ROSEBURG, OREGON, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 24, 1925.

SOUNDING THE PROPER KEYNOTE

Mr. L. Antles, the new secretary of the Roseburg Chamber of Commerce, sounded an inviting and hopeful keynote at a dinner given in his honor last evening under the direction of the local chamber, when he stated that it would be his purpose to "make Roseburg a better place to live."

There could be no greater or more encouraging edict to the people of Roseburg than the foregoing statement. It sounds like good, common, business-like sense. It is getting away from the high-power stuff that usually falls to publicity managers. It is a hopeful solution of the many ills falling to communities the size of Roseburg. And the new secretary's application could well be applied, not only to Roseburg, but the county at large, and judging from further remarks made this will be his purpose.

Getting away from the circus-like propaganda of "roping" people and man-handling newcomers to locate in Douglas county whose means are of only meagre proportions—picturing a future of untold possibilities that cannot be capitalized without a certain amount of wealth—is not conducive to a well-balanced and prosperous community. It is not good business—either for Roseburg or those invited to locate in our midst. True, this county is crowded with possibilities for men of means, thrift and energy, and is a wonderful and most inviting section of the state from the standpoint of climate. It cannot be surpassed in this respect. But if it is to prosper and grow there are many important factors entering into that formation, paramount among which is to "make Roseburg a better place to live."

This can be accomplished only by concerted effort on the part of the Chamber of Commerce, other clubs and various civic organizations co-operating. There is much to be done to make Roseburg a better place in which to live. It should have a children's playground, a city park and several other important acquisitions. Wholesome outdoor amusements should be encouraged and provided for the benefit of our young people if Roseburg is to be made a better place to cast your lot. In fact, there's much that can be accomplished for this beautiful little city without the least interference to the regular program of the chamber as a general information bureau and guide to tourists and others passing through the city.

"Making Roseburg a better place to live"—encouraging men of means to locate in the county—bringing small factories to create payrolls is our greatest need at this particular moment. This can all be accomplished by concerted effort on the part of our citizens and the city and county will grow and prosper in a substantial and beneficial way and all our people will be thrifty, contented and happy.

Mr. Antles has offered a good, sensible suggestion. We are glad to welcome him to Roseburg and hope he will receive the deserved encouragement and co-operation in his worthy undertaking.

The fact excited some notice, that when 250,000 people slept in New York city parks during the recent hot spell, the police did not have to make any arrests, and no trees or shrubs were damaged. This however, may not have been due so much to respect for law, as the fact that they were too tired by the heat to disobey the rules. Which reminds one of the Sunday school boy, who although usually disobedient, was very quiet one Sunday. His teacher complimented his father on his improved behavior, who however was forced to acknowledge that it was probably because the boy and gone on a 20 mile hike the day before, and was too tired to cut up. Much of the misbehavior of the world would be stopped, if people were given plenty of scope for activity, and kept just tired enough so that the spirit of mischief would not seize them. Boys with a good playground on which they can work off their high spirits, are not likely to get into trouble.

The city of Kelso, in the state of Washington, is in a terrible muddle. An editor has been killed by unknown hands and a deposed mayor wants to come back and "sit on the job." No particulars regarding the desires of the city cop has so far been revealed, but he's probably lurking about in a vain attempt to solve the murder mystery, for which information Cowlitz county will spend some five thousand dollars.

Let's make it a regular year for progress in Roseburg—substantial and lasting. The city is enjoying a splendid growth. Never before has such pride been shown in the general upkeep of private homes and business houses. Strike while the fervor is at its highest pitch and keep hammering until the spirit permeates every nook and corner of our beautiful city.

In this day and age you find a goodly number of young men wishing to enter the business world—seeking employment in various channels that they might mould their future. But, in making their wants known the real issue with most of them is salary and wages. Service and efficiency seem never to enter their craniums.

"Hang Shepherd," is the state's plea. According to information now at hand we gladly add a second to the suggestion.

The fellow that "goes over the top" these days uses his head, hands and feet.

There's nothing new in Portland but a new convention.

REDWOOD PLANTING TO BE ATTEMPTED BY CALIFORNIA CITY

CROCKETT, Cal., June 24.—Within three years hillside of this famous sugar city will be covered with sequoia gigantea, if plans of George M. Rolph, general manager of the California and Hawaiian Sugar Refining corporation, materialize.

For Rolph has launched the greatest "city beautiful" campaign in the history of Western cities, and that his dream will materialize is assured by the fact that the program has been placed in direct charge of the company's chief gardener, L. G. Macchi.

Macchi, regarded by Luther Burbank and others as being a horticultural wizard, is preparing to plant several hundred young sequoia gigantea in a plot of ground owned by the sugar refinery. A corps of gardeners, under Macchi's direction, are now busy preparing the soil. Macchi declared yesterday that in three years the trees will have obtained a sufficient growth to permit of their being replanted in any part of Crockett.

"In 10 years I expect the trees to be six feet in height," said Macchi. "I am conservative in that prediction, however, because eight years ago I planted a sequoia gigantea and today it has reached eight and a half feet. In order to find the proper space for the trees to flourish, I am adding a half-acre to the C. and H. nursery."

Tree lovers are watching the Crockett program with interest, for when the redwoods are once planted, this city can boast that it is the only community in the world that has the redwood growing on its hills. The tree grows naturally only in a narrow strip of Humboldt county, Cal.

Today, in the hills of Crockett, the principal shrub is pittosporum. It will not be disturbed, Macchi said, when his other trees are planted. The floral beauty of Crockett has won for it the title—the "City of Blooms."

ROAD COMMITTEE WILL MAKE TRIP TO VIEW PROJECT

A special road committee of the chamber of commerce, appointed to investigate the various road projects before the county has made a report that it believes the complete of the North Umpqua section of the Umpqua highway, and the Tiller-Trail cut-off road to be the two main road projects within the national forest now demanding attention in the county. It is planned to work out a systematic program of effort to secure the completion of these important roads, and the committee is of the opinion that before adopting a definite program of work that a trip should be made to obtain first hand information. Consequently it has been proposed to organize a party to make a trip over the routes and inspect the roads with a view of outlining a definite policy and then place plans and request before the highway commission, bureau of public roads, and other bodies having the work in charge.

WEATHERS INCREASES FOREST FIRE DANGER

OLYMPIA, Wash., June 24.—With an east wind prevailing and with the humidity of the air sinking towards the danger mark, state forestry officials this morning expressed fear that the day might see serious developments in the forest fire situation unless logging operators exercised extreme vigilance, especially where slashing fires are under way. The department of forestry has ordered the railroad companies to put on speeder patrols in all the forested areas, it was announced by T. S. Goodyear, assistant supervisor of forestry.

POLITICAL PULL BE DISREGARDED IN PROHI CHANGE

WASHINGTON, June 24.—State and local political influences are to be shoved aside in filling new administrative posts in the prohibition enforcement organization, it was indicated today at the treasury, where Assistant Secretary Andrews was busy on plans for the new regime. It was freely predicted that the assistant secretaries would fill many of the 22 divisional administrative posts in continental United States with men from districts other than those in which they will serve.

Congressional influence in the past has weighed heavily in the selection of federal directors for staves and in the selection of many other subordinate officials and the treasury has not been satisfied with some of the men thus named.

Mr. Andrews said today he would not retain men whose integrity has been questioned and who did not measure up as producers of results. The whole list of present officials will be gone over before the new system goes into operation August first, to determine how many of them will be asked to stay.

To obtain the type of administrators he seeks, the assistant secretary has asked Comptroller General Carl for a rating on the salary question. It is understood he intends to pay as high as $10,000 annually for some of the posts.

THEATRES

LIBERTY THEATRE. Many a film has been spoiled by poor photography or directing and this ruined the effect of a very excellent story. Take for instance "A Fool and His Money", which will be shown at the Liberty Theatre tomorrow and Friday.

Erle Kenton directed this picture and he got the most out of George Barr McCutcheon's story. These seemingly important little bits of business play a very important part in the success of the picture and these are very often entirely up to the director.

William Haines as the young writer is perfect in every way. The character things he has to do may not be done prominently so as to offset the character itself. Madge Bellamy as the young countess is most appealingly pretty and overcomes the styness of a young man afraid to declare himself. Stuart Holmes is as villainous and as boorish as ever. The Prussian twist that he wears on his moustache lends more than an air of verity to his playing. Charles Conklin as the faithful servant of the hero puts a delicate comedy touch that cannot but delight the most particular of audiences.

MAJESTIC THEATRE.

Many familiar places in New York city that have been made famous by newspaper articles and words of fiction have been made available to the screen for the first time in Victor Hugo Halperin's "Greater Than Marriage," which will be shown at Majestic theatre tonight and Thursday. Among these are the interior of the Grand Central Terminal, showing the De Witt Clinton, the first train to run over the New York Central tracks; the interior of one of New York's famous playhouses, giving a view of one of the typical first night audiences; a famous inn near the city; Fifth avenue; Riverside Drive and the Great White Way with its myriad of colored lights, flashing messages in the night sky. These have been reproduced in their natural colors. The cast is headed by Marjorie Daw and Lou Tellegen.

ANTLERS THEATRE.

The lengths to which the producers of high grade motion pictures go to secure realism is strikingly demonstrated by "Omar the Tentmaker," a First National attraction starring Guy Bates Post, which is coming to the Antlers theatre tonight.

Richard Walton Tully, the author and producer of this photoplay, spent three years in the actual writing of it, but before that he had read everything written by or about Omar Khayyam, and had spent a considerable period in Persia, absorbing "local color."

For this production he imported a large quantity of costumes and furnishings from Persia and engaged a Persian expert to supervise the settings in order that no incongruity spoil the effect.

The star himself was required to read Omar's literary output in order to fit himself to portray the part with the proper touch and feeling.

These are but a few of the precautions taken by Mr. Tully to insure a production free from flaws or imperfections.

FOREIGN TRADE OF U. S. SURPASSES PREVIOUS RECORDS

(Associated Press Special Wire.) SEATTLE, June 24.—While the foreign trade of the United States last year passed all previous records in volume, this year gives promise of exceeding it, James A. Farrell, president of the United States Steel corporation, told the national foreign trade convention today. Mr. Farrell also is chairman of the national foreign trade council.

The volume of American exports and imports for the calendar year 1924, Mr. Farrell said, was $3,160,000 long tons and the aggregate value was more than $8,200,000,000. To give an idea of the magnitude of the volume he said that if the tonnage could be handled in a day through any one port it would require a 50-car freight train every seven minutes during the entire 24 hours to clear the docks.

"The figures for our foreign trade for 1924," the speaker continued, "represent a growth of production, and enterprise in the United States that is cause for satisfaction. It was very nearly double that for 1913, the last year before the war, whether measured by value or by quantity. The war stimulated activities and injected an element of violent fluctuations, with a period of apparent, but fictitious, increase, from which I think it is safe to say, we have now recovered, so that the growth shown in the last three years may be compared, with reason, to the development during the 10-year period prior to the war."

Mr. Farrell expressed the view that the foreign trade trend was favorable and steadily upward, but that there are bound to be fluctuations which will affect, more or less seriously, various factors of it. Generally speaking, he said, we have the productive capacity in this country to enable us to maintain a considerably larger overseas commerce than we now enjoy, which is one of the chief factors influencing us toward foreign trade.

PEACE ON OCEAN DEPENDS ON NEWS ASSERTS MERCHANT

(Associated Press Special Wire.) SEATTLE, June 24.—If peace on the Pacific ocean is to be preserved, there must be absolute communication across that ocean, particularly for news reports, so that full knowledge may be had on each side of events and opinions of the other. V. S. McClatchy of Sacramento told the 12th annual convention of the National Foreign Trade Council here today. McClatchy is chairman of a special committee of the Pacific Foreign Trade Council.

Reliable daily news reports, he said, can be maintained only when facilities in speedy transmission are offered at lowered rate for use by independent news associations. In an address on "selling America abroad," Frederick J. Koster, a prominent San Francisco business man declared that in the future was involved "the whole question of world leadership." "America," he said, "with her great population, her enormous wealth and the energy of her people, their inventive genius which stops at no obstacles, however great, living under a system of government devoted to the theory of liberating that energy and providing for the equality of opportunity which enables every citizen to develop to the utmost his capacity, should know no limitation in the contribution she can make to the progress of the world."

Then we should sell America abroad, because it is good business. It is good morals, and because of America's position, it is an inescapable obligation.
