LONDON TAILOR'S CLOTHES MAKE THE MAN, HE CLAIMS

LONDON, July 20.—Good news for short men who desire to appear tall was announced recently by a London tailor who says he has conceived a plan to bring about this effect by a new wrinkle in garment cutting and designing. The trick is very simple. The modification is chiefly in the lapels, which are worn very small and rolling shirt. The roll is so short in fact that it finishes on a line with the top button. This adds length to the front of the coat, says the tailor, with the under height that they appear several inches taller.

Another innovation is that the front of the coat, especially in evening clothes, extending to the hip is cut straight. Sleeves in men's wear have become narrower, this change having been made to correspond with the new "cow hee" stiff cuff of the dress shirt which is the latest thing among the best dressed men about London. While there has been a tendency to wear the coat fuller in front, there are still a great many evening tailed coats made which show plenty of the shirt and waistcoat, this being particularly desirable among the older set of men who remain true to the style of other years.

RAILWAYS OF JAPAN SUFFER FROM DECREASED REVENUES

TOKYO, July 20.—Even Japan is having its railway troubles, a statement recently attributed to Vice-Minister of the Railways Aoki shows. Mr. Aoki said that trade depression had caused a decided drop in the railway traffic revenue and that there were many freight cars lying idle. Unless there is a decided improvement in the near future it is feared the situation may seriously affect the budget for the current fiscal year.

During May there was a falling off of 3,259 tons from the normal freight handled. The average freight revenue was 518,180 yen, or 22,743 yen less than for the same period last year.

REINHARDT PLANS AN AMERICAN TRIP WITH NEW PANTOMINE COMPANY

BERLIN, July 20.—The new International Pantomine company founded this spring by Max Reinhardt is to make its debut in Salzburg in August after which an extensive European tour is planned to be followed by an American season.

Associated with Reinhardt for the production of pantomine and ballet are Ernest Matray, Heinz Herald, Hugo Von Hofmannsthal, Dr. Richard Strauss, Dr. Aptel and Arthur Wolff. Reinhardt hopes, it is said, to develop the pantomine along more modern lines, unhampered by old-time subjects and obsolete settings and costumes.

POLES DEDICATE MONUMENT AT LEMBERG TO U. S. HEROES

LEMBERG, Poland, July 20.—The recent dedication of the monument to the three American aviators—Kelly, Graves and MacCulum—members of the famous Kosciuszko squadron who were killed during the war against the Soviets in 1919-1920, developed into a great pro-American demonstration.

The monument represents an American aviator with American and Polish arms in the background, and stands in one of the most picturesque parts of Lemberg cemetery. It was erected from funds contributed by a special committee headed by Mme. Ebenberger, partoness of the famous squadron.

RICH MERCHANT ASKS PUBLIC TO AID HIM SPEND HIS MILLIONS

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

NEW YORK, July 21.—Leopold Schepp, 85-year-old philanthropist, today asked the public for suggestions as the best way he could distribute his millions.

He recently established a foundation with a $2,500,000 trust fund to assist deserving boys. In addition, he has distributed some $3,500,000 in individual donations, lump sum gifts and pensions.

Now he wants to accelerate the distribution of other millions and wants to canvass public philanthropists to determine the way which will afford the quickest and surest relief to those who need and merit help and at the same time, offer some permanent good to society.

Sitting in the office on Hudson street where the headquarters of his cocoanut concern has been located more than sixty years, Mr. Schepp announced his intention to retire absolutely from commerce and to devote his time, attention and money to philanthropy.

"I wish to make philanthropy a study," he said, "and will be glad to entertain any suggestions that can be made on the subject. We are now paying up to $40,000 a month from the foundation's fund, but it is not moving fast enough to suit me, and I want to broaden the scope of the work. Just how to go about it so that the most may be derived by the beneficiaries is the great problem."

Intensely individualistic in his philanthropic work, Mr. Schepp has given his personal attention to the hundreds of cases in which he has extended aid. In the ledgers in which these accounts are kept, appear page after page of items ranging from $50 to several thousands and in each the merchant made his inquiry before determining the amounts. His ambition for the remainder of his life to have some small part in the distribution of his money toward "easing the hurts of those caught between the millstones of life."

"The custom of leaving large sums of money to a few people is wrong," he said. "It makes the recipients lazy in mind and body. It would be so much better, I thought, to spread it out with a view to equipping a number of people—or of re-establishing those who are handicapped—so they may face the requirements of life with a better chance of making a real success of it. If we can effect this object in some way which at the same time it will lay a foundation for permanent betterment of society generally, that of course would be wonderful.

As illustrating the type of suggestion he hopes to obtain, he said he had considered some general scheme of assisting young women now equipped only for positions as clerks or cash girls, to become governesses.

TELEPHONE SUPERVISOR

Tells of the Benefit Received by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Leavenworth, Kansas.—"My work was long-distance operating and supervising, and I got into a very nervous state and was all run-down. I was easily annoyed, at trifles, was extremely nervous and always had a tired feeling which made me awfully listless. Through a newspaper I learned of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and thinking it would help me I tried it. It quieted my nerves, I was less annoyed and more lively. It took away that dragging feeling and improved my health in every way. I was able to continue my work with more vigor than before and I recommend the Vegetable Compound to all young girls. I am married now and have a big baby boy and am in the best of health. If I should ever have any trouble I'll take the Vegetable Compound again, for I know it will help me as it did before."—Mrs. O. W. THIEL, 925 Pawnee St., Leavenworth, Kansas.

MEXICO EXPRESSES REGRETS AT INQUIRY AMERICAN CONSUL

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

MEXICO CITY, July 21.—The foreign office has expressed regrets to the American embassy over the shooting of Harold G. Bretherton, American vice-consul at Aguas Callentes, on July 18. It is announced by the foreign office, that the bullet wound sustained by Mr. Bretherton was caused by a stray bullet, which hit the consul as two local congressmen were firing at each other in the street. Mr. Bretherton, it is added, declared the shooting unintentional.

TWO DEATHS IN HAWAII REVIVE OLD TRADITIONS

HONONLULU, July 20.—The death recently of two Chinese, which was attributed to the eating of the fresh puffer or balloon fish, has caused a dispute as to whether the fish, a fairly common variety in Hawaiian waters, is poisonous in itself or became so through poisonous seaweed eaten by the fish, or through improper methods of preparation. The occurrence also has revived some interesting legends among the Hawaiians.

The Queen's hospital, in a bulletin issued after exhaustive examination, declares that the six balloon fish which were supposed to have caused the death of the two Chinese were not poisonous. The bulletin explains further that it is possible that these fish at certain times or places eat a poisonous seaweed. The hospital points out also that there is a variety of the fish, comparatively rare, which is poisonous, with a secretion similar to the poison of certain toadstools, and that on the island of Molokai it is a well known fact that certain fish, such as the ordinary harmless opua, if taken on one side of the island, are poisonous, but if caught elsewhere are wholesome food. The mullet is said to be poisonous in Molokai waters at certain times of the year, and to produce choking, dizziness and terrifying dreams.

The legend is that certain gods came at various seasons to live at the seashore of a certain bay—the fish were poisonous to man. "The true explanation," says the hospital chemists, "is probably that at certain times and places the fish eat poisonous food."

Hawaiians, however, assert that there is no poisonous seaweed in Hawaiian waters.

A BRIDE'S DIARY

A Love Story of Today

By Idah McGlone Gibson

MRS. MELBOURNE, FRIEND.

Cleo Madison elopes with Lieut. Paul Armstrong, U. S. A. It does not take Cleo long to discover marriage is not a path of roses. On the train, going to the army post, she has an allegorical dream indicating her future problems. The colonel, Arthur Blakely Beldon, of the post, is a "lady killer" and his actions have compromised Rita Thorndike, wife of a reprobate lieutenant. Rita is innocent and Cleo forms an immediate and deep friendship for her. Rita, at Cleo's instigation, decides to leave the post and joins a vaudeville troupe under the name of Rheda Thorwaldson. Paul has been having his troubles, chiefly liquor and gambling. Cleo refuses to be gushingly sympathetic. The post is agog with gossip and suspicion when Rita leaves and the colonel implores Cleo to give him information—unsuccessfully. At opportune moments Cleo reads from her grandmother's diary for renewed courage. She also decides that the women at the post are pretty catty.

But Mrs. Melbourne is a real friend.

When some officers' wives call on her Cleo again reads from her grandmother's diary—about gossip.

PAUL, CLEO AND A PROBLEM

Except when we went to the colonel's dinner on the day of our arrival Paul and I had not eaten a meal together since we arrived here, and Johnson just a little while ago brought me this message: "The lieutenant said he would not be home to dinner. He is going into town and you are not to wait up for him."

"All right, Johnson," I said, and then it came over me that I was very hungry. "I wonder if you would go out and buy me a small steak, a loaf of bread and a head of lettuce if you can find one. I think I can manage to cook the steak for I do not feel like going to the mess tonight."

When the man returned I broiled the steak and made the lettuce into a salad and sat down to the kitchen table to my solitary meal.

After I had eaten I felt much better and piling up the dishes I went upstairs to my room and sat down to decide what I should do. I knew that I could not live this way.

All at once I found myself thinking out loud. "There is one thing I will never do—never will allow any man to do to me what my grandfather did to my grandmother. Paul Armstrong will have to come clean with me before he fusses around with any other girl and leaves me to pine away."

Having come to that vital conclusion I went to bed and immediately I fell asleep. I slept through the night without awakening once and it was late the next morning when I was aroused by the rat-tat of Johnson's fingers on Paul's door.

"It is very late, sir," he said rather softly as though to try and not wake me up.

I pricked up my ears but there was no answer from Paul.

Hastily throwing a kimono over my nightdress and thrusting my feet into bedroom slippers I opened my door. "I'll wake him, Johnson," I said confidently.

Seeing that I was up, Johnson without any more ceremony hammered the door and then not waiting for an answer, he pushed his way in. Immediately he came out consternation written all over his face.

"The lieutenant is not there, Mrs. Armstrong."

Almost unbelieving I rushed into the room. The bed had not been touched. "What has happened to him?" I called to Johnson.

"Nothing I'm afraid, Mrs. Armstrong, compared to what will happen to him when he gets back. The colonel was storming around this morning as the lieutenant was absent from parade. Every moment he stays away now only makes it so much worse."

My telephone rang. "Is that you, Cleo? This is Paul. Will you call up the colonel and tell him that I have a bad case of ptomaine poisoning. Tell him that you are coming in town to bring me home. It will make it all right if you say that to him. You know the colonel likes you, and he will feel sorry for you. He is very sympathetic."

"I'll come in town after you, Paul, if it is true that you need some one to come but I certainly will not call up Col Beldon. If you have put yourself in bad, old dear, by not arriving for parade you must take your medicine. I am not going to begin now, and never will I begin, the Rita Thorndike act, whatever comes of you."

"Do you mean to tell me, Cleo, that you will not help me to get out of this?"

"Not if I have to intercede with the colonel for you. That is exactly how Rita Thorndike's trouble began."

The receiver was jammed up on the hook at Paul's end. I looked at Johnson who had heard my end of the conversation. "What shall I do now?" I asked.

Instead of answering Johnson said, "I'll make you some coffee right away, Mrs. Armstrong." Then he vanished down the stairs.

I do not know how I got through the day. I do not know when I started out of my house. I only remember it was late in the afternoon when I returned from my long walk to find Paul pacing up and down the living room.

"Where have you been?" he asked belligerently.

"I think perhaps, my dear Paul, that I have more reason to ask you that question."

"Oh; don't try to be smart. This is one of the times that it doesn't become you and won't get you anywhere. I haven't time to explain or go into any discussion of the whys and wherefores. I must get to the colonel's quarters before I am taken there. Have you any objections, Mrs. Armstrong, of making a call on Col. Arthur Blakely Belden, if you are properly chaperoned by your husband? I have been waiting around here for at least a half an hour for you to return so we could do this. Come on you can powder your nose on the way."

"Wait a minute, wait a minute, Mr. Soldier Man. It is according to what you want the wife of your bosom to do when she gets there that will decide whether she visits her husband's colonel or not even with friend husband as chaperone.

"I tell you flatly, Paul, that I will not ask Col. Beldon for any clemency for you because of me. In fact the more I think of it, the more I think I had better stay at home."

PRIVATE CAPITAL SOUGHT TO AID SOVIET INDUSTRIES

MOSCOW, July 20.—(A. P.)—Problems of internal trade are now engaging the closest attention of the Soviet government. The recent conference of the Communist party and the federal congress of Soviets passed a number of reforms to facilitate private trade and to attract private capital to general trade and industry. The government has found, after many years of war upon private trade that private capital in Russia does not exceed 5,000,000 rubles. The trade turnover hardly reaches 2,000,000,000 rubles a year.

Moscow, which is considered the biggest trade center in the Soviet federation, made a trade turnover last year of 1,723,000,000 rubles. The bulk of this sum falls upon state and cooperative trade. 93 per cent of the Moscow industries are in the hands of the state and only seven per cent is in the hands of cooperative and private concerns. Private manufacturers in Moscow employ only about 10,000 workmen, which is only 1.3 per cent of the total number of workers engaged in Moscow industry.

COOL WEATHER AIDS IN FIRE SITUATION

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

EUGENE, Ore., July 21.—With the day starting cloudy and chill, and relative humidity consequently high, danger from forest fires which has been prevalent for the past two weeks or more lessened in this district today. The serious blaze on Culp creek, near Cottage Grove, was reported definitely under control, and the fire which threatened a sawmill in the adjoining area Sunday was said to be threatening no longer. A crew of 60 men battled the blaze yesterday.

Today's clouds and coolness came as somewhat of a surprise, breaking a long period of heat.
