DENVER ROTARIANS HURL SNOWBALLS

(Associated Press Local Wire.)

CLEVELAND, June 17.—The Denver delegation... the convention of the Rotary International today by snowballing every one in sight with snow brought from the Rockies in a refrigerator car.

The snow ball battle was held in a public square in support of Denver's slogan "sunshine and snowballs, Denver 1926." The Colorado city will entertain the Rotarians next year.

Nomination of candidates for president, treasurer and seven directors was the principal business before the delegates.

The leading candidates to succeed President Everett W. Hill, Oklahoma City, were Donald A. Adams, New Haven, Conn., and Paul H. King, Detroit, first vice-president and director respectively. The election is tomorrow.

"Boys" was the principal topic of today's speaker. Canon William Thompson Elcott of the Liverpool, England, cathedral, was the first speaker. He was followed by Hart I. Seely, chairman of the International committee on boys work; Charles R. Gardner, Omaha, and Bishop Charles Meade of the Methodist Episcopal church, Denver.

The main issue in the world today is not the amount of money on deposit or the raw material passing through mills, but the boys and girls. Bishop Meade declared: "As the boy of today becomes the man of tomorrow, the problem of giving to the boy a right start becomes the most important problem of the time."

"It is infinitely better for society to expend $50 for a boy in properly supervised recreational and character building programs in clubs than to maintain him at the expense of $600 a year in

PAVEMENT OPENED.

SCOPE SAYS BIBLE AND EVOLUTION DO NOT SHOW CONFLICT

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., June 17.—"I am a Christian and I believe the Bible is divinely inspired and that Jesus Christ did exist," said John T. Scopes, the Rhea county teacher, who is to be tried July 10 at Dayton on a charge of violating the law against the teaching of evolution in the county schools, in explaining his position to newspapermen. The professor added that he believed man was evolved from a lower order of animal and that the story of the creation as told in the Bible does not conflict with science, pointing out that when God said he created man in his own image and likeness, he did not say in what material form. Speaking of the application made yesterday by Professor Scopes for his place back in Rhea county high school as science teacher, Superintendent Walter White said he did not recommend anyone as a teacher in the Rhea county schools who was not a fundamentalist. F. E. Robinson, chairman of the school board, said the board would not make any action on the application until after the trial.

STATE TO URGE CALLING FAIMAN FOR BOTH SIDES

usual at the Shenber-McClintock home, and that Shenber appeared as the usual father of an ill son would, Shepherd expressed anxiety over the boy's condition, she testified. Miss Hall testified also that Miss Isabelle Pope, fiancée of "Billy," who testified yesterday and Monday, was excluded from the sick room in the final stages of the youth's illness upon orders of the doctors. The nurse admitted that in the presence of treatment of the youth she administered hydrochloric injections, thereby accounting for three punctures in young McClinton's arm noted in the post-mortem examination December 24, 1924, after he had been dead 29 days. Albert M. Allen, a court reporter, was introduced to identify a statement Shenber made to George E. Gorman, first assistant state attorney, when he hurried back from a vacation trip to Albuquerque, N. M., last December when the investigation of young McClinton's death was launched. Robert E. Crowe, state attorney participated in the trial for the first time during the day when he read the statement to the jury. The statement covered about two hundred and fifty typewritten pages. Mr. Crowe's voice gave out and Mr. Gorman took up the task. The reading had not been completed at 12:30 p. m., when court recessed until 2 p. m. After the long statement was finished, Prosecutor Crowe read a statement made by the defendant after Faiman had confessed, in it Shenber denied that he knew O'Brien or that he near had visited Faiman's National at Oshkosh, Wis., at which Faiman said Shenber studied and obtained a license. John Maxwell, former employee of Faiman, was the next witness. Marchand gave the first direct evidence against Shepherd. "Prior to this year, did you ever know Shepherd?" asked Prosecutor Crowe. "Yes, he wrote a letter to Dr. Faiman's physician and I went to him in a downtown office," replied Marchand. He was unable, however, to describe the letter, or to say in what office he had visited Shepherd. "But you saw Shepherd?" asked Crowe. "Yes," replied Marchand. His tongue slipped after he failed to tell Shenber's course he would not have been in the room about the matter after he saw Shepherd's picture in the paper and read how he was accused of murder. Judge Olson was the chief figure in the investigation of "Billy" McClinton's death. Upon cross-examination by W. O'Brien, Marchand admitted he did not know when or where he was born, couldn't remember any detail of the appearance of the letter in which he said he saw Shenber. He admitted some ill feeling against Faiman over unpaid commissions. Marchand admitted he had been promised $10 a week from the state while in custody of the state attorney at a downtown hotel since last March more than he had earned under Faiman. He also admitted that he had remarked that recovery of a letter such as he said Shenber had written inquiring about a course in dental pathology was worth $100,000, but denied that he had contemplated any such sale. "Do you see Jones?" O'Brien suddenly asked Marchand. "Do I look like it?" Marchand came back. "Yes," returned O'Brien. But the matter was not pursued. "You were instrumental in getting Faiman to identify Shepherd?" asked O'Brien. "Yes," replied Marchand. Marchand admitted that Faiman never had informed him that he had seen Shepherd. Marchand testified his correct name was McCann, but he would

UNIVERSITY GRADS PETITION AGAINST DEMOTION OF HOWE

PORTLAND, June 17.—Alumni of the University of Oregon, who were inspired in having Fred Howe restored to the head of the English department of the university from which he was recently demoted by the board of regents, have announced that they will continue to press a petition to the board for a reconsideration of the case, says the Portland Telegram today. Mr. and Mrs. Clarence E. Ash, Mrs. Jane Alexander, Mr. and Mrs. R. Burns Powell, Charles W. Robinson of Astoria and others, are named as signing the petition. "A few years ago," continues the Telegram story, "when retirement of Professor F. G. Young, head of the economics department, and Dean Straub, was contemplated by the regents, a group of alumni was rallied by supporters of Young and Straub and through their strong representation the impending action of the board was not taken. "In the effort of alumni interested in the Howe case, the leaders of the group that had conducted the fight to retain Young and Straub when retirement impended brought together a meeting and pledged many of the alumni to uphold the regents in their demotion of Howe. "Friends of Professor Howe, many of whom stood with Young in his fight, are strongly stirred by this action."

PRESENT METHODS OF HANDLING CRIME PREDICTED TO PASS

(Associated Press Local Wire.)

DENVER, Col., June 17.—The passing of the present methods of handling crime through either criminal courts for adults or juvenile courts for children was predicted as a future change in society by Judge Ben C. Lindsey, nationally known juvenile jurist of Denver, in an address today before the National Conference of Social Workers. "These courts will be supplanted by institutions of human welfare," he declared. "Neither juries nor judges at present are educated or equipped to deal with problems of children's delinquency or adult crimes," Judge Lindsey said. "And this work will be done by skilled specialists who have been trained in psychology, biology and sociology through institutions of human relations and welfare."

Criminals and delinquents will be divided into three classes, Judge Lindsey predicted, the most dangerous class to society being found among the "super-intelligent" or those who are clever enough to cheat and rob and dodge the law. The second class will be "the dullards," who are too stupid to know they are doing wrong, and easily caught by the authorities, and third and least dangerous group, the feeble minded who will be investigated by the psychiatrists and isolated from society in institutions more like hospitals than prisons.
