CALLES THINKS KELLOGG STAND INSULTS MEXICO

Answer to Secretary's Note Declares Threat Made Against Government.

KELLOGG IS SILENT

Calles' Statement Unofficial and Demands No Reply— Washington Surprised at Attitude.

(Associated Press Special Wire.)
WASHINGTON, June 15.—Secretary Kellogg's statement of last Friday concerning conditions in Mexico has drawn an equally plain worded reply from President Calles, who regards as an insult the implication that Mexico is on trial before the world in the guise of a defendant.
President Calles' answer, issued through the Mexican embassy here yesterday, declared Mr. Kellogg's pronouncement embodied a "threat" against the sovereignty of Mexico and he deemed it "a duty for my government to rectify said statements as required by treaty and justice."
Secretary Kellogg had declared the administration would support the Mexican regime "only so long as it protects American lives and American rights and complies with its international engagements and obligations."

It is believed here that the discussion, which has been conducted through the press, will rest for a time at least, until President Calles decides to continue it through diplomatic channels. Secretary Kellogg is not expected to add to his own statement.

Officials here who knew of the reports which formed the basis of Mr. Kellogg's statement were surprised at President Calles' interpretation of it as a threat and an insult. The wording of the secretary's pronouncement, in their opinion, was both cautious and moderate.

Mexico, President Calles said in his reply, "does not accord to any foreign country the right to intervene in her domestic affairs, nor is she disposed to subordinate her international relations to the exigencies of another country."

The president expressed regret that Mr. Kellogg made mention of reports of impending revolution in Mexico because it "tends to cast some alarm in the world" regarding conditions there.

Mr. Kellogg's statement was based on much information placed before him by his aides, some of it alleging that property owned by Americans in Mexico had been seized by so-called agrarians without due legal process.

The labor situation in Mexico and the government's suspension of service on her debt contracted with bankers of this and other countries also have caused Washington officials some anxiety.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Washington officials gave no indication today that a public reply would be made to President Calles' objection to the administration's Mexican policy, but it was indicated that specific questions underlying Secretary Kellogg's position would be made the subject of a formal communication to the Mexican government.

A series of communications and representations have been sent to Mexico City from time to time recently on various cases in which this government is interested, none of which has been made public and it was indicated that other matters cited by Mr. Kellogg in the statement last week on the Mexican situation would be the subject of a formal note.

After the return of Secretary Kellogg to this country today, it was apparent that for the present at least, he saw no object in engaging in a long range debate with the Mexican president over a situation about which officials here are not in any doubt.

It was with manifest surprise that high officials learned that President Calles had chosen to view as an "insult" Secretary Kellogg's statement of last week, warning against further invasions of the rights of Americans in Mexico, but as the Calles statement was not a diplomatic paper, it is not in the class of pronouncements of which the government is forced to take official cognizance.

Some of the language used by the Mexican president, if embodied in a formal note, would constitute a cause for prompt and decisive reply. Since the statement was addressed only to the public through the newspapers, however, the American government, under the practices of diplomacy, can ignore it if it so desires.

Mr. Kellogg spent last night aboard the presidential yacht Maxwell with Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge and did not return to Washington until this morning. The text of President Calles' sharp reply did not reach him until he came to his desk at the state department.

Administration officials take the position that, in view of the visit to Washington of Ambassador Sheffield and his prolonged conference with the president and Mr. Kellogg, the American public was entitled to knowledge of the true situation in Mexico with which those conferences had to do. This feeling is said to have prompted the issuance of Mr. Kellogg's statement of last Friday, warning the American people that Washington support of the present Mexican administration could be continued only if that government lived up to its obligations so far as Americans and Mexico and their property is concerned.

The fact that President Calles expressed resentment in his answering statement has not changed the situation, and the Washington government is concerned more with what the Mexican authorities do in the way of protecting Americans and indemnifying them for expropriated lands than it is with what they have to say for publication.

handed, had higher receipts until the time of its abolishment, but now the local office stands at the top of the list, with annual receipts amounting to considerably more than a half million dollars.

The authority for this change was granted by the last congress, in keeping with the administration's economy policy, and the consolidation is being ordered in every land office of the country.

CAMAS VALLEY HOME DESTROYED BY FIRE SATURDAY

The J. P. Denn home at Camas Valley was destroyed by fire Saturday afternoon at about 5 o'clock, the fire apparently starting in a pile of books near the chimney. The fire had a good start before it was noticed, and the members of the family barely had time to make their escape, being unable to save anything in the way of furniture or household goods. The house and outbuildings were completely destroyed, but the barn and granaries were saved through hard work on the part of the members of the family and the assistance of neighbors, who immediately hurried to the scene to aid in fighting the fire. The home and its contents were a complete loss, as no insurance was carried.

NEW WITNESSES ARE HEARD IN SHEPHERD CASE

at the license bureau.
She testified Shepherd previously had told her he had been married on what he believed to be his death bed. As she testified Shepherd leaned forward and conformed frequently with Robert Stoll, his law partner.

Mrs. Shepherd watched Miss Pope intently, occasionally turning to smile at one of the three young women who accompanied Mrs. Shepherd to court.

Court adjourned until tomorrow with Miss Pope's story incomplete.

CHICAGO, June 15.—Three weeks and three days were required to select a jury for the murder trial of William Darling Shepherd, but only half of that time may be needed actually to present the case to the jurors.

Statement that the state's case against the foster father of William Nelson McClintock, would be in the hands of the jury by early next week, were made by officials of the state's attorney's office as they were prepared to place the state's chief witness on the stand.

Miss Isabelle Pope, who obtained a marriage license to marry young McClintock while he was on his death bed, was expected to take the stand today.

One of the witnesses depended upon by the state to identify William Darling Shepherd as having displayed interest in bacteriology and introduction of typhoid germs into a human body prior to the death of William Nelson McClintock, for which Shepherd is on trial for murder, waived in his identification today. Dr. Amante Rongetti gazed upon Shepherd, side, front and rear as he was paraded before the witness stand and agreed that the 225-pound, iron-gray haired, white-faced, 50-year-old dronkard was not of the appearance of the sliver, 159-pound, dark young man he previously had said came to his hospital.

Dr. Rongetti admitted also that he had denied that Shepherd ever visited him, and that when a friend had warned him he should not, with the kind of business he was engaged in, get mixed up in the Shepherd murder trial, he had said he thought it better to be on the side of the state's attorney. "As a matter of fact, nobody ever came to my institution and asked about a course in bacteriology and typhoid, and all you have said here is false!" William Scott Stewart, chief of defense counsel asked the witness.

Dr. Rongetti would not agree that the attorney had correctly summarized the situation, although he did admit, in answering another question, that he had discussed hanging front in the murder trial for $500.

BOY MAKES ESCAPE FROM CITY JAIL

Angus Newton, the 14-year old runaway son of Mrs. H. D. Johnson of Portland, escaped yesterday afternoon from the city jail, but was retaken within a short time. The boy was picked up Friday night, the second time that he has been captured here upon his runaway excursions. His mother wired that she was ill and unable to come for him, but asked that he be held until she could arrange to have him returned to his home.

Yesterday afternoon someone working about the City Hall left a 2 x 4 timber standing near the cell window. The boy climbed over the window, which is quite high, and reaching through pulled in the timber, and using it as a lever pried two of the bars apart sufficiently to permit him to squeeze through.
Officers noticed his absence a short time later and started a search for him, finding him hiding near the railroad trestle south of town.

SUN HALO THIS MORNING ATTRACTS MUCH ATTENTION

Roseburg people were today treated to a wonderful exhibition of sun halo, a natural phenomenon quite frequent in the middle west, but of infrequent occurrence to such a marked degree on the coast. In addition to the heavy, black cirrus, surrounded by a bright halo, there was further out a bright rainbow, while on the opposite side, there was a reflected segment of almost pure white, the ends of this latter circle cutting into the main halo.
Sun halos have been the subject of much scientific study, and although their cause has been well established there is much which science is still unable to explain.
An unusual amount of moisture at high altitudes is the general cause, according to Wm. Bell, meteorologist. This moisture is frozen, and the bright rays of the sun on the minute frozen particles results in a halo, varying in intensity according to the amount of moisture.

Certain combinations of weather conditions result in the moisture reaching higher altitudes than ordinary, which brings about the sun halo.

700 ARE KILLED BY CANTONESE TROOPS

Feng Saturday and received here today said the situation was extremely serious and that all foreign residents were leaving Kai-Feng.

SHANGHAI, June 15.—Messages received here today said six hundred foreigners, mostly women and children, residing at the famous missionary at Mout Kiang, overlooking Kiangang, were menaced, following outbreaks in the Kiangang where the British concession was invaded and the British and Japanese consulates were attacked.

Other buildings, including the branch bank of Taiwan, were looted and burned by striking mobs.

A wireless dispatch from Kiangang said the authorities were co-operating in measures of defense for foreigners and have sent 100 selected troops to Kuling. The wireless added the belief that there is no reason to feel anxious for the safety of the foreigners.

The mission bodies have made representations to the consulates of the necessity of dispatching war craft of sufficient strength to send landing parties to guard the removal of the Kuling population through Kiangang, the gateway of Kuling.

Two American destroyers and a British gunboat have arrived at Kiangang, supplementing a Japanese gunboat already there.
