral character and not one-sided, as possibly has been inferred from some reports that have appeared.

He said that as soon as the reply to Germany's security pact proposals has been forwarded to Berlin, he would take steps, with the consent of the French government, to place the matter before the British parliament.

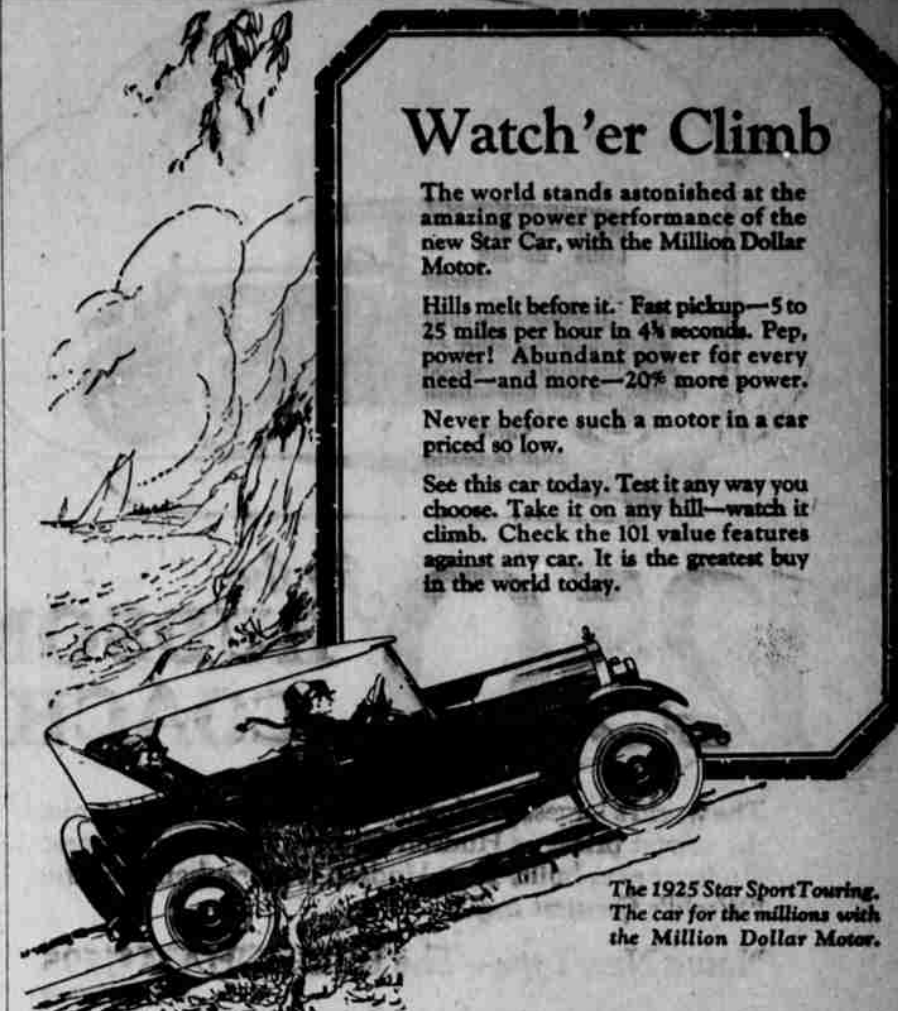

The city of Bandon will have to pay damages to the extent of $2500 to Axel Sandstrom as a result of the death of his 14-year-old son a year ago, caused by contact with a live electric wire. Sandstrom brought suit against the city for $7500 and the jury awarded him one-third.
