MORE ABOUT CALIFORNIA EARTHQUAKE

house had been cut down by the quake.

Landslides Reported

Ranchers coming into the city this morning reported heavy landslides across the highway fifteen miles north of here in the direction of Paradise Camp in the Santa Ynez Valley. They said, however, that no other damage had occurred in that section.

In this territory is the Gibraltar dam, source of Santa Barbara's water supply, which early reports said yesterday had been demolished, but which was found later to be intact.

Recover Seven Bodies

The total of bodies recovered this morning from the ruins stood at seven. They were:

Mrs. Charles E. Perkins, Burlington, Iowa.
Bertram B. Hancock, Los Angeles.
Dr. James C. Angle, Santa Barbara.
William Proctor, Santa Barbara.
Merced Leon, Santa Barbara.
Penthius Storlor, Santa Barbara.

Services for Mrs. Perkins will be held here today. The body will be sent to Rosedale Cemetery, Los Angeles, where it will be cremated.

Another victim was added to the fatality list today when the mission fallgaps reported the death of John Shea, gardener at St. Anthony's college, adjoining the mission.

He was crushed in the corridor of the college chapel yesterday. He was buried today. This brings the total known dead to eight.

Citizens Optimistic

State Street, the main artery of the torn and twisted business district, presented a desolate appearance that threw into bold relief the optimism of the men and women who owned the wrecked stores.

In front of one shop lay what was left of a small automobile. Blocks of stone weighing 400 or 500 pounds each had crushed it flat and in their fall had ground out the life of William Proctor, window cleaner, who had driven up to his early morning job when the first tremor came.

Across the way stood a five ton truck, one of the burly giants of the highways shattered under a similar avalanche of stone, brick and mortar.

Big Water Tank Falls.

In the crumpled ruins of the exclusive Hotel Arlington, the mace of world travelers for years, the fall of a tank containing 60,000 gallons of water had swept to their deaths Mrs. Charles E. Perkins, aged millionaire widow of Burlington, Idaho, and Bertram B. Hancock, son of G. Allen Hancock, wealthy Los Angeles realty dealer. The latter escaped with three broken ribs and some scalp wounds, after falling and sliding three stories to the ground from the room beside that in which his son met his death.

Fire Building in Ruins.

The San Marcos Building, recently finished and held to be one of the finest structures in the city, was a paradox of stability and ruin. The center caved in when the earth waves struck the community. The wings stood, apparently intact but close survey showed them to be badly cracked and twisted. The brand new California Hotel, recently of 100 rooms completed within the week was a total wreck. The roof had collapsed in several places and throughout its entire height one corner had been ripped bare, exposing the beds as they stood prepared for guests, careening at a dizzy angle and threatening at any moment to slide out into the brick littered street.

New Hotel is Wrecked.

Another comparatively new hotel, the Carrillo, two large wings of filled concrete construction was badly shaken in its two lowest floors, but above that the walls seemed to be good as new. The interior furnishings, however, all showed the mark of the tremor. Here and there throughout the downtown section, the pavement bulged and cracked, while in some locations it had been slashed and chopped into fragments a foot square by the grinding force of the successive tremors.

In the older and less pretentious residential district the earthquake had played queer pranks with the wooden homes built a quarter and half of a century ago.

One sagged crazily in front, its gable hanging two feet nearer the road than its foundation posts. Another had buckled in the middle and peered at the passing world through bay windows which until yesterday had been sheltered from the summer sun by an old-fashioned veranda.

Immediately next door was a little home of two stories which looked much wicker in build than its neighbor, but here not a bit of damage had been done except to the chimney cap, which had been catapulted into a bed of roses.

Home Tracts Flooded.

Torrents from broken water mains had rushed through a number of home tracts, burying garages and sidewalks under a layer of mud several inches thick.

Nowhere or in very rare instances, did the men, women and children of Santa Barbara spend last night within doors. Many whose homes were wrecked, were forced to bed down in the open under the segment moon. The remainder slept on their lawns from choice not knowing when a fresh earth tremor might bring their ceilings down about their ears.

No Serious Fires.

Two facts stood out from many striking features in this city today. One was the continued determined calm with which its citizens faced their destiny and their duty, and the other was the absence of any serious fire, which in earthquakes elsewhere had added to the horrors of stricken communities.

Early today the leading bankers and business men of Santa Barbara plan to meet in general session and outline the reconstruction. Last night they started the program by raising $10,500 in ten minutes at a hastily summoned assembly to finance the clearing away of the wreckage.

New Death List.

SANTA BARBARA, Cal., June 30.—The official death list issued here at 10 o'clock this morning took account only of bodies recovered from the ruins and tallied nine. They were:

Mrs. Charles E. Perkins, Burlington, Iowa.
Bertram B. Hancock, Los Angeles.
Dr. James C. Angle, Santa Barbara.
William Proctor, Santa Barbara.
Merced Leon, Santa Barbara.
Penthius Storlor, Santa Barbara.
Maralaina Mienestide, Santa Barbara.
John Shea, Santa Barbara.
Herrado Chris, Santa Barbara.

Start Reconstruction

SANTA BARBARA, Cal., June 30.—Defiant in the face of disaster which gripped their fair city on the Pacific's shores during the last 24 hours and left many of the beautiful homes and business blocks in earthquake ruins, the residents of Santa Barbara today began a program of reconstruction with the indomitable, cheerful spirit of pioneers in a virgin land.

Tearing Down Walls

Up and down the fourteen blocks of State Street, the principal thoroughfare which was laid waste by yesterday's earth tremor, the sounds of industry held away. The rehabilitation tune was that of gaunt, jagged walls crashed to the street by the wreckers to make way for the approaching builders, the clatter and buzz of hammer and saw, and the roar of motor trucks coupled with the shouts of teamsters carting away the debris.

Businesses Reopened

Grocery stores, produce houses and other business enterprises whose shells had remained intact, reopened their doors today with confidence.

From them the residents were returning to their homes, for the most part deserted for open lawns, with arms laden with provisions. The best of shopkeepers with patron was in evidence everywhere.

At the homes, the housewives prepared to return the furniture to the house whence it had been removed to the lawn at the first tremor. Everywhere the husband busted himself with hammer and saw to restore the family abode to its former self. The musical scrape of the mason's trowel was also heard in the rebuilding of chimneys and fire places throughout the city.

All businesses reopened in temporary quarters.

Cripple is Fortuniate

Fortune smiled with beaming sun on J. W. George, crippled veteran of many quakes. He owns a small frame fruit stand on the edge of the stricken area. As he hobbled about to dispense his wares today he was glad the quake didn't get the two upper stories" of the six foot stand.

SHOW GIRL IS DEAD

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)
LITTLE ROCK, Ark., June 30.—Miss Mary McMahon, a veteran of the show world, died at her home here today after a brief illness. She was owner of the McMahon shows and personally directed them. Her only survivor is a brother, J. M. McMahon, Portland, Ore.

Al Smith Prepares for Another Battle With Hostile Legislature

Governor Al Smith (left) is setting the stage for another test of strength with the hostile New York legislature. He has Alexander McDonald (right), state conservation commissioner, sounding out various representatives with a view to ordering a special session to consider his pet bill, which calls for a $15,000,000 bond issue to provide new state parks. "Parks for the People" was one of the governor's slogans in his last campaign.
