POULTRYMEN WAR ON RATS WITH AID OF POISON GAS

TACOMA, June 28.—Plans are now being laid for a gas attack on the rats that are causing poultrymen of western Washington a loss of thousands of dollars a year. The United States biological survey, the experiment station of the State College of Agriculture and the poultrymen, through their association, are cooperating in the warfare.

The method of attack will be to force calcium cyanide into the rat burrows under building floors and foundations. The calcium cyanide coming into contact with the moisture of the air, forms hydrocyanic acid gas, in a concentration of which no animal can live.

Recently a demonstration of this gas was held on a poultry farm near here under the supervision of Dr. Leo K. Couch of the biological survey. On this farm were four buildings housing 3,500 hens and made as nearly rat proof as possible. Rats, however, had burrowed under the cement floors and foundations and through the concrete itself, causing a loss in grain and poultry estimated at $1,000 a year.

The calcium cyanide was pumped into the burrows, and 163 dead rats were taken out. These are believed to be only a part of those killed.

KING OF ENGLAND ADOPTS AMERICAN STYLE GLASSES

LONDON, June 29.—Conservative English people are adopting American ideas and habits to a greater extent than the average Englishman cares openly to admit. The most recent case of King George wearing big tortoise shell glasses has been followed by several English hostesses in fashionable London, following the example of a prominent American who entertained 60 couples to dinner at small tables, while a cabaret entertainment of the most expensive and up-to-date nature went on.

Evening parties with music are now comparatively rare events, and although some of the more important of London's hostesses are trying to introduce them, the American idea of a cabaret dinner is likely to outstrip them, and people generally welcome the novelty.

As some of the society chroniclers say, "What would London do without its American hostesses in these days?"

WRESTLING BOUT AT OAKLAND ON 4TH TO BE GOOD MATCH

"Sailor Jack" Woods, the Texas grappler who is to meet Paul Amort, local wrestler, in a handicap match at Oakland on July 4, is expected to arrive here from Portland Wednesday, according to the announcement of Charles H. Clough, who is promoting the event. Woods has been wrestling all comers in the light-heavyweight class in the northwest since his invasion of that territory three months ago, and has defeated all of them except Billy Edwards, to whom he lost a three-fall tussle after holding him even in a previous match. He is in first class condition and therefore capable of giving the spectators of his coming battle the best there is in him.

Amort is training faithfully for the bout and will step on the mat in first class shape. It will be his first appearance on the canvas since his memorable defeat of Cowboy Ray at a carnival show in this city last month. Woods also beat the Cowboy later on, but it took him longer to do it, notwithstanding the fact that he outweighs Amort by about 12 pounds. If this circumstance can be accepted as an accurate gauge of the comparative ability of the two men, Woods faces a practically impossible task in an effort to down Amort twice within an hour, as he has agreed to do. However, the handicap is one to his expressed satisfaction and it's up to him to go the limit. Woods returns to Portland after his bout with Amort to meet Ted Thye, the title holder of his class, on July 5.

It is within the range of possibilities, of course, for Amort to pin Woods to the mat. If he does, Amort will probably be matched against Thye in the near future. Promoter Clough is endeavoring to secure a return match for Amort against Ralph Hand, who tossed the local man a few months ago with a "crab" hold at a point in the struggle when Amort appeared to be on the verge of victory. Amort's admirers are ready to gamble that he will defeat Hand if they ever meet again. Such a match would prove a great drawing card.

Preliminary to the Amort-Woods bout on July 4th, there will be a 20-minute wrestling match between two local lightweights, Smith and Hilliard, and a 3-round boxing fray between Roberts and Zachary, local heavyweights.

BOY SCOUT CAMP OFFERS VALUABLE SUMMER VACATION

"A summer in Scout Camp would be a great adventure for your boy," says E. A. Britton, Douglas county scout executive. "A boy is of scout age only a short while. To fill his summers with adventures and experiences in Scout Camp is to give him in later life a treasure chest of memories that will forever be a source of great pleasure to him. Your boy will come back from camp better physically, mentally and morally for having been. Camp will make his back straight, his eyes clear and his voice happy. He will spend the entire time in useful activities under the leadership of men of high character and in the company of boys who are clean physically, mentally and morally. The exercise, regular hours, plenty of sleep, fresh air and well prepared food will build his body; the instruction in wood-craft, camp craft and scout craft will benefit his mind. He will learn self control, self-reliance, respect for the rights of others, punctuality and initiative; he will benefit spiritually and morally from the life in camp by the example of the leaders and the other boys. There will be plenty of high adventure to give zest and thrill to the camp. There will be plenty of work to develop his usefulness. There will be instruction in Scout craft to carry him on up the ladder toward the rank of Eagle Scout.

"The Wolf Creek camp is the camp for your boys. Those men of this community who are responsible for the management of this camp want you to visit it often, and will appreciate all of your suggestions. They wish to do for your boy in this camp all that you would have them do for him. They are making sure regarding food, sanitation, safety and many other important items which make for a successful camp. They hope to satisfy parents to the fullest extent so that they (the parents) can gratify that desire on the part of every normal boy to get out into the woods with a real gang, to sleep in the open under canvas, to throw off the restraint and convention of modern city life, but retain all respect and modesty by sending him to Wolf Creek camp. The Scout officials will deem it a privilege to assist in giving your boy the time of his life."

MacMILLAN WILL MAKE RADIO TESTS IN THE FAR NORTH

CHICAGO, June 29—As broad as the field for scientific discovery on the present MacMillan Navy Arctic expedition is the field for radio experiments. Of outstanding importance to the radio world will be the results of new low wave transmitting and receiving.

The latest engineering design in low wave apparatus is represented in the radio equipment carried by the Peary, installed by John L. Reinartz, radio operator, and chief engineer of the Zenith Radio Corporation. Its work has been proven in laboratory and was developed exclusively for Arctic use as the result of experiences gained on McMillan's last trip, when radio was first introduced in that region.

The radio lay-out includes four transmitters, three of which are set up on the boat. They are of 20, 40, 80 and 180 meters. The 180 meter transmitter was taken chiefly to prove that it will not operate in daylight. Reinartz said, although it works successfully by night. A single transmitter of four k. w., capable of sending on 20, 40, 80 and up to 600 meters, is one of the Peary's mouthpieces.

When this country is in darkness, the transmitting will be done on 40 meters. While in daylight, 20 meter wave lenght will be used. The 80 meter transmitter has been set up especially for experimental purposes. Eugene F. McDonald, radio chief, felt certain that communication would be established in all zones of the expedition, as his Chicago station had been able to hear code from Glasgow, Scotland, and New Zealand in the daytime with this equipment.

Messages and news to and from families of members of the party will be sent every Wednesday night from the Zenith station. Reinartz pointed out that the public will be unable to hear the messages, however, because no standard instrument is able to pick up the low wave length upon which the messages will be broadcast.

As the expedition proceeds up the coast, the sending time from the ships will be as follows:

12 to 3 a. m., E. S. T.
6 to 9 a. m., E. S. T.
12 to 3 p. m., E. S. T.
6 to 9 p. m., E. S. T.

The schedule which gives the best response will then be used, probably 6 to 9 p. m.

A BRIDE'S DIARY

A Love Story of Today

By Idah McGlone Gibson

Cleo Madison, entertaining friends, reads from her grandmother's quaint, modest diary. The flapper friends are thunderstruck at its quaintness and suppressed desires. When the girls leave, Cleo plans her elopement with Paul Armstrong, U. S. A., a boyhood sweetheart. None the less, she indulges in a petting party with Chick Adams that evening. Chick is wealthy and Cleo's parents wish her to marry him; so does Chick. Paul's parents, also social climbers who have lost their money, with Paul to marry Connie Terhune, very rich and in love with Paul. Despite these desires of the parents and Cleo's wonderings as to whether she really does love Paul, the two are married. Almost immediately Cleo begins to learn that marriage is not altogether a path of roses. However, the parents are reconciled to the marriage and the young couple depart for the army post, to which Paul is assigned. On the train Cleo has an allegorical dream which indicates the problems she will have to face. When the newlyweds arrive at the post, Paul is assigned to duty at once and leaves Cleo, who knows nothing of housekeeping, to shift for herself during the day. Johnson, a "striker" detailed to Paul's quarters, helps out enormously so Cleo is able to serve tea when Col. Beldon, the commanding officer, comes to pay his respects. The colonel, a "lady killer", has become involved in compromising circumstances with Rita Thorndike, whom Cleo likes immediately. Rita is absolutely innocent, but is having a hard time of it, especially as her husband is a no-good rotter. Cleo learns all about Rita and things rapidly draw toward a crisis. Such a crisis that Rita leaves the post, secretly to join a vaudeville troupe, a job which Cleo gets for her. Rita assumes the name of Rheda Thorwaldson. The post is agog with gossip and wondering.

A BRISTLING BREAKFAST

I sat looking at Paul for a long while and I wondered what there was about being married that made it so hard for two people to think alike on any subject. Before I was married, if Paul had taken a little too much liquor, it didn't worry me in the least. I rather laughed at him and enjoyed his silly cracks, but now as I looked at him sprawled out on the floor my whole soul was filled with disgust.

It seemed to me as I sat there that before we were married Paul and I had always agreed on every subject. Now we were as far apart as possible on everything and anything. Was my dream coming true? I asked myself. It looked as though Paul and I would have a very busy time cutting of those old tentacles, especially the one called misunderstanding.

I thought over every discussion we had gotten into since we were married and I found I couldn't possibly see anything from Paul's poin of view and he seemed to have the same astigmatic trouble when he looked in my direction.

With this in mind I must have gone to sleep for when I opened my eyes the light was streaming in the windows. I got up off of the sofa, where I had dropped to sleep, and took a cold shower and then went down into the kitchen. As I opened the windows I got more and more angry at the thought of Paul's staying out as late as he did and coming in drunk. I had so wanted to tell him all about Rita. There were a thousand questions I had wanted to ask him and above all I think my pride was hurt because he so completely forgot all about me for almost 24 hours.

I had not seen him since breakfast the day before. He had not known whether I had anything to eat or not. He had not even asked me how I had spent the day when he came in. In my self-pity I forgot that I was a grown woman and that I really ought to go hungry if I couldn't get myself some food.

However, I think the thing that made me most furious was that whenever, in my nervousness, I got out of my bed during the night to look through the window, shining straight into my eyes was the little winking light in Colonel's quarters.

I wondered why I did not keep Paul awake the night before even though I had had to douse his head with cold water just to tell him how I felt. I knew that if we had not been married, nothing could have kept him from me. A tear rolled down my cheek as I thought that I was now an old novel that had just been thrown into a corner when Paul became interested in something he thought might be more thrilling, a story of adventure with men. There I must lay in my corner until he came back to read me again if he still had sufficient interest to do so.

I made the coffee in the percolator just as Rita had taught me and I toasted myself a piece of bread, as I knew that Johnson would not be around for quite a while. As I drank my coffee and ate my toast, I found, to my surprise, that they were both good, better than I usually had at home. It was not such a hardship to make a cup of coffee and some gold-brown toast.

However, nothing could brighten my spirits. I was facing—and it almost looked as though I were facing alone—the great responsibility of married life.

Again I grew angry with Paul. I determined to go and wake him up and I smiled to myself at the notion as I poured him out a cup of coffee and buttered him a piece of toast.

Paul turned to me a very cross face as I shook him. "What do you want?" he groaned.

"I've brought you your coffee and toast." My husband made a wry face. "I couldn't eat a mouthful. Give me the coffee. Is Johnson here?"

"No, it is early yet."

"Why did you wake me?"

"Because I wanted to talk to you."

"Well you could certainly have waited for a while couldn't you?"

"No, I couldn't wait another minute."

"Why didn't you say what you had to say when I came home last night?"

"Because you were too drunk to understand. You seemed to have had a very nice time."

"I did. They are a great bunch of fellows, but they certainly play a stiff game of poker," he added rather ruefully. "However, things will even up. You know that always happens in the long run when a little group plays regularly."

That remark was like shaking a red rag at a bull. "Oh so, this is to be a regular affair, is it?" I inquired.

"Why, of course, Cleo. You ought to know how little recreation there it at an army post. I do not know what the men would do if there wasn't always a poker game to help out. The officers have one every week. I felt quite complimented when they invited me."

"So it's your intention to stay out one night every week, is it?" I asked him in a low tense voice. I was so angry, I could hardly speak.

FISHING SCHOONER WRECKED; 15 DEAD

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

GLOUCESTER, Mass., June 29.—Fifteen men were drowned and nine other members of the crew of the fishing schooner Rex, of this port, rescued when the boat was sunk in a collision with the Cunard Anchor Line steamer Tuscania, 200 miles east of Halifax yesterday.

Beyond the meagre message received by the ship's owners from the Anchor Line, reporting the disaster, no word has come to amplify the details.

The Tuscania, which struck the little fishing craft during a fog, reported herself standing by, searching for possible survivors and bodies. The master of the sunken vessel, Thomas Downey, of Lowell, was picked up dead.

CHINESE SENTENCED TO LONG TERMS FOR KEEPING SLAVE PEN

SHANGHAI, June 29. — Thirteen boys, some of whom have been imprisoned in a filthy, airless sweat shop for six years, were identified and claimed by parents in the French Mixed Court here recently. The lucky youngsters were a part of a group of 31 rescued by the French police.

The identification came as an interlude in the trial of Yu Pa-Hong, proprietor of a workshop, accused, together with his wife, concubine, amah and three other accomplices, of maintaining a slave pen in which the children in question worked from early morning until midnight, underfed, beaten and never allowed to see the light of day except such as filtered through a small barred window.

Tales of torture for insufficient industry, attempted revolt or inability to labor on account of illness were told by the waifs in a manner to bring tears to the eyes of listeners. Many of the children were stolen from their parents and sold to Yu for $5 each. Others were hired out as apprentices by parents little mindful of their fate. They were employed in making brass articles, glassware and matches which Yu disposed of in a store on Seward road. Three or four died as a result of harsh treatment, the court was told.

Yu was given a jail term of 15 years to be followed by expulsion from the concession. His wife received a ten year sentence, and Yu Ching-dong, an accomplice who assisted in kidnapping, got a similar term. The concubine and amah, who appeared to have befriended the boys on all possible ooccasions, were released. The store and workshop were ordered sold to defray the cost of trial and to pay for maintenance of the unclaimed children.
