FARMER MAKES MORE, BUT PAY STILL LOW

Although agriculture in the United States did better financially in the year ended June 30, 1925, than in the preceding 32 months, its income was nevertheless not sufficient to yield both a fair return on the capital invested in the business and a fair wage for the labor of farm operators and their families. This is brought out by the Department of Agriculture in an analysis of the agricultural balance sheet for the last crop year.

On the capital invested in agriculture the return for the year ended June 30, 1925, says the department, was at the rate of 4.6 per cent compared with 3.3 per cent in the year ended June 30, 1924. This return represented interest on the investment and payment for the managerial services of farmers. It was the net income that remained after providing for operating expenses and property taxes, and making an allowance for the unpaid labor of the farmer and his family at hired labor wages rates. In round figures the net income for the 1924-25 season was $2,712,000,000, compared with $1,992,000,000 in 1923-24.

But this sum did not go exclusively to farmers, because farmers do not own all the capital invested in agriculture. They own only about 79 per cent of it, and have to pay interest on the balance. It is estimated by the department that the current value of the total capital invested in agriculture was $59,154,000,000 in 1924-25, compared with $59,518,000,000 in 1923-24. When farm indebtedness is subtracted from these figures, the remaining amounts are approximately the value of the capital owned by actual farm operators. In 1924-25 the value of the farmers' unencumbered capital, according to the department, was $46,904,000,000 compared with $47,298,000,000 in the preceding crop year.

In estimating the net return to the actual farm operator in the crop year 1924-25, the department divides the gross return on this unencumbered capital in the same way as it does the gross return to all the capital invested in agriculture. That is to say, it reckons the net income available for interest on capital and the managerial services of the farmers after deducting operating expenses, taxes and an allowance for the labor of the farmer and his family. On this basis the return on the farmer's unencumbered capital in 1924-25 was 4.1 per cent, compared with

HIGHWAY CLOSED DURING WORKING HOURS AT OAKLAND

(Associated Press Local Wire.)
SALEM, Ore., July 30.—The state highway commission announced that construction work on the Pacific highway north of Oakland, Douglas county, makes it necessary that the highway be closed to traffic during working hours, from 7:30 a. m. to 5:30 p. m., for about three weeks. A detour has been provided around the construction over what is known locally as the Cole Hill or Goodrich road. All traffic will be allowed to use the main highway after working hours.

2.5 per cent in the preceding year. While this is a gratifying increase, it still comes far short of equalling the rates that the farmer has to pay for the use of borrowed capital. Interest paid by farmers on mortgage and other indebtedness in 1924-25 was 6.4 per cent, and 6.6 per cent in the preceding year. Thus, as a combined return for the use of their capital and for their own managerial services, farmers received around 2 per cent less than was paid solely for the use of other capital, under conditions not requiring the lenders to take any responsible part in production.

MAIN CANAL BREAKS.

(Associated Press Local Wire.)
HOOD RIVER, Ore., July 30.—A break in the main canal of the system of the Hood River irrigation district has carried a great volume of red silt into Hood River and the stream was muddier yesterday than any old-time resident had ever seen it. Fishing in the river below the break, one of the worst in the history of local irrigation, was spoiled for the time. The canal where the event occurred was on a precipitous hillside. Crews of men were rushed to repair the break and it was thought that services in the district, which covers the Oak Grove section, will be restored tomorrow.
