LOS ANGELES USES 1000 CARLOADS OF FRUIT EACH WEEK

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 13.—It takes in round numbers something like 1,000 cars of fruits and vegetables per week to supply the consumers of Los Angeles and suburban towns. In other words, the rail loads of fruits and vegetables for the past six months—being about one-third of the total consumed, the other two-thirds coming by truck from the nearby sections—show a total of over 8,000 cars.

Records kept by the Bureau of Markets show how this grand total is made. Close checking by the Los Angeles office show that rail receipts average around 35 per cent, against truck receipts of 65 per cent. For a few items this proportion does not apply—bananas, for example, which come by steamship and rail entirely.

Oranges and lemons, on the other hand, will run 95 per cent by rail. About the same proportion is shown for all vegetables. Los Angeles during the first half of 1925, took 589 cars of apples, of which 319 were from California, 164 from Washington, 47 from Oregon and 6 from Idaho. Apricots reached 67 cars, cherries 172, and mixed fruit 61. Bananas made a new record with 1,113 cars, and figs, one of the new crops, which is fast finding a place in the markets, show 14 cars. Leading vegetables registered: Artichokes, 99; asparagus, 29; celery, 125; cucumbers, 29; cabbage, 35; lettuce, 644; tomatoes, California, 191; Mexico, 236; Mississippi, 1, and Texas 12, or a total of 540 cars.

Pineapples from Cuba registered 3 cars; peaches, 53; grapes, 11; plums, 42 and strawberries, 24. Of watermelons, rail receipts reached 671 cars, of which 19 were from Mexico, while 548 cars of cantaloupes were received.

Of onions, California supplied 188 cars; Colorado, 20; Idaho, 14; Oregon, 15; and Texas 19, making a total of 247. Of potatoes this market unloaded 2,557 cars, of which Idaho supplied 1,481 cars; California, 865; Minnesota, 28; Nevada, 67; Oregon, 50; Washington, 26; Colorado, 34; Wisconsin, 2; Utah, 1, and Michigan, 2.

It took 52 cars of sweet potatoes to supply the demand. Artichokes, 99; Oklahoma, 11, and Tennessee, 2, with only one from California.

Of the 57 cars of peppers, 32 were from Mexico. California peas registered 217 cars; rhubarb, 19; mixed vegetables, California, 59, and official report, which will be issued within a few days, will be well worth keeping for reference, since it will show receipts by months, thus indicating the particular periods when this market will absorb certain fruits and vegetables. So far as is known this is the first attempt to put out a summary of the actual unloads of any large market for the half-year period.

The big outstanding fact shown by the report is that for practically all fruits and vegetables the daily receipts by rail are only about one-third of the actual quantities received and consumed.

A BRIDE'S DIARY

A Love Story of Today By Idah McGlone Gibson

CLEO MOONLIGHT AND COLONEL BELDON.

Instead of going straight home from the hospital, I got into my little car and rode out into the country. I had to consult with myself, for notwithstanding all my tenderness, and all my feeling of sympathy and pity for Paul, the fact was borne upon me poignantly and conclusively that I did not love him any more.

I have often wondered, dear diary, what all these other women in the world who find themselves in the same position that I was, do. Of course I know that some of them get a divorce, and some of them go "muffling along" as Paul suggested.

I couldn't do this; and yet I knew that if Paul had been dying, I could not have touched my lips to his in a good night kiss when I left that hospital.

It was a gorgeous moonlight, and my mind was so occupied with my own problem that I was speeding along without thinking of where I was going. All at once I felt my eyes blinded with tears. I couldn't see the road before me. I turned the car sharply to one side and stopped it.

"What are you crying about, Cleo Armstrong?" I heard a voice asking and turned sharply around. For a moment I did not recognize my own voice. Then I added more naturally, to myself: "Surely you are not crying because you did not kiss Paul good night? You're not crying because you feel lonely without him, for you have been lonely ever since you have been at the post?"

No, I knew I was not crying for any of these things. I was crying because my dream was shattered; my whole house of cards which I had built so high had tumbled to the ground. Strange as it may seem, Paul did not enter into my grief at all. I was crying because love had fled.

I wonder, dear diary, if that is the first reaction that other women have under these circumstances. A poet once said: "In the first love a woman loves her lover, but ever after she loves the love." I think perhaps it is love that we all of us love all of the time, from first to last.

In my heart I knew that what Paul was grieving for was as well as I. I knew if I should go out of his life, he would probably think he was unhappy because he had lost love that his heart ached. A car sped by me, then turned around quickly and came back.

"What are you doing here, Mrs. Armstrong? Surely you are not in trouble!" It was Colonel Beldon who asked.

"Nothing in the matter, Colonel," I answered. "I just drove out here to think."

The Colonel laughed. "You are a queer child, Cleo. Can you only think far from the madding crowd? Don't you know you are liable to be held up?"

"I never thought about it, Colonel. I never have been held up."

"There is an old adage, my dear, which says there must always be a first time."

"Yes, yes, I know that, and I think it's a mean old adage, for somehow it always seems to imply that there is a power waiting to trip you into that first time."

Another car passed us slowly. The Colonel had left his motor and was resting one foot on the running board of my car, talking to me.

"What's the matter, Colonel—are you in trouble?" "Good Lord!" said the Colonel under his breath.

Both he and I recognized the voice of Major Ralston. "No, I just was driving this way and found Mrs. Armstrong having some tire trouble. I've just finished changing tires for her."

GERMANS COMPLAIN OF LIMIT PUT ON AERIAL PROGRESS

BERLIN, Aug. 12.—A number of leading aerial companies held a meeting in Berlin recently to protest against the limitations imposed upon aerial navigation by the note of the Ambassador's Conference. Acting as spokesman for the companies, Otto J. H. Merkel, director of the Deutscher Aero Lloyd, declared that the Treaty of Versailles had tied Germany's hands in regard to military aviation, but had granted absolute freedom to civil aeronautics.

On the strength of this pledge by 22 nations, he said, German aeronautic circles were not only justified, but in duty bound to guard the freedom of their civil aerial navigation.

The speaker emphasized that during the last five years German aeronautics strove industriously to establish good business connections with the aerial companies of neighboring countries. He maintained that all aerial navigation to be successful must be international and that if London or Moscow, for instance, could be reached as quickly by the aerial route as Munich from Berlin, the economic necessity for this mode of traffic was indubitably established.

Director Merkel stated that in Europe and America—but especially in the United States—all expenses entailed by the development of aerial navigation were defrayed by the state with the same promptness and readiness as formerly in the case of the wireless service. He pointed out that at Hendon, in England, the large traffic airplane, Vanguard, with two 650 horsepower Royce Condor motors and intended for 25 passengers, was a striking illustration of England's progress and that at last year's civil aviation contest in France the first prize had been awarded to Farman's four-motor Jabra intended for 14 passengers.

In Germany, however, the capacity of non-military planes was to be limited to nine passengers.

The speaker concluded, amid loud acclamations, that German aerial circles were determined to reject these severe and throttling restrictions by the Ambassador's Conference, as being unjustifiable in view of the actual results attained in this respect by France and England.

GOLF CONTENDER IS IN FINE FORM FOR TOURNAMENT

OAKMONT, Pa., August 12.—(A. P.)—Bobby J. Jones, Jr., of Atlanta, a stocky little veteran of golf competition, is well prepared to defend his national amateur title at the Oakmont Country Club in the tournament starting the last day of this month.

Bobby's record in tournament medal and match play for the last four years stands alone and figures show him to be the most consistently brilliant of American golfers. He finished second in the national open three years ago, won it in 1923, finished second again in 1924 and this year at Worcester he was defeated for the championship by Willie Macfarlane, only one stroke separating the professional and the amateur after 35 holes had been played.

Jones has grown up in golf, winning his first tournament in 1916 at the age of eight—a special children's event in Atlanta. Two years later he captured his club's junior event, and when 19 years old he reached the finals of the national amateur at Oakmont, losing to Davy Herron, 5 and 4. In gaining the finals Jones eliminated Jim Mantle, Bob Gardner, Rudy Knepper and W. C. Fowles, an astounding record.

In 1921 he was fifth in the national open and in the amateur lost to the then British champion, Willie Hunter, in the third round, after he had side-tracked Clarence Wolff and Dr. O. F. Wilting.

A year later Bobby encountered and irrepressible Sarzan at Skoide in the national open and finished second, one stroke behind. Then he proceeded to work through to the semi-finals of the amateur where he bowed to Jess Sweeter, 8 and 7. The year 1923 brought a different story and for the first time he won a national crown at Inwood in the open, although he had to defeat Bob Cruickshank in a playoff. He led the medalists with 149 in the amateur, but went down before Max Marston in the third round. Marston eventually won the championship in a battle with Sweeter.

Jones made an exceptional bid for double national honors in the open of 1924 at Oakland Hills, but again a professional who before the tournament was far from a favorite, Cyril Walker of Englewood, N. J., came through and Bobby had to content himself with second place. But he annexed the amateur crown after years of struggle, defeating George Von Elm at Merion in a final match that lasted only 28 holes.

Seotfield and Woodruff, proprietors of the South End Service Station, announce that their new business is far exceeding the expectations. The new service garage is now in operation and work has started on their cottages. They are very grateful for the patronage they have had so far, and ask that people come and give them a trial.

BRITON DIRECTS USE OF STILETTO AS POSITIVE DEATH INSTRUMENT

LONDON, Aug. 13.—(A. P.)—Sir George Greenwood, presiding recently at a meeting of the London Society for the Prevention of Premature Burial, said that he had given directions to those who would be his executors to plunge a stiletto into his heart after his death so as to make certain of it. He added that a school mate of his, who became a great surgeon, indicated that the stabbing process be carried out as a precaution. Sir George declared he had no faith in the present so-called modern methods of certifying death.

Miss Emily Aches, honorary secretary of the society, said that one of the best known men in England whose name was household word, had once been placed in a casket as dead, and when about to be buried was found to be quite well and alive, and he had lived for some twenty years afterward.
