MOUNTAIN SLIDE DAMS RIVER AND FORMS NEW LAKE

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)
CHEYENNE, Wyo., June 25.—Western Wyoming today has a new and rapidly growing mountain lake, according to reports received here last night which said that a great mountain of rocks forming one side of a canon on the Gros Ventre river in the heart of the Teton National Forest toppled from its base and across the stream. A section of the national forest was smashed to kindling, many buildings were lost and several herds of cattle were swept away as the result, according to the message.

The phenomenon was reported in a message received here from J. R. Jones, manager of the telephone exchange at Jackson, Wyo. Jackson is about 16 miles from the scene, according to the report.

Mr. Jones reported that the fall of the mountain had formed a huge dam across the river and that it would impound a body of water probably hundreds of feet deep because of the sharp declivities on both sides of the river. In five minutes, according to a report received by Mr. Jones from a horseman, the water rose 200 feet in the canon. It was estimated that the stream will swell into a lake seven miles long and a mile wide before the water rises to the point where it will spill over the obstruction. Several tourists parties were held up because of the occurrence, but no one is in danger the report added.

Dresser's as to was $6.75 at Powell's.

GREECE HAS GREAT PROBLEM IN CARING FOR ITS REFUGEES

"If Roseburg suddenly found itself confronted with the task of providing for 1,500 refugees, mostly old men, old women and children, we would have some understanding of the task which faced Greece on a national scale when the multitudes flocked in there from Turkey," states J. J. Handsaker, northwest regional director of Near East relief. "Today 28 per cent of the people of Greece are refugees. Greece is spending more money on solving the refugee problem than on all the rest of her governmental enterprises together and is spending more than the American and British relief agencies combined."

The people who found themselves flung on the shores of Greece like driftwood are some of the hardest stock of Europe and against unutterable odds, a million of them have climbed back to still support. A half-million are still homeless and for these and for the children in the orphanages, contributions of money and clothing are being asked.

"Perhaps the most encouraging feature of the Near East relief today," states Mr. Handsaker, "is the fact that the people are as anxious to help themselves as we are to be relieved of the burden of helping them; and now that the children are out of Turkey, with no more massacres possible, we see no reason why three or four years more should not see the end of our work. All we are trying to do is to furnish clothing for the worst cases among the refugees, to handle the clothing in such a way as to keep from pauperizing the people and to care for the children until they are able to support themselves which they do at the age of 16."

As long as thousands of children are hungry in the Greek camps, and other thousands would perish from hunger if our orphanages were closed, we dare not relax our efforts.

Handsaker was accompanied by Rev. M. B. Paroungian, who spoke in several Roseburg churches on Sunday and who has remained to assist Mrs. W. A. Smick, Douglas county clothing chairman, in plans for a Near East Relief Bazaar Day, Tuesday, June 30.

Antlers Theatre.
"Sally," in which First National is starring Colleen Moore, at the Antlers Theatre, is a film adaptation of one of the most successful musical comedies ever staged.

It was an original Ziegfeld hit, with Marilyn Miller as its star, for more than seventy weeks on Broadway; then it took to the road, scoring long runs in Chicago, Boston and Philadelphia, and eventually toured the entire country. It also played one solid year in London.

During its stage life "Sally" is credited with having earned more than $4,000,000 gross receipts for the producers. It was written by Guy Bolton and Jerome Kern, and after First National bought the rights at a starting price for Colleen Moore, Jane Mathis, noted for her adaptation of "The Four Horsemen" and "Blood and Sand," was chosen to transform "Sally" into picture form.

As "Sally," Miss Moore has one of the most entrancing roles of her film career. Leon Errol, noted Broadway comedian, and Lloyd Hughes head the big supporting cast.

OIL AND RHUBARB.
Fall got the money. He carried it away in the little black satchel. Ninety-nine per cent of the American people know it. But the Cheyenne judge isn't convinced. Sinclair got the oil lands. They belonged to the American people. But Sinclair has them, and, so far as the Cheyenne judge is concerned, will keep them. At Oakland, Oregon, will remain open July 4th. Dinner and supper each 75 cents a plate.

Broom was one of his bondsmen at first, put up a bank cashier's check for that amount.

Broom was under $7000 bail in the circuit court a short time ago but one of his bondsmen withdrew and he was locked up in jail again. When cash bail is put up the amount is usually cut in half.

While Broom was fortunate in getting out of jail again, he lost his motion for a change of venue and also to quash the indictments against him, filed a few days ago by his attorney, Paul C. Donahue. Judge Shipworth overruled both these motions and set July 6 as the date for Broom's trial.

BAPTISTS, ATTENTION!
The Baptists will hold an all-day picnic at Lindbloom's grove, 3 miles east of Ixionville, on Friday, June 26. All members of the vacation Bible school, their parents and all members of the Sunday school and their parents and all members of the church and all of their friends are invited.

The people from Glide, Riddle, and Ixionville and the community east of Roseburg are especially urged to send as large delegations as possible.

A ball game and other games, a big community dinner at noon and a general good time.

There is no water deep enough for swimming, so feel safe to let the kiddies come.

Everybody bring your dinner and we'll all eat together. Trucks and cars will be furnished to carry the kiddies and those who haven't a way to go.

SCOUT SWIMMING SCHOOL TO BE HELD MONDAY EVENING

The Scout school has been postponed to next Monday, June 29. Besides helping scouts out in the tests in which they are behind, swimming will be taught.

The first instruction in swimming will be given at the arena, Monday afternoon. The executive, who has charge of this work, says that the most important thing about swimming is correct breathing. Most anyone, especially a boy who has the natural coordination can get the strokes and kicks, but unless he can breathe correctly while in the water, he is handicapped regardless of strength or endurance. All boys should learn to swim and here is a chance to get it early and at no cost. It is likely that the scouts will swim either just above the old dam or up at Sand Island. It is objectionable to swim at Mosier street because of the sewer which empties just above there. There is great danger of typhoid germs being picked up below sewers.

GLIDE MAKES PLANS FOR CELEBRATION TO BE HELD ON JULY 4

The Glide Fourth of July celebration will be held in the cedar grove near the Little river bridge at Glide. A fine swimming pool is being equipped for water baseball and other aquatic sports and the courses have been laid out for the horseshoe pitching contest for the championship of the Umpqua valley.

The celebration will be in the nature of an old-time picnic. Tables will be provided in the beautiful cedar grove for picnic diners.

In the evening and at night there will be dancing at the Glide Grange hall.

Farmers are all busy cutting hay this warm weather.

Mr. and Mrs. John Burge are visiting with their children in Corvallis.

Watt Osborn and John C. Moser are busy setting broccolis.

C. F. Watson made a trip to Roseburg the first of the week.

John Atterbury and family attended church at Glide last Sunday. They have recently returned from California where they have resided for two years or more.

A BRIDE'S DIARY

A Love Story of Today
By Idaho McGlone Gibson

Cleo Madison, entertaining friends, reads from her grandmother's quaint, modest diary. The napper friends are thunderstruck at its quaintness and suppressed desires. When the girls leave, Cleo plans her elopement with Paul Armstrong, U. S. A., a boyhood sweetheart. None the less, she indulges in a party with Chick Adams that evening. Chick is wealthy and Cleo's parents wish her to marry him; so does Chick. Paul's parents, also social climbers who have lost their money, wish Paul to marry Miss Terhune, very rich and in love with him. Despite these desires of the parents and Cleo's wonderings as to whether she really does love Paul, the two are married. Almost immediately Cleo begins to learn that marriage is not altogether a path of roses. However, the parents are reconciled to the marriage and the young couple depart for the army post, to which Paul is assigned. On the train Cleo has an allegorical dream which indicates the problems she will have to face. When the newweds arrive at the post, Paul is assigned to duty at once and leaves Cleo, who knows nothing of housekeeping, to shift for herself during the day. Johnson, a "striker" detailed to Paul's quarters, helps out enormously so Cleo is able to serve tea when Col. Paul comes to pay his respects. The colonel, a "lady killer," has become involved in compromising circumstances with Rita Thurndike, whom Cleo likes immediately. Rita is absolutely innocent, but is having a hard time of it, especially as her husband is a no-good roller. Cleo learns all about Rita and things rapidly draw toward a crisis.

Rita decides to flee and is aided by Cleo.

This move presents difficulties, but the girls decide to "carry on."

Johnson, the striker aids them subtly.

A FLASH TO THE PAST.
"I am sorry, very sorry," Rita repeated, "that you have made an enemy of the Major's wife. She can make it very disagreeable for you."

"If she can't stop in being nasty she will have to go home. While you get to Pasadena you will meet my dearest friend 'Conde Terhune.' Ask her what she thinks of me. She's had more run-ins with me than anyone I've ever known and I think I always came out on top. Are you sure that everything is ready?"

"Yes, dear, two large suitcases and wardrobe trunk in my bedroom. Everything is packed in my toilet articles and night clothes. I have a very large handbag into which I can put what I need and as I have often carried it in town, no one will be suspicious of that if they happen to see us leaving. Oh, Cleo, I feel as though there is really a God who looks after us, otherwise my mother would have been sent here just at this time."

"Yes, dear, I expect that Paul put it into Paul's mind that he could no longer live without me, just so we would get here in time, to fix this thing all up. It wasn't to gratify the great law of nature, but to save your soul from hell, or your body from—"

"Stop, Cleo. Don't be flippant about it. It means too much to me. It is really the one great splendid thing that has ever happened to me. It has made me see that there are some unselfish good people in this world."

"If you mean me, I can but better not make a remark like that in Pasadena before any of my gang. I warn you, I'm known here. Ask Connie Terhune about it. Get what she knows of my unselfishness. Why, I took Paul away from her."

Even Rita smiled at that, but I could see that she was almost at the breaking point. "Come on," I said imperiously. "Let's go over to your house and get things shaped up and bring the boys back here. Johnson will be along late this afternoon for them. While you're there you can change your dress, for traveling."

When returned I got out grandmother's diary, for I knew that we would have to wait until Johnson came and I didn't want Rita to worry any more than necessary or think you didn't about what she was going to do. She might get cold feet.

"There is no sense in reading you the first part of it, my dear, but I will explain by telling the grandmother really thought that no woman could love without respecting the man she married."

"Paul's things, she both loved and respected Thomas when she married him—Thomas was her husband's name, you know. She believed that Thomas loved her and perhaps he did. I like to think that love, but I am a little dubious of it, for I've seen that burial plot where my grandfather serenely sleeps with the graves of two women on either side of him, each one marked 'Beloved Wife of Thomas Madison.'"

"My grandmother lived with him longest and she bore him ten children in the ten years that she died when my mother was born. All my mother's brothers and sisters died before she married and her step-brothers and sisters are distributed over the earth for Grandfather Thomas Madison had three other wives. Each bore him six children. I don't even know how many of these are alive now for my mother quarreled with them over the property my grandfather left and I have no knowledge of the man my grandmother married except what I have learned from this diary."

"I'm quite sure you will say it is not very complimentary, Rita. Man haven't changed as much as women in the last three generations. That's what makes it so hard for us. Men still think they're lords of creation and we are their bounden slaves."

"Although my sainted grandmother tried to make herself believe she loved the man she married until the last, I am sure you will see that she played the hypocrite with herself for she knew the tradition of the 'celibacy-vine' was a lie pure and simple. Listen to this, dear:

Today I have been married eight months and although I have suspected it, I am only sure now that I am going to have a baby. I know I am very wicked and that I ought to realize that if God thinks me worthy of being a mother, I should be very happy. But, oh! I am only seventeen years old and I do not want a baby quite yet. I want to be young and free from care and responsibility. I should think that God would have understood this and let me be just as I am for a little while longer.

THEATRE AMERICANIZED TO MEET DEMAND OF PATRONS

LOS ANGELES, June 25.—A revolution in the presentation of Oriental dramas by the invasion of western customs has been noted at a Chinese theatre here. An American jazz orchestra has replaced an aggregation of native stringed instruments and Chinese girls are chosen to play feminine roles in preference to male superlatives.

The little theatre on the fringe of Chinatown offers a further innovation pointed by western influence by the installation of real scenery, backdrops and wings, to relieve the strain on the Americanized Oriental imagination, formerly occasioned by the lack of "atmosphere."

Managers of the Chinese playhouses explain that the innovations are necessary since the younger generation of Chinese familiar with American methods of staging productions, demand a stimulation of the orient's mind by the method of presentation.

PRISON TO BE HOME OF ART.
REVAL, June 25.—The old prison tower, referred to in popular parlance as "Big Margarete," and used as a state prison under former Russian governments, is to be converted into a home for artists. It will have a number of studios and exhibition rooms and living quarters for a number of Estonian painters and sculptors.

"DUBS" MULKEY ANSWERS SUIT FOR $10,000 DAMAGES

"Dubs" Mulkey, former Sutherland prizefighter, now constable of the independence—Stamouth district, has filed in the circuit court at Dallas an answer to the suit against him for $10,000 damages for alleged personal injuries to Mrs. Pugh. The suit was the outcome of an altercation at Mrs. Pugh's home, where Mulkey had taken a prisoner temporarily.

Mulkey declares any injuries sustained by Mrs. Pugh were brought about by her attempt to prevent the recapture of Walter Godsey, who attempted to break away from Mulkey who had taken him in custody on a larceny by ballot charge. Mulkey's answer declares Mrs. Pugh attempted to hold him after Godsey broke away and that he freed himself after ordering her to let go.
