ROSEBURG, OREGON, SATURDAY, JULY 18, 1925.

SIMPLE HABITS

The board of bishops of the Methodist church has issued a statement to the members of that organization, in which they ask these people to forego habits of luxurious personal expenditure.

This suggestion will be warmly applauded by the mass of the people. It is of course easy for those who have but little money, to suggest to the wealthy that they should omit extravagant expenditure. If one had been very successful in business and had always had money, it might not be so easy to cut off these costly habits.

However, the bishops who have started this proposal have a good idea. Not much happiness is gained by the people who spend lavishly and extravagantly on themselves. If they would take the same money and use it in works of kindness and beneficence, the gratitude and friendships they would create would be worth more than any luxuries.

Ida Tarbell, the noted writer, speaking at Vassar college some days ago, advised those who have literary aspirations that newspaper training would be useful to them. She thought that they must not think so much at first of the money reward, but must perfect themselves in some specialty so that their opinion would carry weight. Anyone who works for a good newspaper and conforms to its rules and makes a success of that work, has received a boost toward higher achievements. Newspaper work makes people alert to see what is going on about them. They become keen observers of people and manners, and have a fairly clear idea what people will do as a result of given conditions. That is a habit of character that is very useful in business, and it makes people practical and able to estimate currents of human thought accurately.

A representative in the Florida legislature has introduced a resolve by the terms of which anyone who called any woman a "flapper," would be considered to have made a reference against the dignity of the state. It is noticeable that a good many young women resent being called flappers. Dignified and charming young women, whose conduct is above reproach, are often blamed for frivolous acts of friskier girls. A young person should not be considered a flapper merely because she is young and pretty. Her ideas of behavior may be of the highest. But there remains a flapper type, who are rightly compared to young birds who are learning to fly. They make themselves conspicuous without accomplishing charm, much like a young bird which has not yet learned how to use its wings.

Foreign Situation Drags Secretary of State From Home Golf Links

This is where the telegram that summoned the secretary of state, Frank B. Kellogg, to the summer White House at Swampscott, Mass., found him: on his home golf course at St. Paul, Minn. He is now busy with the treaty which it is hoped will end an end to the present trouble in China.

STATE PRESS COMMENT

NEWSPAPER MEN

Oregon newspaper men meet in their gathering at Grants base tomorrow.
 Many of them will be "country editors," as common usage has seen fit to style those who produce the home town paper. The story is told that one of them retired with $50,000, after 30 years in the harness. He explained his retirement on a competence thus:
 "I attribute my ability to retire with $50,000 to the fact that I worked very hard and saved every cent—and to the death of an uncle who left me $49,995.50."

The incident describes the "country editor" that was. As his efforts for the community have become better understood, as the columns and columns of free boosts for the home folks and the home people have come to be better appreciated, as his incessant work to build up and better all home enterprises has come to be recognized as the general utilitarian value of the home town paper has come to be fully realized, the "country editor" has developed into a leader, a figure, a factor, an agent, a prosperous unit in the community.
 And he deserves the changed status, for in other days no man gave more to and got less from the community than the tolling owner of the home paper.—Portland Journal.

Finally Settled?

The state constitution is plain enough in disqualifying any person charged with official duties in one department of the government from exercising any of the functions of another department of government. The supreme court has decided, too, that this provision of the constitution means just what it says.
 But the governor appointed two state senators, who as such are charged with legislative duties, to become members of the fish commission, where they would be called upon to exercise administrative functions.

On reading of the constitution and the decision of the supreme court was not enough to convince either senator that the constitution really meant that they were disqualified. So the attorney-general was called upon for an opinion and he has decided in effect that the supreme court also meant what it said when it said that the constitution meant what it said. If there is any official qualified now to determine whether the attorney-general meant what he said in his opinion, when he said that the supreme court meant what it said, it is the attorney-general himself. The latter testified for her husband in the divorce suit.
 Dr. Case intervened to clear his name and was given a vote of confidence by his parishioners. The divorce was granted by the appellate court and appealed by Dr. Case to the supreme court, where it is now pending.
 The statements attributed to Hartig are not denied by him as being made during the divorce affair. Leland filed a similar suit against another church official also on the committee.

The Idea Grows.

If any had told you, a few years back, that an Irish province would soon pledge itself to prohibition, doubtless you would have blushed him go along with his blarney. Yet the provincial legislature has voted to attempt local option in Ulster. The idea makes headway.
 It must be that folks in Ulster are undismayed by the crafty reports of American prohibition, which in the past has been regarded as a total failure. As for us, here in America, we are not dismayed. Prohibition is far from being completely successful, but the evidences of improvement are all about us. Bad as matters are, with the bootlegger and the drinking prohibitionist, they are infinitely better than the old days of the saloon. And the bootlegger is not necessarily a permanent national character. He works in the dark, like any other lawbreaker, and it grows increasingly difficult for him to secure and market his wares.
 Prohibition in Ulster is but an indication of the trend. Upon the American endeavor, which, contrary to thirty belief, is not to be abandoned, rests the conversion of many countries. The nations that never before asked themselves if drink was a liability are asking that question now. The answer dismays them.—Portland Oregonian.

The Long Haired Goat.

The snow white, long-fiber, marcelled outer coat of the Angora goat, a fiber known in trade as mohair, is said to be the best wearing high class fiber made into any fabric on the face of the earth. For many years mohair has been woven into lining for men's coats, into serviceable dress fabrics and summer suitings. In recent days it is being made into a great variety of woven goods—clothing materials, upholstery and draperies as well as more delicate fabrics of women's wear. Mohair goods, speaking generally, are dependable and lasting. The world is coming to know this, and for this reason the Angora goat is fast coming into his own.
 Not long since a dealer in these animals brought from South Africa, where the Angora goat is cock of the walk, an importation of 117 animals, selling them at auction in a little town in Texas. They brought a total of $24,235, or an average of $202.60 a head. The lowest price was $110 for one animal, and the highest $1100 for one animal. Four of these fine goats came in Oregon.
 The Angora goat will not live and thrive on brush alone, any more than sheep will live and fatten on weeds alone. But brush is one of the items in the fodder bill of an Angora goat, and Oregon has much rough land well adapted to pasture goats. In brushy land where sheep will lose their wool to every trifle brush and thorn, these goats will live the year round.

EDWARDS LOSES TO DERN LAST NIGHT

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)
 PORTLAND, July 18.—Knocked out and carried from the ring for the second time in one week, was the fate of Billy Edwards, Kansas City, who met Ira Dern, Salt Lake in a sensational return wrestling bout last night. They are light heavyweights. After losing the first fall to Edwards on a headlock, Dern, with a body scissors clamped on him, rose to his feet, locked his arms about Edwards' legs and catapulted Edwards backwards onto his back so violently, the latter was knocked cold and had to be carried from the ring.
 Edwards was unable to resume and Dern was awarded the decision. Edwards got a decision over Dern Wednesday night on a foul, when Dern struck Edwards with his clenched fist.

LANE GROWERS ARE HARVESTING WHEAT

EUGENE, Ore., July 18.—Fall sown wheat is being cut in Lane county, the harvesting operations starting this week. The harvest is expected to carry over into next week, and possibly little longer.
 Excessive heat of the past few days has not damaged the wheat to any great extent, as no winds accompanied the hot spell. A slight shriveling has been noticed in some parts, however.
 Spring sown wheat is looking well, and the stands hold every indication of good yields.

KOREAN CITY IS UNDER FLOOD WATER

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)
 TOKYO, July 18.—Dispatches from Korea say a large portion of the city of Seoul is inundated by a flood which caused the Seoul river to overrun its banks.
 A special dispatch received here from Osaka reports that all lines of communication from that city to Korea have been severed and the damage is worse than earlier reports indicated.
 Asahi, a newspaper, says the Seoul power house had been destroyed and the city is in darkness. There are numerous casualties and a large number of refugees are occupying railroad cars and barracks for shelter. Troops are aiding the sufferers. No confirmatory details are available here thus far.

ROOMS ENTERED AND ROBBED BY MAN LOOKING FOR DRUGS

The rooms occupied by Roy Yount in the Perkins building, were robbed on Thursday, articles valued at several hundred dollars being taken. A good description of the man was obtained and the officers are searching for him. He apparently was a transient and a drug addict.
 He secured a watch valued at more than $100 as well as being a keepsake, a gold chain and charm, shirts, hose, baby's bank, and numerous other articles.
 The man was seen prowling about the floor upon which the rooms are located. He was inquiring for a physician, and it was apparent from his condition that he was a drug addict in search of "dope." He went out upon the fire escape, an investigation developed, and forced his way into Dr. Houck's laboratory where he made a search for drugs. Failing to find them there, he apparently concluded that Mr. Yount's quarters adjoining were a part of the laboratory and entered those rooms by way of the transom over the door connecting with Dr. Houck's work-room.
 In getting into the room he stepped on the Victrola and kicked over an expensive tea set and vase, which were prized quite highly. He apparently searched the rooms very thoroughly, taking such articles of value as he could easily hide upon his person. He was later seen in the corridor by one of the young ladies employed on the floor, and she was able to give a good description of him.

CHURCH MISSIONS BOARD SUCCESSFUL

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)
 EUGENE, Ore., July 18.—The national missions board of the Presbyterian church organization, which is composed of seven separate missionary projects, has completed a very successful year, according to the report of the body presented at the Presbyterian synod of Oregon national mission session here. It will be necessary, however, to raise an additional $1,000,000 for this work next year, to cover a deficit of $451,997 of the past year and a similar estimated amount for the coming year, it was reported.

Radio Filters Happiness Into "Sing Sing" Prison Cells

Radio instruments powerful enough to receive a variety of programs are now found in many cells in "Sing Sing," famed New York state penitentiary at Ossining, where modern methods of punishing criminals are being developed. New dormitories (on the hill) are replacing the old cell-blocks (below), and flower beds and pleasant gardens are brightening the gray, grim walls. The inset shows a prisoner "listening to the world."
