Great English Beauty Secret "Howard's Buttermilk Cream"

Druggists Told Not to Take Anyone's Money Unless This Delightful New Vanishing Cream Quickly Shows a Decided Improvement.

BIG DEMAND, SAY DRUGGISTS

Buttermilk Cream creates beauty almost like magic. The most wonderful thing about it is the fact that while it turns the dullest, most lifeless complexion to radiant beauty and makes red or rough hands or arms snowy white, yet there is not the slightest sign of its use after application. It actually vanishes from sight and the most heated atmosphere will not produce the least shininess or greasiness of the skin.

No matter whether you are troubled with a poor complexion, wrinkles, puffiness around the eyes, freckles, crows' feet or lines around the mouth, ugly finger nails, or just a simple roughness of the face, hands or arms caused by wind or sun, you will find that any or all of these troubles will quickly disappear with the use of Howard's

Buttermilk Cream.

To prove this to your complete satisfaction, get a small quantity today at your favorite toilet goods counter with the understanding that they will freely return the purchase money should you be dissatisfied.

Beautiful actresses say, "A short massage with Howard's Buttermilk Cream at night before retiring is all that is necessary."

PALESTINE HENS FAIL TO CARRY OUT MATERNAL DUTIES

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—The hens of Palestine and Egypt have lost the habit of sitting on their eggs, and no longer know how to carry out their maternal duties, declares Miss Phyllis Brown, a Vassar graduate who is teaching poultry raising and dairying to 5,000 children in one of the Near East Relief's agricultural schools for refugee orphans in Bible lands. In a report just received at the organization's headquarters here, Miss Brown says:

"Probably many Americans think of the incubator as a modern invention, but it is older than Tutunkamen. I was surprised to find during recent visits to agricultural communities in Egypt and Palestine, that the incubator has been in use so long that the native hens no longer have any desire to sit on their eggs. Thus evolution is taking its course.

"The native incubators of Bible lands are very primitive affairs, and show no improvement in 3,000 years. An incubator which I secured for exhibition purposes from an Egyptian farmer is exactly the same as those which archeologists have dug up from tombs of Pharaoh's time. No thermometer is used, and the peasant tests the temperature by feeling the eggs with his eyelid.

"Fuel is renewed in the native incubator furnace twice daily for eleven days. In many villages, the hatching of eggs is centralized in a large incubator building containing five or six ovens, treating 50,000 to 75,000 eggs each season. The proprietor of the incubator buys the eggs from the villagers at a price of one cent each, and sells the live chicks back to them for two and a half cents apiece. His profit is not exhorbitant, as these primitive incubators usually produce only about 50 per cent successful hatchings. The incubator specialist belongs to a highly-rated profession, and jealously guards the secrets of his trade."

Miss Brown says that the refugee orphans in the great Near East Relief schools show natural proficiency in all departments of agriculture. She believes that the elementary scientific instruction which has been introduced in these countries by the American farm schools will result in a largely increased output. The orphan children, both boys and girls, graduate at the age of sixteen, and more than fifty per cent of them are placed on the land, to earn their living by farming, dairying and poultry raising.

BRITISH ADOPT TURTLE AS USEFUL GARDEN PET

LONDON, Aug. 6.—(A. P.)—The turtle as a household pet here is threatening the canary, the cat and the poodle. Nearly every householder in London has a turtle or two in his back yard, or "garden", as it is called in England.

Turtles this summer have been sold by hawkers, in the markets and in many stores which formerly confined themselves to goldfish, birds and dogs. The price has been from six pence up to three and four shillings, according to size. It has been estimated by dealers that within the last few weeks there have been approximately 60,000 turtles brought to England from Mediterranean ports, while London has received numerous other supplies from the continent.

Most gardeners in the city and suburbs have turtles in their allotments, the theory being that they consume the snails and other pests which do harm to tender, growing plants. Turtle faddists contend that turtles are most grateful creatures for any kindnesses, and that they are very faithful pets so long as a person is kind to them. After being released in a garden and given a few draughts of sweetened water at first, the turtle makes himself perfectly at home, among the vegetables and flowers, and will seldom stray beyond his own confines even though there is no fence.

A BRIDE'S DIARY

A Love Story of Today

By Idah McGlone Gibson

The Story So Far.

Cleo Madison, after eloping with her boyhood sweetheart, Lieutenant Paul Armstrong, goes to his army post and she finds out almost immediately that married life is not too rosy. There is much intrigue at the post. Rita Thorndike, wife of a no-good lieutenant, flees from the post after much gossip about her and Col. Blakely Beldon. Cleo helps Rita and resolves not to let her own name become the subject of gossip. Paul exhibits a passion for gambling; loses $500 to the Colonel one night, pays, and loses $500 to a pair of cheap gamblers the next night. He is broke and gives the gamblers his wife's car in settlement of the debt. Cleo is furious; the colonel wants to help and Paul is somewhat sullen.

Cleo will not accept the car which the colonel has bought back for Paul.

She makes her reasons for not accepting all to clear.

When Paul comes in, with the colonel still there, Cleo gives the colonel a check for $500 which Rheda had sent in repayment of a loan from Cleo.

I shall never forget the torrent of anger that flooded my soul when Paul accused me of asking Chick for money. A book lay on the table beside me. Before I thought I picked it up and let it fly at him.

I was too angry to speak, but I had to express my insane anger in some way. If he had not dodged, I'd have missed him, but as it was a sharp corner of the book made a gash near the temple from which the blood spurted.

He hurled himself at me as if he intended to murder me, but as he did so I raised my eyes to his face. What he saw there evidently sobered him a little for he pulled out his handkerchief and holding it to his head hurriedly left the room.

Before he got to the door his handkerchief was crimson.

I was frightened and ashamed not so much of hurting him as of my feelings in the matter after that long look into each other's eyes I knew that life could never be the same for either of us.

After being lovers ever since we could spell the word, yes even when I pronounced it 'wuv" and he said in return I yuv you after defying our parents with a runaway marriage; after vowing promises of undying love before witnesses, and cementing these promises by our kisses and tears when we were alone we had come to this. I had nearly murdered my husband and for a moment he could have gladly killed me.

I heard him shortly after phoning for the Doctor, but I was trembling and shuddering so that I could not raise myself to my feet to go to him. The call must have been very urgent for presently the surgeon came almost on the run. By this time I partly recovered myself and I met him at the door.

"Mr. Armstrong is upstairs in his room. I think you had better go to him immediately. He had not been able to staunch the blood from an ugly gash in his forehead yet."

"Clo, bring the doctor right upstairs," called Paul at that moment and I hurried forward pretending not to hear the doctor's question as to how the accident occurred.

When we got into Paul's room we found him lying on the bed in a pool of blood. Evidently the exertion of calling to us was more than he could stand. I could see the doctor was worried as he rushed forward and quickly pulled the pillows from under my husband's head.

"Bring a bowl of warm water quickly," he said as he opened his case and took out his bottles of disinfectant and iodine, and quickly tore antiseptic bandages into pads to be used for staunching the blood.

Johnson came in with the water. He had been in the house and must have heard the quarrel at my request. Three times he changed it and I grew sick at the sight of its brilliant crimson tint.

At last with Johnson's help, for I had become, by this time, of no use whatever, the doctor sewed up the wound and bandaged Paul's head.

He had lost so much blood that he was in a state of semi-consciousness. Before he had got in that condition he told the doctor he had slipped and fallen against the sharp corner of the mantle. I was very glad he did this for I was beyond thinking up anything in the way of an excuse.

"You're husband had better go to the hospital Mrs. Armstrong."

Before I could acquiesce Johnson had telephoned to the ambulance and the orderlies had put Paul on the stretcher. "Don't leave me, Cleo, I want you with me." Paul kept repeating. "You know I love you. I never could see any other woman but you. I love you dear, I love you. Don't let them take me away from you dearest. Don't. Don't!"

My husband's voice almost rose to a shriek. It is a terrible thing to find yourself as I did at that moment in a position that calls for an emotion, and suddenly find you have no emotion to give. That was what happened to me.

When the orderlies put Paul in the ambulance, I knew that I should have gone with him; I was rather surprised to find that my husband's condition made no particular impression upon me. I had not the slightest remorse that I was responsible for his condition.

However, I had a great wave of emotion as I saw my little roadster beside the curb. Almost unconsciously I got behind the wheel and turned on the starter and the gears meshed into place and I started off, in the opposite direction from the ambulance bearing my husband.

The darkness had fallen when I came back. As I opened the door Johnson came into the hall. "Is anything the matter? Is the Lieutenant worse?"

"No, Mrs. Armstrong he seems to be all right. But here is a telegram addressed to him. You had better open it and see if it would be all right to give to him."

It was a Western Union telegraph blank telling Paul there was a certain sum of money at the office for him.

GERMAN THEATRICAL STARS REBEL AGAINST PAY OFFERED

BERLIN, Aug. 6.—The questions "what is a star in the theatrical profession?" and "who shall determine who are the stars?" are only two points of the many sided controversy between the German Theatrical association and the performers which has gone into the courts. The association fixed $75 as the maximum salary for "prominent artists" and then was instrumental in naming a special commission to determine what is a "prominent artist?" and who is entitled to the maximum salary?

In the first place those who had been demanding and getting more than $75 for a performance rebelled and in the second place the stars refused to recognize the special commission.

The two sides went into court, where counsel for the association intimated that the stars, so far as their profession is concerned, still were living in the period of inflation, judging from the demands made by them. These, counsel said, ranged from a guarantee of 8,000 marks and 30 per cent of the proceeds up to 17,300 marks. The latter amount was named as the price for a performance demanded by Madame Jeritza.

As a sort of compromise the court suggested that the salary limitations for "prominents" expire July 30, 1926, but the association flatly refused. Another effort to reach some sort of settlement will be made in court at a later date.

LOOK OUT FOR SELF POISONING

Neglect of the liver results in self-poisoning! Not so quickly, perhaps, but just as surely as if you drank poison out of a bottle. If your liver is not doing its work of helping digestion, eliminating waste from the bowels and purifying the blood, you will always be troubled with sick headaches, nausea, biliousness, bad breath, gas, sour stomach, or constipation.

Cleanse and tone your liver! Put your system in condition so you feel your very best again! Try just a spoonful of Dr. H. S. Thacher's excellent Liver and Blood Syrup after the next few meals and notice the quick improvement in the way you eat, sleep, look and feel—the return of strength, vigor and energy. You will be completely satisfied; otherwise there will be no cost. Dr. Thacher's Liver and Blood Syrup is sold and recommended by Nathan Fullerton, Roseburg. Ore-Drain Pharmacy, Drain, Oregon.

LACK OF VISITORS GIVES COOLIDGE DAY OF REST

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

SWAMPSCOTT, Mass., Aug. 6.—With the summer more than half gone, President Coolidge is taking advantage of opportunity here for rest and relaxation for the second consecutive day. He had an almost vacant engagement list today. He is putting in his free hours posing for a portrait and enjoying the freedom of White Court with its sea view.

Mr. Coolidge gets in many minutes each day strolling about the spacious laws of his summer home.

It is quite likely that after going to Plymouth, Vt., for 2 or 3 days, in a short time, he will return here to stay probably until early September.

RARE RECORD OF WORLD WAR IN THE HOOVER LIBRARY.

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Cal., Aug. 6.—The Hoover War Library, endowed by Secretary of Commerce Herbert C. Hoover at Stanford University, has received 44,500 books and pamphlets, in nearly all languages. Every one bears in some way on the World War.

The largest number, 12,000, are printed in Russian; 10,000 are in French, 9,900 in English. The rest are divided among Hungarian, Italian and other languages.

The library was founded in 1919. Many of the items printed or out of print, are irreplaceable. It offers students facilities duplicated nowhere and parralleled only at the Musee de la Guerre at Paris.

The program of the institution calls for procuring all important official documents of every nation throughout the war and during the reconstruction period. Three-fourths of this material already has reached the library. The manuscript collection include 65,000 reports and communications bearing on conditions in Europe during and after the war. This file is supplemented by copies of private papers of men who were active in world affairs of the time. The library has collected from each country involved a file of newspapers in sympathy with the governement, together with those of two opposition papers, representing the Left and the Right.

Mr. Hoover was graduated from Stanford in 1895. He is a member of the Board of Trustees.

Though six months late, the Christmas packages provided a gala event for the white settlers.

THIS WOMAN'S REMARKABLE RECOVERY

Entirely Due to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Forest City, Iowa.—"My first child lived only a short time and I was sick for a year after. When I bent over and raised myself up again I could almost scream with pain in my back. One day I was so bad that I had to leave my washing and get ready to go to the doctor. He gave me medicine but it did no more good than if I drank just water. Once when we had been in town a little book telling about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was left in our car. I have taken five bottles of the Vegetable Compound now and I do all my housework and help with the milking and taking care of chickens and garden. Besides I have a fine baby girl eight months old, just the picture of health and I am feeling fine myself. You may use this letter as a testimonial and I will answer any letters asking about the Vegetable Compound." — Mrs. OSCAR F. BORCHLIN, Route No. 5, Forest City, Iowa.

TOKYO'S POOR CHILDREN LACK PROPER NUTRITION.

TOKYO, Ag. 6.—Th effects of the great earthquake and fire of 1923 are still being felt by the children of Tokyo. Investigators of the Child Welfare Section of the Tokyo Municipality report that more than 60 per cent of the children under seven years of age in the slum quarters have been found to be unhealthy either because of under nourishment or diseases of various kinds. There is every indication, says the report, that the situation will become worse unless immediate steps are taken to care for those housed in the tmeporary structures in the poorer sections of the city.

"The most immediate cause of the unhealthy condition of the children," said Eimatsu Okasaki, head of the Child Welfare Section, "is the fact that they have not been fed so well as they were following the great earthquake. This was especially the case during the period when the city was beginning to be rebuilt. Just before that, the children in the slum districts had been fairly well fed with supplies sent to them by relief organizations all over the world. Later, however, many poor families were thrown on their own resources. In addition, the present unemployment situation, which has led to an almost total lack of work for the wives of laborers, has still further depleted the incomes of the poorer families.

"Another cause for the poor health of the children, is that they have been forced to play in the ruins of Honjo and Fukagawa, and much of what seems sand and solid ground is in realty nothing but the ashes of the buildings in those suburbs. All green growing things in these districts had been destroyed by fire and the wind raises the dust for the children to breathe."

ANIMALS IN PARK TERRIFIED BY MOTOR CARS AND PEOPLE

SEATTLE, Aug. 6.—(A. P.)—Long suffering deer, elk and bears in Woodland Park, Seattle's zoological tract, verged so vividly on nervous prostration this summer that movements were set afoot to provide them new quarters. Fumes and noises from automobiles and the chatter of the crowd have been too much for them. Other animals in the park do not seem to mind civilization.

The deer and elk are confined in half-acre tracts which are bounded on three sides by roads crowded with traffic. The bears are in cages of steel and concrete.

Plans for relief centered on quarters deeper in the park, which contains 200 acres, covered in large part with heavy Douglas fir forest.
