BRYAN MAKES FIRST ARGUMENT

took a seat several feet nearer his son. "The only issue this jury must decide is whether or not John Thomas Scopes violated the law," Mr. Bryan continued. "To permit testimony by experts, would be to substitute a trial by experts for trial by jury."

Among the authorities cited by Mr. Bryan during the course of his brief speech were many decisions by the supreme court of Tennessee. Arthur Garfield Hays responded for the defense. "First," he said, "the prosecution insisted upon the jury's not hearing the law. Now they insist upon its not hearing the facts."

"We admit that Mr. Scopes taught what the state said he taught. Not that he violated the law by doing so. I, for one, must be shown that there is variance between what he taught and the Bible."

"Our scientists are not here to give opinions. They are here to state the facts of science. None of them are paid experts. They come here in the interests of science. Does your honor or anyone else know what evolution is, without hearing the evidence? If your honor says that opinion evidence may not be produced, may not evidence of the facts be introduced?" he continued.

He contended that if Mr. Scopes had taught that man was descended from a lower order of animals, since both man and monkey were classified in the same order of animals as primates, under the law anything was relevant as evidence that tended to throw light upon the subject in question. The defense attorney asked that they be allowed to show what evolution is and what the Bible is. "Even if on no other ground," he argued, "this evidence should be admitted as information for the court."

During Mr. Hays' argument, Judge Raulston questioned the attorney as to his understanding of Mr. White's testimony yesterday in regard to the expiration of a contract authorizing text books. John R. Neal interposed to say that the contract had been expired, but no substitute had been provided, leaving the books in full force.

W. J. Bryan spoke in the case for the second time, rising to suggest that the passage of the statute prohibiting the teaching of evolution theories suspended all text books in conflict with the law.

Another bit of side play came up when Mr. Hays spoke of "Mr. Bryan" suggesting that perhaps he should say, "The distinguished leader of the prosecution."

The court said that William Jennings Bryan, Sr., had not yet made an argument in the case and anything he might have said outside the court room would not be heard.

competent discussion in argument. Mr. Bryan called attention to the fact that he was not the leader of the prosecution, but merely associate counsel and that Attorney-General Stewart was in charge of the state's case. Mr. Stewart announced that he "bowed" to Mr. Bryan. Mr. Hays resumed and the argument went on.

Mr. Bryan, from Los Angeles, when he began his speech spoke in such a low tone that he was requested at intervals by counsel for the judge to raise his voice. His tones gradually became more audible as he "warmed up."

The entrance had been closed and no more spectators were admitted. The room was less crowded than all former days, although every seat was occupied. "Speak up, Mr. Bryan," Mr. Darrow suggested to the young attorney.

The spectators rose up and took a seventh lining stretch as Mr. Bryan finished his argument and the court declared a brief recess. The Los Angeles lawyer was congratulated by his associates.

(Associated Press Local Wire.) COURT ROOM, Dayton, Tenn., July 16.—The state of Tennessee made a formal motion at the trial of John T. Scopes today to exclude testimony of scientists from the trial of the case.

William Jennings Bryan, Jr., opened the argument for the state. He was followed by Arthur Hays for the defense with Attorney-General Stewart closing the statement.

DAMAGE SUIT HEARD.

A verdict for defendant was returned late this afternoon in the suit of K. A. Karlson against H. E. Krueger. This was a suit growing out of an automobile collision near Rice Hill, in which both drivers claimed to be in the right. Krueger, after being sued for damages, brought a counter suit, and the jury found in his favor in the sum of $1 and decided that each man should pay his own court costs. The case was tried before Justice Jones, Attorney Compton appearing for Karlson and Attorney Eddy for the defendant.
