

Andy Gump Says:

"We're going to burn coal this winter—that's a cinch—it won't get any cheaper so why wait? The styles won't change—the same dark lumps trimmed with slate are still fashionable and if the coal miners and coal operators decide to stage their annual wrestling match I'm not going to get chibblains trying to pick the winner—I a feller never goes broke buying what he needs when the prices are lowest."

Today's Markets

(Associated Press Local Wire.)

PORTLAND, Aug. 8.—(Market Notes)—Local produce markets closed generally steady and inactive. Only moderate changes in price prevailed during the short Saturday trading period. Fruits and vegetables sold at current levels with supplies about sufficient for the market requirements.

The over-supply of peaches have been reduced considerably during the past 48 hours and the market steadied itself around $1.15 per box. Cantaloupe stocks were well absorbed today. The market closed around $2.75 on standard crates. Potatoes are firm and scarce with the market well established at $2.50 on Oregon stock. Onions remained weak at the close with best stocks selling at $3 to $3.25.

In the dairy lists extra eggs were posted a cent lower at 37 cents while other grades held steady. The market is a trifle easier. The butter market held steady with a car of Idaho stock due to over the weekend, expected to relieve the shortage here. No change in print prices were made.

Poultry prices are unchanged today with live hens still selling slowly. Commission houses look for a lower market during the coming week. Springs remained steady. Country dressed meats have been firm and scarce throughout the week with the top on veal firmly established at 16 1/2 cents while pork brought up to 20 cents. Cheese advanced this week in all lines and the market closed firm.

HOME IS ENTERED

The Terry Dunham home on South Stephens street was entered some time during last night, and a $20 bill taken from a dresser drawer. The bill apparently was taken after the family had retired for the night. The burglar took a package of silverware out of the drawer also, but apparently was seeking only money, and so did not take any of the jewelry or silverware in the house.

CRYING NEED AT BEND APTLY DEMONSTRATED

BEND, Ore., Aug. 8.—Pedestrians passing Police Chief Hanson's house today, noting tears running down the chief's face and a similar lachrymal display on the part of City Councilmen, immediately sensed dire happenings. An explosion had previously led to reports of the chief's home being bombed, black-hand hooding retaliation and a series of other rumors.

The police chief was trying out some tear bombs just secured for police purposes.

BELGIUM TO PAY ON ASSURANCES GIVEN BY WILSON

(Associated Press Local Wire.) NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Louis Strauss, 84-year-old dean of the Belgian house of deputies, arriving today for an official visit in this country, indicated that only an agreement between the United States government and the Belgian debt commission that was in keeping with the "armed assurances" of President Wilson during settlements following the armistice, would be accepted by the Belgian parliament. Asked if he believed a satisfactory arrangement on the debt could be reached by the United States and Belgium, Mr. Strauss said: "I hope so, because I have confidence enough in the good feeling of the United States to watch what we did during the World war."

KLAN MARCHES IN STREETS OF U. S. CAPITAL

Ashbury Park and Bloomfield had places near the front. Long Branch and Redbank marched side by side. Behind came a delegation from Essex county. Drill teams, variously garbed and going through their evolution as they marched along, were sprinkled freely along the line.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—The national capital was thronged with Ku Klux Klansmen today and Pennsylvania avenue was roped off for a parade of robed and hooded ranks in which Klan leaders expect fifty thousands would march from the capitol to the White House. Beginning in the early hours of the day, special trains rolled in to add thousands to the influx which set in yesterday.

Dusty motor caravans brought in other hundreds to participate in the demonstration which will continue throughout tomorrow night. Capital police, on duty in full force, were under orders to clear Pennsylvania avenue of all traffic 30 minutes before the scheduled start of the parade at 2 p. m. While robed women and children, families of the visiting Klansmen, will march with their men in the parade, with a flank of policemen keeping step. No masks will be worn by the paraders.

"Keep your eyes on the person in front of you" were final instructions issued to the marchers by Klan officials today in co-operating with police precautions against any chance of disorder. Leaders among the large negro element in Washington have given assurance to Police Inspector Grant that members of the race have been cautioned against letting any responsibility for possible disorder rest upon them and the marchers have added word of caution in their sermons. The police force, strategically assigned to watch the day's activities, expects no disorder, but it is prepared to squelch the first sign of it.

Breaking of ranks after the parade which, if the predicted number of marchers materialize, will continue well into the night, the visitors will gather in the Sylvan theatre in the Mall to hear addresses by Klan leaders. Amplifiers have been erected to throw the voices over a wide expanse of grounds surrounding the Washington monument.

Klan officials have been unsuccessful in their efforts to obtain the services of a negro band to sweet the chorus of their own bands in the parade. As the parade hour approached, Thomas Layman, who was arrested but later released yesterday, after distributing handbills assailing the Klan, announced that he would make a last minute attempt to stop the parade by seeking a court injunction against it.

The visitors will wind up their program tomorrow night with the burning of a fiery cross. An eighty foot tree with a cross piece thirty feet long, oil-soaked for the occasion, will provide the spectacle.

FARMERS NEWS

The Farmers' 103 Dollar (State Market Agent) Recent reports from the department of Agriculture, which have been widely copied by the press, state that the dollar received by the farmer for his products is above par and is equal to 103 in purchase of other commodities. At a recent dairyman's conference in Canada a resolution was passed asking the government to make payment for milk according to the butter fat content compulsory, irrespective of the purpose for which it was used. The dairymen pointed out that while many of the milk purchasers insisted on a minimum standard of butter fat, they did not pay patrons any bonus for milk that tested above the standard, and it resulted in herds with high butter fat being penalized. Demand for standards in all products is fast spreading over the country, and the state market agent thinks that it is but a matter of time when an upgrade product will have small chance on a popular market.

Cooperative Holdbacks

"Here is the situation as I see it," says C. E. Spence: "If farmers received fair prices on their products today the products would go to the consumers at so high prices they would not buy beyond absolute necessity—therefore prices would be forced down for lack of demand. And it seems to me that the cooperative movement has to go much further than simply pooling and selling collectively. The huge marketing expenses have got to be lowered, the middle profits largely eliminated, and freight and express charges come down. Solid organization can bring these about. If organized labor was strong enough to shut out emigration to a great extent, farm organization can cut out middle profits and get lower transportation rates."

Premium On Protein

The state grain inspector of Oklahoma in a bulletin to the wheat raisers urges them to have their wheat tested for protein, for he believes that high protein wheat will bring a premium. Many Oregon growers have their wheat tested by the state grain inspector department.

THE DAILIES MARKET PROGRESSING

A public market was started at The Dalles June 16, and Paul E. Fowler reports that it is growing steadily, notwithstanding that it is rather a hard proposition to make a success of such an undertaking in a city where credit is the rule. The market opened with six farmers selling, and sales averaged from $30 to $40 per day. July 19 there were thirteen sellings, the average was from $75 to $100 per day, and it is steadily increasing. The directors state that the undertaking is a decided success.

Want Quality Payments

At a recent dairyman's conference in Canada a resolution was passed asking the government to make payment for milk according to the butter fat content compulsory, irrespective of the purpose for which it was used. The dairymen pointed out that while many of the milk purchasers insisted on a minimum standard of butter fat, they did not pay patrons any bonus for milk that tested above the standard, and it resulted in herds with high butter fat being penalized. Demand for standards in all products is fast spreading over the country, and the state market agent thinks that it is but a matter of time when an upgrade product will have small chance on a popular market.
