WILL HOLD GRADE CROSSING HEARING AT KLAMATH FALLS.

Paul Farrens, attorney for the Southern Pacific railroad company, and J. M. Devers, state highway commission attorney, and Edward Ostrander and Thomas P. Campbell, of the Public Service Commission, were visitors in the city over night. They returned from a hearing at Marshfield, where the state highway commission petitioned the elimination of a grade crossing. They left this morning for Klamath Falls, where they will hold a grade crossing hearing involving the Natron cut-off road. The party was accompanied from here by O. F. Morris, of the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads.

MALE QUARTETTE TO BE AT BAPTIST CHURCH

The Immanuel Male Quartette and Saxophone Club, of Los Angeles, will give a concert at the First Baptist Church next Tuesday evening, June 23rd at 8:00. They are said to be an extraordinary combination of musicians. It is not often that extra good male quartette music can be heard in cities the size of ours, and this is considered a real privilege. James Whitcomb Brougher says that they are the best quartette ever on the Temple Church platform.

The public is cordially invited to this concert. There will be no admission charge, but a free will offering will be taken.

Studebaker costs less per pound than butter.

BEND WEATHER WARM

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

BEND, Ore., June 18.—Yesterday was the warmest day of this season, the mercury reaching 83 during the afternoon, according to the government weather observer. The temperature dropped to 42 during the night. The previous high mark for the year was 81 on May 5.

Glenna's Ready for Britishers

Glenna Collett, former national champion woman golfer, now in England awaiting the opening of the women's tourney there, apparently is in her best form. Her play since her arrival there has been brilliant. In a recent foresome with Joyce Wethered one of her opponents Miss Collett had no cause to be ashamed of her play as compared to Miss Wethered's.

BANQUET WILL BE HELD AT METHODIST CHURCH ON TUESDAY

A full attendance of the membership of the Chamber of Commerce is desired for the get-acquainted banquet to be held at the M. E. Church on Tuesday, June 23, at 6:30 o'clock, for the purpose of allowing the people of Roseburg to become acquainted with Mr. and Mrs. L. Antles. Mr. Antles is the new secretary for the local Chamber of Commerce. The banquet is open to all members of the chamber and their wives, and to any other of the city's residents. A fine meal is promised, and the committee on entertainment has arranged a good program consisting of instrumental and vocal music together with several excellent talks.

THEATRES

MAJESTIC.

Scoring an emphatic hit savoring of a triumph, Paramount's picturization of Bret Harte's famous story, "Salomy Jane," was cordially indorsed by large audiences at the Majestic theatre yesterday.

It seems like carrying coals to Newcastle to tell the story of" Salomy Jane's Kiss," upon which the picture is based. Salomy Jane is a delightful mountain character as portrayed by Jacqueline Logan. When the stage, driven by Yuba Bill, a part excellently personated by George Fawcett, is robbed and the stranger (Maurice Flynn) is arrested for the crime, the action becomes tense and spirited.

There are night rides galore, and many beautiful spots in the redwood forests of the Santa Cruz mountains are pictured with restful effect. From the standpoint of artistic photography alone, the picture is well worth seeing, for many of the shots of mountain scenery are majestic and lovely. But the story—it's as full of thrill as an egg is of meat. It deals with life in Red Dog, a California town in the days of gold, but unlike most western thrillers, its treatment is far from being trite and commonplace.

ANTLERS.

An old Sacramento steamboat, a stern wheeler of the type used on the river 75 years ago, was secured, refitted and put in shape for use in "The Devil's Cargo," Victor Flemming's newest production for Paramount which opens Friday at the Antlers theater.

The boat was found by Flemming's representatives in San Francisco. They were told that had it been considered worth while the boat would have been converted into firewood years ago. Considerable carpentry, a great deal of work on the wood burning engine and much painting put the craft into order again.

The story, dealing with the activities of the vigilantes in the early California gold days, was written by Charles Whittaker under the title, "The River Boat," and adapted to the screen by A. P. Younger.

LIBERTY THEATRE.

Many many months have elapsed since we enjoyed anything so immensely at "Silent Sanderson", Harry Carey's latest Hunt Stromberg production, which has its first showing at the Liberty Theatre tomorrow and Saturday.

It's an impelling story, having most of its action in the frozen North. As a great-hearted Westerner who seeks forgetfulness in the gold country when his life is broken by a woman, Carey gives the finest performance we've ever seen him give—and we've probably seen everything he's done in the past.

It deserves the lion's share of credit for novelty in plot and incident. Its thrills are daring and vastly impressive. These consist, notably, of a blinding blizzard in the Yukon that tosses men about at will; an attack by a band of sly, blood-thirsty wolves, who tear a man to pieces before your eyes; several spine-tingling fist fights with the despicable villain on the receiving end; and a drought in the cattle country that kills the kine by the thousands, leaving their sprawling, mewling young to perish at their sides. The scenes in the Yukon barroom, we thought perfectly drawn—the vulgar dancing girls in their tawdry finery, the bestial men, the bitter brawls are so entirely convincing that the audience actually shuddered, gasped and exclaimed aloud as the tide of the story ebbed and flowed.

A BRIDE'S DIARY

A Love Story of Today

By Idah McGlone Gibson

Cleo Madison, entertaining friends, reads from her grandmother's quaint, modest diary. The flapper friends are thunderstruck at its quaintness and suppressed desires. When the girls leave, Cleo plans her elopement with Paul Armstrong, U. S. A., a boyhood sweetheart. None the less, she indulges in a petting party with Chick Adams that evening. Chick is wealthy and Cleo's parents wish her to marry him; so does Chick. Paul's parents, also social climbers who have lost their money, with Paul to marry Connie Terhune, very rich and in love with Paul. Despite these desires of the parents and Cleo's wonderings as to whether she really does love Paul, the two are married. Almost immediately Cleo begins to learn that marriage is not altogether a path of roses. However, the parents are reconciled to the marriage and the young couple depart for the army post, to which Paul is assigned. On the train Cleo has an allegorical dream which indicates the problems she will have to face. When the newlyweds arrive at the post, Paul is assigned to duty at once and leaves Cleo, who knows nothing of housekeeping, to shift for herself during the day. Johnson, a "striker" detailed to Paul's quarters, helps out enormously so Cleo is able to serve tea when Col. Beldon, the commanding officer, comes to pay his respects. This colonel is a thoroughbred louse and has compromised Rita Thorndike, wife of a no-good lieutenant. Rita however, is innocent. Cleo and Rita become great friends quickly. Cleo overhears the colonel and Rita talking and thus has "the inside dope" on the whole affair.

After the colonel's dinner, Rita is invited to lunch by Cleo.

When Rita arrived everything is helter-skelter.

At the luncheon, Rita lays bare her soul.

HOW LOVE WILTED

"Then Bill was sent to this post about six months after we were married and my mother went to Europe, where she has been ever since," Rita Thorndike said, continuing her story. "With the exception of a few picture post cards I haven't heard from my mother for over .. year." I must have looked very surprised when Rita told me this for she said, "Oh, I know, Cleo, neither you nor anyone else would believe me if I told how my mother has treated me.

"Just before I was married she told me that she had never wanted me in the first place. As soon as my father died, when I was five years old, she sent me to a convent and I stayed there until I was over 15. I can tell you this, Cleo, because we are of the generation which does not take things for granted and we decline to be hypocritical, even about our mothers. I am sure you know as well as I that there are as many mothers that consider their children nuisances as there are wives that dislike their husbands.

"We women of this day will not hit our heads against a stone wall and, while the blood is running down our faces and blinding our eyes, keep on insisting there is no wall there. We are at least sincere, sometimes with a sincerity which shocks our mothers. But I'm not going to philisophize or preach. The time is almost past for me to do that. I have reached the point where I do not analyze. I do not care particularly. I just live from day to day.

"When I came to this post, Cleo, all the women were much older than I, but not one of them took it upon herself to extend a helping hand to me. Instead, they criticized me and disapproved of me from the first. I had never been taught to do housework and Bill had no other income than his pay. Even while I was in the convent where most of the girls were required to do a certain task each day, I was let off because I showed some real musical talent."

"Oh, can you play the piano, Rita?" I interrupted. "I love it better than any other instrument. I must come over to your house and listen.

"I'm sorry, Cleo, but I have no piano."

"What do you mean, no piano?" I asked stupidly. "You certainly must have had one at your mother's house. Surely she didn't take it to Europe with her."

"No, mother did give me the piano, but Bill would not pay for having it sent down and it is in storage."

"Well, Rita, that can be remedied. We'll telegraph to the storage company and have it sent down immediately."

"That's lovely of you, Cleo, but please don't do it until you have heard the rest of my story."

"I know what you are going to say. I couldn't help overhearing you and Col. Beldon last night. I didn't mean to be an eavesdropper, but I thought it would embarrass you more if I came out from my shadowy corner than if I sat still and I assure you, Rita, that I haven't even spoken of it to Paul and I don't intend to. I know that you do not expect your husband back. I know that you are already thinking of ways and means to get away from here."

"Cleo, I'm glad you were there. I'm glad I don't have to tell you. I don't expect Bill back. I know that he is going to try to get as much money away from Col. Beldon as he can and then try to resign from the army. Of course I can't stay here after it is known that he is gone. But I must tell you a little of my first stay in this place. I want to show you some of the things that led up to that conversation that you overheard last night.

"When I first came here, Col. Blakely was kindness itself to me. I think he felt sorry for me. He saw that I was very unhappy, and like a great many other selfish men, he doesn't like to see unhappiness about him, for it makes him uncomfortable. Col. Blakely Beldon was the first person that had been kind to me since I left the convent. My husband learned on our wedding day that my income had stopped with my marriage, and he has never even been fairly decent since he learned that fact.

"You can see how charming Col. Blakely can be. Is it strange that I gave him all my regards? All my trust and faith? Is it strange that I accepted his attentions until the whole post was agog with gossip and scandal? Of course I was the last one to hear this and then it was told to me by my husband in the vilest possible way."

LOOK OUT FOR SELF POISONING

Neglect of the liver results in self-poisoning! Not so quickly, perhaps, but just as surely as if you drank poison out of a bottle. If your liver is not doing its work of helping digestion, eliminating waste from the bowels and purifying the blood, you will always be troubled with sick headaches, nausea, biliousness, bad breath, gas, sour stomach, or constipation.

Cleanse and tone your liver! Put your system in condition so you feel your very best again! Try just a spoonful of Dr. H. S. Thacher's excellent Liver and Blood Syrup after the next few meals and notice the quick improvement in the way you eat, sleep, look and feel—the return of strength, vigor and energy. You will be completely satisfied; otherwise there will be no cost. Dr. Thacher's Liver and Blood Syrup is sold and recommended by Nathan Fullerton, Roseburg, Ore. Drain Pharmacy, Drain, Oregon.
