ELECTRIC COOKING —less watching

The roast, for instance—first a quick searing to seal in the savory juices, and then a slow cooking heat as in a fireless cooker. That's in the oven.

But over here, something is simmering gently in a saucepan. Another pan is bubbling vigorously at the lid. Tomorrow morning's prunes are stewing leisurely between whiles.

Dinner is being prepared—and it must be watched, too. For each different dish requires a different method, a different heat. One fire will not do for all.

That's one reason why electric ranges, with their instantly regulated and easily controlled cooking temperatures, from a sizzling, searing heat in one place to a just-keep-it-alive glow in another, are so favored by good cooks. Electricity makes good cookery better, and easier.

And that, plus the surprising economy* of electrical cooking, is a reason why nearly one thousand eight hundred kitchens in the territory served by this company are now fuel-less and ash-less. Nearly one thousand eight hundred electric ranges have made them so.

THE CALIFORNIA OREGON POWER COMPANY

THEATRES

Liberty Theatre.
It is seldom that a recognized star of the legitimate stage will condescend to play a role in support of a screen star, but such is the case with the Paul Powell production "Her Market Value," in which Ames Ayres is being starred at the Liberty Theatre, tomorrow and Wednesday.

Taylor Holmes, well known among the "two dollar" class of theatre-goers, is the star who plays the supporting role. Holmes usually makes his home at one of the bright light palaces of Broadway, but occasionally makes a national tour with a play that bears the stamp of New York approval.

His latest starring vehicle is "The Whole Town's Talking," a farce comedy by John Emerson and Anita Loos. This play brought him to the Pacific Coast and he reached Los Angeles just at the time that Powell was making his preparations for "Her Market Value."
