The breakfast cooked, the kitchen cool

That's Quick Quaker, the "no hot kitchen" solution of the summer breakfast problem

HERE is the right summer breakfast... Oats and milk. Doctors urge it. Children do well on it. Active folks need it.

Yet you cook it in 3 to 5 minutes.

That means no frying and stewing on hot mornings.

It means meeting hot days with a smile.

Get Quick Quaker. You will be delighted.

Same rich Quaker flavor. Cooks faster, that's the only difference.

PORTLAND SHIPYARD DESTROYED BY FIRE

(Associated Press Local Wire.) PORTLAND, July 31.—The Albina Marine Iron Works, part of the Cornroot ship yard of war time, was destroyed by fire early today. The damage was estimated at $100,000, only a small part of which was covered by insurance. William Lornfoot, head of the Albina Marine Works was unable to say this morning whether the plant would be rebuilt. The flames leaped the street at one time and attacked the warehouse of the Northwest Sales Company, but the firemen prevented serious loss to that structure. The cause of the fire had not been learned this morning. The fire was discovered in the southeast corner of the huge building occupied by the iron works, and had gained great headway when firemen arrived. The fire was spectacular, the flames lighting the sky over the whole city.

FARM REMINDERS

All ages and varieties of Oregon fruit trees are attacked by fruit borers. The young trees probably suffer the most seriously, says the experiment station. A high percentage of young trees are killed their first or second season, especially where high temperature and prolonged drought occur. The borer attacking apple trees works mostly just under the bark, at or above the surface of the ground.

Drainage in experimental fields at O. A. C. has doubled the crop yield. Before drainage on some lands the yield was so small that profit was uncertain. The larger crop obtained after drainage has made good profits.

Most pigs marketed in Oregon are light weight, and are therefore growing as well as putting on fat during the finishing period. To get the best results, careful attention is given to balancing the rations so that enough protein and mineral matter will be provided to develop muscle and bone, the experiment station has found. The finishing period need not exceed 60 days unless a rising market warrants longer feeding.

The average weight of the Oregon fleece is nine pounds, more than a pound better than the average weight for the country which was reported as 7 to 8 pounds in 1840 to its present size, and is still Improving with careful selection of stock. It is significant, says the experiment station authorities, to note that many bands in Oregon average 10 pounds. Careful breeding of poor fleeces is being conducted by different growers with a view to raise the average weight still more.

SUNDAY AT THE CHURCHES

International Bible Students Association—Bible Study at the Moore Hall, Sunday at 10:00 and 10:30 a. m. Study for children at 10:00 a. m. Adult Bible Study at 10:30 a. m. The subjects for the adult study will be "Our Lords Return," and the subject of atonement "Man."

Suppose that your dearest friend and benefactor is away on a long journey and you expect him to return, because when he went away he promised to come again; suppose that since that time you have been looking, hoping and praying for his return, and that you were informed he had arrived. Such news would fill your very soul with joy and you could not keep from singing. Bring the children and come and study with us.

First Methodist Church—Corner of Main and Lane streets; Rev. Joseph Knotts, pastor. The Sunday School meets at 9:45 a. m. We are pleased with the continued interest manifested during the summer months. May-August find us faithful in our attendance. We have classes for all ages and trust each corner will find himself interested in the Sunday School. The morning sermon by the pastor will be along the line of "Modern Discipleship." There will be a few words of tribute to the memory of W. J. Bryan.

The Epworth League will meet at 7 o'clock dismising in time for the union service at the Christian Church at which services Rev. Stewart O'Dell of the South Methodist Church will preach.

A cordial invitation is extended to all, particularly strangers and tourists.

Epworth League talk on the Wesley foundation at Oregon Agricultural College will be given by Virgil Woodcock, an O. A. C. student. The latest views of the campus will be shown and the importance of religion in education will be discussed. All who are interested in the religious activity of the Methodist church at Corvallis, are cordially invited to attend.

Catholic Church, corner Kane and Oak streets. First Sunday in August. Mass and sermon at 7 o'clock. Catechism at 8:45-Second Mass and Sermon at 9:30. Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament in the evening at 7:30.

Lutheran Services: Evangelical Lutheran church of the Missouri Synod. Pastor, H. H. Young, resident 119 S. Pine St. Services Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the Episcopal Parish House, 214 E. Cass St. Theme for the sermon: "Christ's Warning Against False Prophets." Sermon based on Matt. 7:15-23. In this age of anomism this sermon may seem altogether untimely. However, the warning and command of Romans 16, 17: "Mark them which cause divisions and offenses contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned; and avoid them," is valid still today, and must be upheld as long as there is any unity of faith and doctrine among the churches. We warn against false prophets and the sake of the truth, "with malice toward none, and charity for all." We would kindly ask all members to do their part in bringing about a hundred per cent attendance. Let us not neglect our church attendance during these summer months. Let us remember the devil takes no vacation during the summer months. All strangers are always welcome at our services.

Bible Standard Mission, Rev. I. P. Burro, pastor. Services tonight in the mission at 8:00. Sunday services (to follow) Sunday school at 9:45, classes for all, competent teachers in charge. ### State Press Comment

An Expensive Machine Industry, after uncounted centuries of groping, is turning away from man as a unit of power. He is too expensive. Even at the height of Roman conquest, when slaves were as cheap as sheep, man-power was costly.

As a unit of power man is an extravagance, whether considered in terms of energy, mileage, or cost of upkeep. He cannot be run on continual service, with the administration of a few cents' worth of oil and fuel, and the repair bills come high when he is out of running order. He is about one-tenth as efficient in power as a horse, and about four times as expensive in upkeep.

A hard-worked horse can do heavy work on an expenditure of about 25 cents a day for food, but a man requires four times that sum and his food must be specially prepared. The horse can go from dawn till dark and then sleep on straw, but a man must have his short day and a good bed at night.

Even the horse, however, has gone into the discard as a source of industrial power. Although we still speak of engines with a certain amount of horsepower, it is merely for convenience in terminology. When the first power-driven looms came into use in England mill-workers went on strike and destroyed the machinery. They thought that they and their children would be starved by the use of the more efficient machines.

When the self-binding harvester was invented, farm laborers in this country saw to it that they saved their own existence. They saw their work taken away from them. They could not see that cheaper methods of production would create new industries which would, in turn, demand more labor. They could not see that labor liberating man to perform duties impossible to machinery.

As man has seen the advantage of mechanical power he has gradually come to see himself in a different light in reference to machinery and work. He has ceased to think of unskilled labor as diminished in itself. He compares himself, when compelled to depend upon physical strength alone, as a minor cog in an immense machine. The laborer today is something better than an ox. He is the master of machinery. He has come to a realization that it is a good thing for him that he is an expensive machine.—Portland Record Abstract.

War Brides Again

The French government has communicated with Washington concerning the 600 Franco-American alliances effected while American doughboys were awaiting in thousands through French villages and cities on their way to and from the front.

It is not that the French objected to the local abduction of some of their young women by American boys, but that 600 of these international marriages have proven unsuccessful. The government of France is disturbed by the fact that as many as 27 French brides have been deserted by their American husbands in a month. The government of the bride is very desirous of seeing that France is done them whether they are abandoned on this side of the Atlantic or in their native country. The situation is not as serious as it might be, for in fact, as many persons expect it to be, domestic courtships and marriages are the most permanent kind and the 27 were all the elements of romance in these war marriages abroad. France had already sent her young men to the front leaving behind her French girls behind the lines. American soldiers, however, sent their sweethearts back in the United States. They were carried among the happy brides of France. The marriages were happy and was making young men responsible and reliable.

When the war was over romance was already dead and far more there was disillusionment. Many wives were unable to adapt themselves to the husband's status. He at home. Husbands also were disillusioned. And there were all the other usual causes for separations, domestic differences and inefficiency through the summer time. Let us have no excuses with evil or ignorance. New people are invited to enroll in this school. 1:00 a. m. Morning worship. Message by

Feed the Baby Salmon

Fishery experts who have examined the big salmon caught in the lower river this season have determined that the 85 pounder was a five year old, and that a number of others weighing about 50 pounds each were of a similar age. The unusually large number of big fish caught this year is attributed to the fact that a few years ago a considerable number of young fry were kept at the hatcheries and fed for several weeks after they had reached the period of development at which it was customary to turn them loose. The salmon has a hard struggle for existence from the time it leaves the hatchery until it reaches the canyon, but like the human baby, it is the first few weeks that are the hardest, and it is then that the death rate is the highest. For this reason it is possible that it may be worth while to feed all of the youngsters a while before turning them loose.

If a few weeks' extra care at the hatcheries saves the young salmon such a good start in life that he becomes an eighty pounder in five years, it might be profitable to make this method the rule instead of the exception. Several years of experience has demonstrated that the hatcheries if properly handled can be depended on to perpetuate the industry and it is possible that they may succeed in producing regular runs of hatchery fish that will show much greater weight than the present average. It should not be forgotten however, that pollution and pollution are both threats to the industry. Pollution of the waters which is deadly in effect, may be checked and even removed. Pollution is different.—Portland Telegram.

Banging Away at Bandits

Robbery under arms is no longer the polite and profitable profession it used to be, and not so long ago. Your bundle of today takes an even chance of getting a pellet of lead in its vitals. He faces not only the penitentiary, but a pistol—and he faces the pistol first. These significant facts are set down large in the day's news, as witness the story which narrates the killing of two armed robbers who undertook to rifle a Chicago hotel. Even Chicago has grown restive and potent. This is a bad sign for banditry.

And out here in the northwest, what do we find? An aroused citizen, unthinkably peeved and anxious to kill. Let us skip briefly over the casualties in the state of Washington since the month of May. A bank robber slain by a Seattle detective. To robbers killed and one gravely wounded in the attempt to rob the bank at Bothell. Two robbers killed by the vigilant town marshal of Buckley, as they emerged from the bank. Another party wounded at Vancouver following a frustrated attempt at bank robbery. No jury summoned and hanged over three negroes and their fate. No judge pronounced sentence. They died, so to speak, with their boots on, having been under sentence of death from the moment they entered upon their nefarious undertakings.

The law is laggard and the law is often uncertain. But when a law is first, in defense of life and property, it is different. The bullet is neither laggard nor uncertain. It carries much weight as a final argument. It is often the last word. No, as matters are shaping, what with all this banging away at bandits, it is safe to predict that banditry will speedily decline. For it must appear that it is far better to be a live ditch digger than a dead brave.—Portland Oregonian.

HOTEL IN WHICH GOVERNORS MET LINCOLN TO BE HAZED.

ALTOONA, Pa., July 31.—Efforts are being made by local and other historical societies to mark appropriately the spot of the historic old Logan House, which will be razed to make way for a new railroad station. It was in a room in the Logan House that the Union war governors, in September, 1862, met with President Lincoln and pledged to him their faith and support.

The meeting was informal and private, no written record of any kind was kept, and newspaper reporters were not present. It was called to take measures for more active support of the government and resulted in the pledge by Lincoln and the Union. The pledge was signed by 12 governors and

PLEA MADE BY GERMAN WOMAN LEADER FOR OLDTIME FAMILY LIFE

COLOGNE, Germany, July 31.—A crusade against the "insults to true womanhood that are offered by the public life of today through modern literature, the movies and theatres," was proposed by Frau von Tilling during the German women's week, held in conjunction with the millennial celebration of the Rhineland. She pleaded for resumption of the oldtime family life.

Fostering of a more intellectual life for young women, a healthier physical training as a safeguard against the demoralizing influence of the present day, were advocated by Frau von Tilling. A conscientious devotion to household work also, she thought, would improve the moral poise of women.
