HEALTH BULLETIN

MAKING WATER PURE.

(State Board of Health.)

The beautiful, clear, bubbling spring or the stagnant pool — which is apt to be the more dangerous? Contrary to what we usually think, it is the former. Many a "healthy, good-tasting" spring water, which was highly esteemed in the neighborhood, and which was even bottled for shipment, has been found to be contaminated and a prolific spreader of intestinal diseases, such as typhoid fever and dysentery. The stagnant pool, on the other hand, though it may contain plant life which might give us a slight upset, is not likely to be the vehicle of the diseases aforementioned. This, for the reason that during the weeks that the water remains stagnant, disease germs starve to death. Most disease germs cannot live long outside the body, being adapted to only a parasitic life. In fact, one method of purifying city waters is by "impounding," or storing the water in large reservoirs, for several weeks, so that germs such as those of dysentery and typhoid die off.

These germs live in human bodies, and are cast off through the excretions. Where these come into contact with waste or food taken into the body, they have an excellent chance of gaining a foothold and producing another case of disease. They are more apt to get into springs and shallow wells than any other water supply by seeping from a deposit of waste through a crack in the soil, or by being washed in by heavy rains. There is no such thing as a spring which, once infected with typhoid germs, retains this infection indefinitely. But often there is a continual pollution of a spring from a constant supply of the germs such as an insanitary outhouse.

To test water, we examine it to see whether those germs are present, which are always found in human waste. If they are, the source is polluted. Though it may not at the moment contain germs producing disease, it may at any time do so, and is therefore a potential disease-spreader. City water supplies have means of procuring pure water, or of making it pure. Smaller supplies often use the chlorine method, which is perfectly safe, relatively cheap and does not require expensive installations. Either a minute quantity of the gas is used directly, or small amounts of bleaching powder are added; the latter recalling the "chlorine gas" used by the Army during the war, which incidentally prevented a lot of sickness.)

When camping, it is best not to take any chances on the purity of our water supplies. Unless we are absolutely sure that the water has been thoroughly tested, and is under competent supervision, it is best to boil all of it that goes into our mouths. Bringing water to a boil kills all the harmful bacteria that are apt to be in it. It also makes the water taste "flat"; but this can be remedied by shaking or stirring it vigorously after it has cooled. Each year many persons, living in cities where typhoid has been practically wiped out, return from their vacations with a case which they picked up through carelessness and lack of proper precautions.

HARD LABOR AWAITS BREWERS OF ILLICIT LIQUORS IN RUSSIA.

(Associated Press Lead Wire.) MOSCOW, June 11.— Bootlegging in Russia is as great an evil as it is in the United States. The illicit manufacture of vodka, which is 95 percent pure alcohol, is universal throughout the country. The prisons are crowded with men and women convicted of bootlegging. Every day the government confiscates hundreds of home-brewing stills, exiling the owners to Siberia or sentencing them from one to three years at hard labor.

Declaring it had found complete prohibition a failure, the government has recently permitted the manufacture and sale of 10 per cent vodka and by October this will allow 40 per cent vodka. This is hoped will stop the widespread illicit manufacture. The new order has been hailed with joy by innkeepers, restaurateurs, and the Russian public generally. Although punishment for violation of the vodka prohibition act in Russia is almost as severe as the penalty prescribed by the American government for violation of the Volstead dry law, vodka is found at every well-ordered meal in Russian homes. In many cases it is home-made from common potatoes, rye, raisins, sugar or even ordinary honey, while in other instances it is of the pure botanical variety derived from grain alcohol. It is drunk not so much as a stimulant or thirst-quencher, as an incentive to the appetite.

Wine of good quality can be had all over Russia. The government has found it expedient to permit the manufacture and consumption of wine for purposes of revenue and to save the extensive Russian vineyards in the Caucasus, the Crimea and Armenia from economic ruin. The manufacture and sale of beer also is allowed. Breweries formerly owned by individuals have passed into the hands of the government, which operates the breweries through State trusts.

STATE MARKET AGENT DEPARTMENT

(C. E. Spence, Market Agent) World's Wheat Bins Empty. The world's wheat bins will be more empty by the time the harvest starts in the south than at any time during the past 75 years, so the government states. Owing to winter injury the fall crop in the United States is only expected to reach 445,000,000 bushels, compared with 590,000,000 last year. On the other hand spring wheat, both in this country and Canada, is in excellent condition, and if favorable weather conditions prevail, the yield of spring wheat in North America will be large. Present prospects are for fair prices.

Oregon Cherries Quarantined

The State Department of Agriculture of California has barred cherry shipments from Oregon into that state in all counties but six. The counties exempt are Hood River, Wasco, Umatilla, Curry, Josephine and Jackson. The embargo is against the cherry fruit fly, which made havoc of many orchards in some localities last year.

AN OPERATION RECOMMENDED

Avoided by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Los Angeles, Cal.—"I cannot give too much praise to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for what it has done for me. My mother gave it to me when I was a girl 14 years old, and since then I have taken it when I feel run down or tired. I took it for three months before my two babies were born, and I suffered with my back and had spells as if my heart was affected, and it helped me a lot. The doctors told me at one time that I would have to have an operation. I thought I would try Pinkham's, as I call it, first. In two months I was all right and had no operation. I firmly believe 'Pinkham's' cured me. Every one who saw me after that remarked that I looked so well. I only have to take medicine occasionally, not but I always keep a couple of bottles by me. I recommend it to women who speak to me about their health. I have also used your Sunative Wash and like it very much." — Mrs. E. GOULD, 4000 East Side Boulevard, Los Angeles, Cal. Many letters have been received from women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after operations have been advised.

No Debts and a Reserve. The Producers' Cooperative Packing company of Salem handled about one and a quarter million pounds of fruit last year: prunes, blackberries, loganberries, gooseberries, raspberries, cherries, pears and plums. The company has a modern plant, no debts and a reserve fund of $10,450.

Farmers Buy Large Feed Mill. The progress of the west are new looking back east for real advancement and cooperation. Week after week the newspapers relate many organizations of farmers and their taking over functions formerly operated by private capital. One of the latest real big movements in cooperative advancement is the taking over of a large feed mill at Cortland, N. Y. by the Eastern States Farmers Exchange. The mill is stated to be one of the largest feed mills in the United States and the largest strictly cooperative enterprise of the kind in the country. Better quality, better service and lower prices are promised to members by the organization. All the net earnings will go to the credit of the exchange.

After Law Violators

The various state potato inspectors have been checking up on some of the grocery stores in the counties outside of Portland, and several cases of plain violation of the new potato law have been reported, mostly the mis-branding of stock by the growers and the ignoring of the sack branding. In each of the latter cases the law has been taken up with the individual, and the cases are pending. The legislature put the enforcement of the law up to the State Inspection Department, and the State Market Agent, C. E. Spence, states that he believes when the growers and dealers appreciate that compliance with the law will bring the benefit of all concerned, there will be little trouble with violations.

Crop Prospects Are Splendid

Prospects are for big crops all over Oregon. Abundant rains in May all over the state gave all crops a splendid start. Central Oregon had more rainfall in May than it has had in any other year. In the Willamette valley it is looking fine. The potato crop promises an abundant yield.

A WOMAN'S SOUL LAID BARE

"You let them think so, Blakely because you thought it would be easier to break down my moral fiber. You thought if you were willing to wait — would still come to you and you confidently expected that when you sent Bill to Washington this time, you would not have to wait much longer."

"Bill thought this, too, and he went, hoping that at last I would give in to your importunities and put you in his power."

"In your arrogant conceit, neither of you saw that I did not love either of you any more. Bill thought that if he beckoned, I would come to him to the ends of the earth, and neither of you realized that both of you were exploiting me — exploiting my very soul to further your own ends."

"You are mad; you are mad, Rita."

"No, I am sane for the first time in nearly four years. This time I have made up my mind to give you in his power."

"Did you tell him you were doing this, Rita?"

"No. Why should I? He imagined he was deserting me. He was leaving me to you and in his reckless heart he was thinking of how much he could bleed you out of. I could tell it by his shifty glances and the thickness of his tongue when he said he would telegraph me the moment he arrived in Washington."

"Blakely, Bill never intended either to write or wire me, but he hopes to bleed you as long as we both shall live."

There was a sound of a chair being quickly set back against the wall and a groan.

A BRIDE'S DIARY

A Love Story of Today
By Idah McGlone Gibson

Cleo Madison, entertaining a few friends, reads from her grandmother's quaint, modest diary. The flapper friends are thunderstruck at its quaintness and suppressed desires. When the girls leave, Cleo plans her elopement with Paul Armstrong, U. S. A., a boyhood sweetheart. None the less, she indulges in a petting party with Chick Adams that evening. Chick is wealthy and Cleo's parents wish her to marry him; so does Chick. Paul's parents, also social climbers who have lost their money, wish Paul to marry Connie Terhune, very rich and in love with Paul. Despite these desires of the parents and Cleo's wondrousness as to whether she really does love Paul, the two are married. Almost immediately Cleo begins to learn that marriage is not altogether a path of roses. However, the parents are reconciled to the marriage and the young couple depart for the army post, to which Paul is assigned. On the train Cleo has an allegorical dream which indicates the problems she will have to face. When the newlyweds arrive at the post, Paul is assigned to duty at once and leaves Cleo, who knows nothing of house-keeping, to shift for herself during the day. Johnson, a "stricker" detailed to Paul's quarters, helps out. Normally so Cleo is able to serve tea when Col. Beldon, the commanding officer, comes to pay his respects.

Rita Thordike, supposed informant of Col. Beldon, calls. The colonel is not clever enough to ensnare Cleo. Paul warns Cleo about the colonel and Rita. This precipitates a quarrel. And Cleo loses her temper, lustily so.

Cleo picks up much gossip about the colonel, who is a woman chaser, and Rita Thordike—but she likes Rita immensely. Almost immediately, Cleo makes an enemy of the major's catty wife, by telling a funny story.

Being left alone on the balcony, Cleo enters into a pertinent conversation between Rita Thordike and the colonel. The true state of Rita's affairs reaches Cleo, hidden, unintentionally on the balcony.

"I laughed almost hysterically. It was such a childish thing for Paul to do and it was quite as childish for me to be glad of it. 'Come on, dear. Let's find the Colonel and go home.' 'We must take Mrs. Thordike with us, Paul, you know?'"

"Sure, I'm beginning to feel pretty sorry for that little woman and if you want to be friendly with her, go ahead."

"Thank you, kind sir," I answered petulantly. I was so tired of the assumption of masculine superiority. I was so tired of all men that I wanted to get back home and go to sleep.

I found Rita sitting in a corner quite alone. Her face lighted up as she saw me. "Come on, dear. Paul and I are going home and we'll take you."

"I haven't been able to find the Colonel," Paul said, coming up. "So we'll just say goodnight to the wife of the Major and let it go at that."

"Good night, Mrs. Armstrong," said Rita. "Good night, Mrs. Thordike. When do you expect your husband back?"

"I'm sure I haven't the slightest idea," Rita Thordike said solemnly as we passed out into the darkness.

SMITH RIVER GRANGE FOR FAIR

One of the important matters to come before the June 14 meeting of the Smith River Grange is the discussion of plans for this year's fair, says the Port Umpqua Courier.

It is planned to make the fair this year the biggest ever held. The committee in charge of the arrangements for the fair are: Noah Black, chairman; Dave Roberts, William Dalley, Smith river, Karl Stone of Redaport and H. L. Edmunds of Gardiner.

PRACTITIONER'S CONVICTION QUASHED

William Elder, the Christian Science practitioner convicted of manslaughter at Winnipeg last March, in connection with a case of death by diphtheria, has been set free by the Manitoba Court of Appeals, according to information received here by the local authorities of the Christian Science church. The parents of the child had refused to allow the use of anti-toxin because of a former experience and two practitioners connected with the case were charged with manslaughter. One of the practitioners was acquitted immediately, and the other convicted, the court deciding that a conscientious objection to anti-toxin based upon religious belief was of no avail under the laws of the province. This decision has now been overruled by the appellate court, and the prosecution ended.
