PORTLAND, Ore., July 23.—Corporations operating in this state are reminded by Clyde G. Huntley, collector of internal revenue, that they must file their capital stock tax returns and pay any tax due the government not later than Friday, July 31st, in order to escape penalties for delinquency. The capital stock tax differs from the corporation income tax, explained Collector Huntley, "in that it is a tax for the privilege of doing business, and covers the fiscal year ending June 30, 1926, which must be paid in advance. Under the new regulations, an extension is time for filing these returns and paying the tax, can be obtained only in case of sickness or unavoidable absence from the state." Collector Huntley also announces that July 31st is the last day special taxes for the ensuing fiscal year may be paid, and escape a penalty of 25 per cent of the amount of tax due, by the following classes of taxpayers: Proprietors of billiard and pool halls and bowling alleys, autos for hire, brokers, including custom house, ship and pawnbrokers; cigar manufacturers, wholesale and retail dealers in oleomargarine, and manufacturers of adulterated butter.

YELLOWSTONE GEYSER SLOWS UP ACTIVITY YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, July 23.—Even Old Faithful, supposed to be the most constant, and certainly the most celebrated geyser in the world, is undergoing changes. This year Old Faithful is erupting every 67 minutes and his outbursts last for about five minutes. In the memory of living scientists this geyser became active every 30 minutes, and there is much speculation as to changes beneath the earth's surface which are slowing down this old wonder. Many geysers in the basin of the Fire Hole river, the greatest geyser area in the world, have ceased shooting entirely within the last 50 years, while others which were formerly inactive are again shooting. Old Faithful still sends steam and water into the air to a height of 150 to 200 feet and is surrounded day and night by throngs of tourists awaiting his outbursts.

Tearing through the railing on the right hand side of the bridge, the car turned completely over, crushing Hensil beneath it. He was found dead a few minutes after the accident occurred. Antlers Theatre. "Paths to Paradise", a new Paramount picture which opened at the Antlers Theatre last Friday night is fast farce comedy at its best. The film features Betty Compton and Raymond Griffith. The story concerns itself with Griffith, a four-fingered de luxe and Betty, a clever girl crook. The two decided to team up. Griffith disguised as a detective, and Betty as a maid, attend a fashionable wedding. They steal the family jewels but are discovered and chased. Their trip to Mexico is just about the fastest, funniest jaunt that has ever been seen on the screen. Police attempt to stop them at different points along the road. Each time they manage to escape by the skin of their teeth, or by the tails of their coats, as you will. Reaching the border line after a series of delicious adventures they find their united consciences advise them to return the gems. Whereupon, with at least two hundred police hot on their trail, they retrace their steps. Arriving just in time to deliver the loot to its rightful owner, they are surprised by a nice check for what he believes is their "honesty and bravery". With this they start on "Paths to Paradise." Majestic Theatre. One of the most spectacular gang fights ever shown on the screen, is promised as part of the entertainment supplied by "The Man in Blue", Universal-Jewel coming to the Majestic Theatre next Friday and Saturday, with Herbert Rawlinson and Madge Bellamy, as co-stars. Rawlinson made screen fight history by his big fight scenes in "Jack O' Clubs", a Universal production, and it is said that the fight in his latest starring vehicle is even more spectacular than the first one in which he took part. Edward Laemmle, who directed, has had lots of experience in directing gang fights for there are a number of them in two feature series he directed with Billy Sullivan as star, "The Leather Pushers" and "The Fast Steppers." This picture was adapted from "The Flower of Napoli", a short story written by Gerald Beaumont and published in The Red Book Magazine. Liberty Theatre. The shimmering mystery of underworld intrigue, the warmth of underworld romance and the loyalty that knits together the shrewdness of that darkened domain where guns bark and blackjacks swing free as the autumn breezes, all combine to give color and punch to Evelyn Brent's brand new crook melodrama "Alias Mary Flynn", current attraction at the Liberty Theatre. Just as Jane Cowd won fame in "Within the Law" and Jane Grey in "De Luxe Annie", so Evelyn Brent has created a life following the world over for her skilful impersonations of the female raffles—a young woman of daring and loyalty, of beauty and delicacy, who goes down to the depths and works out her own regeneration. A distinguished cast supports the star in "Alias Mary Flynn" an F. B. O. production based on an original story by Fred Kennedy Myton. Outing supplies—visors, colored glasses, bathing caps and shoes, and first aid preparations. Lloyd Crocker.

Dayton Pastor, Bested in Evolution Controversy, Will Quit Ministry

The Rev. W. G. Byrd, who resigned as pastor of the M. E. church (north) in Dayton, Tenn., when his congregation refused to hear a modernist pastor he invited to preach a sermon, is going to quit the ministry and become an electrician. He is shown (right) with Dr. George W. Rappleyea, who planned the Scopes trial, and a member of the congregation. The Rev. Byrd was also criticized because he allowed Dr. Rappleyea, evolutionist, to continue to attend the church. Rub'er! There sure is a heap of difference in rubbing—and in rubber. Another Seiberling All-Tread came in yesterday after 2,400 miles. RUBBER that was right. Drive in and compare. Highway Service Co.
