CRITICISM OF COUNTY COURT IS RESENTED

of the county to allow their market roads to run down for two or three years, while we placed all of the road money on the new project.

"We could obligate ourselves for the amount, promising the commission to pay at the end of two years, and hoping to the future to open up a way of payment. Some of the counties have done this. How they will pay they do not know. But themselves, and some day they will find themselves in a jam. Payday is bound to come. The other counties can get themselves involved in that manner if they desire, but we do not desire to do that.

"If some proposition is brought forward, either a bond issue, super road district, special county road tax, or some other method can be brought forward to raise the necessary funds to enable us to meet the commission on its proposition, we will be only too glad to join with them, as we desire to see the road completed at the earliest possible moment. In our present financial condition, however, with no funds available, and the taxpayers already striving to pay off heavy bond issues, we do not feel that we would be justified in assuming further heavy obligations with no assurance that we would be able to meet the demand."

OPTIMISTIC UTTERANCE - COMES FROM HENRY FORD

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

DETROIT, July 30.—The 62nd anniversary of his birth and the 22nd year since the first Ford automobile appeared on the market, are the occasion today for a quiet celebration at Dearborn, Mich., in which only Henry Ford and his immediate family are participating. Today Henry Ford is 62 years of age, his step light and elastic, his face tanned and the usual exhibition, evident to those few who have gained his presence.

This anniversary day apparently has caused Mr. Ford little concern. Asked if he had plans for a birthday party he smiled. As to his health, Mr. Ford replied that he "never felt better or healthier."

"You know I never think of 'diminishing days,'" he added, "I'm living in today, not tomorrow or yesterday. Yesterday has been taken care of and tomorrow will take care of itself."

EDDY REPLIES TO MOSER'S CHARGE OF "UNHOLY ALLIANCE"

Preferred Governor's Word to Boss Dictation of Portland Clique.

In a lengthy statement appearing in the Portland Oregonian of today's issue, Senator B. L. Eddy makes a spirited reply to the recent declaration of Gus C. Moser, president of the senate, that the Douglas senator and two colleagues, Hare and Johnson, entered into an "unholy alliance" with Governor Pierce and Senator Joseph of Multnomah county to control the state fish and game commission, and that the governor reciprocated by handing them the "double-cross."

After admitting that Pierce failed to carry out a "gentleman's agreement," Senator Eddy adds:

"Make the most of it, Gus, and have your laugh. But as I did not cast any vote in consideration of any promise of the governor, I am not 'holier,' and even with the additional light which we now have I think Senators Hare, Johnson and myself took the right course, a sensible course, an honorable course, even though it be one that more 'practical' politicians cannot understand."

Senator Eddy pokes a good deal of fun at Moser and refers sarcastically to never-ending efforts of the Multnomah delegation to control the legislature, intimating that Moser was ill-disposed toward him because he (Eddy) preferred to act in what he thought was the best interests of the state rather than to yield to the dictation of the Multnomah clique. Explaining the so-called "gentlemen's agreement," about which Moser makes so much ado, Senator Eddy says:

"After I had joined with 13 other senators in the position that the appointment of the fish and game commissioners should be left with the governor, after I had voted against senate bill No. 94, the object of which was to take the fish commission out of the governor's hands, several senators, including myself, happened to be in the governor's office on some other matter, and I thought it a good opportunity to point out that the second district, in which I reside, had no representation on the fish commission, but district No. 1 had all three members, and I stated that I would like to have an understanding that when any vacancy occurred the second district should be represented."

"Senators Strayer, Garland and Beals, and possibly other persons, were present. Governor Pierce immediately agreed that this should be done, and suggested that as Senator Beals was from the same district, he and I should agree upon the man, and someone suggested that if we could not agree, Senator Garland should be arbiter. This was a sort of 'gentlemen's agreement' made without any promise or consideration on the part of the senators present or the governor and made on February 11, after the senate had aligned itself on the question of taking the appointive power from the governor, 16 being in favor of that action and 14 against."

"Senator Joseph was not present at that conference, and there is no reason to think he ever knew of it until after the legislature adjourned, and then he got it from the press. No word on the subject ever passed between him and myself until about June 1, and then he was using his influence to defeat the arrangement."
