WOODS IS WINNER OVER DAVIS; GETS STRAIGHT FALLS

In his second match against Charles Davis, pulled off at Marshfield last night, Sailor Woods, the Texas wrestler, registered a victory in two straight falls. The bout lacked one minute of one hour's duration. The Texan threw his man the first time at the end of 53 minutes, using a backward flying wing-lock. An arm scissors and waistlock put the shoulders of the Marshfield grappler to the mat in the next fall, at the end of 6 minutes. The match was fast and a big crowd witnessed it.

The first meeting of the two men, which occurred about three weeks ago, resulted in a decision for Woods after Davis had twice fouled him. Another Marshfield mat specialist, Tom Ray, rated as a much better man than Davis, will take on Woods in that city on the 27th of this month.

JOURNALIST, TO SAVE OTHERS TROUBLE, PENS HIS OWN OBIT

POSEN, Poland, Aug. 14.—Tadeusz Gubrynowicz, a Polish journalist, literally "died in harness" recently. Among his belongings in the hospital was found his own obituary written by himself a short time before his death.

It recounted the devotion of a real journalist to his work, and on behalf of those for whom he wrote. It contained this paragraph:

"Now, just before his death, he has at last found a moment for himself, which he devotes to penning his obituary, so as to take an additional burden from the shoulders of his colleagues, who also never have any time to spare."

Concluding the obituary, Gubrynowicz asked his readers, if they felt that he deserved to rest in peace, to say a brief prayer for him. Answering those who might say it was a clever way to solicit thousands of free blessings, he said:

"Even if it be so it will have been the first and certainly the last time in his life that he has acted the part of an exploiter or profiteer."

GLENDALE HOME THREATENED BY FIRE TUESDAY

A fire of undetermined origin Tuesday evening at 5:15 o'clock razed three buildings at the home of Mrs. Anna Snyder on Gilbertson avenue. The fire had gained much headway before being discovered and before the fire department arrived on the scene and had eaten its way to two adjoining buildings and for a time threatened her home which stood but about fifteen feet from the nearest building, says the Glendale News.

The pressure of the city water was low, due to a great many citizens sprinkling their lawns at that time in the evening, and again the chemical engine saved the day when it checked the flames until the department could get their hose strung out and the water playing on the fire. When the auxiliary pumping plant was turned into play the pressure immediately came up and the firemen were able to combat the flames which were soon under control, though it was over an hour before the fire was completely subdued.

It looked for a time that the home and several adjacent buildings were doomed to go, and had it not been for the heroic efforts of all who were there this probably would have been the case. Everyone helped even to the little boys, who carried water in buckets and fought the fire out of the grass that surrounded the buildings and from setting fire to the adjoining buildings while the firemen worked on the main fire. Others carried out furniture from the house and assisted as best they could and when the danger was over they all pitched in and carried the furniture back again.

M'MILLAN PLANE DAMAGED IN BASE LOCATION SEARCH

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—With one of its planes temporarily out of commission, the MacMillan Arctic expedition is going ahead with the other two to establish an intermediate base at Flagler Fjord, on Ellesmere Island, about 100 miles from Etah, Greenland, he main base.

The airplane NA-2 was damaged at Etah during a storm yesterday. She was put aboard the steamer Bowdoin to be repaired. The planes NA-1 and NA-3 weathered the storm safely.

Flagler Fjord was decided upon for a sub-base between Etah and Cape Thomas Hubbard on Axel Heiburg Island, where the advance flying base will be located during a reconnaissance flight Tuesday night. It was planned to place supplies there last night.

For washed sand and gravel, and plaster sand see Rudolph Harness, Shady Point, or leave orders at Marksbury store.

MANY NEW SETTLERS COMING INTO STATE

The first ten days of August have registered fifteen homeseekers, who have called at the Land Settlement Department of the Portland Chamber of Commerce for information on Oregon.

Nine new settlers have been reported so far for August. Five were reported by the Oregon City Chamber of Commerce as having located in Clackamas county. They are W. T. McDonald from Stafford, Kansas; D. Hauff, Lodi, Calif.; J. J. Walsh, Winnemucca, Nev.; J. B. Trail, Oakland, Calif., and Carl Ulsky recently from Nashua, Mont.

It was also reported that Geo. W. Hines, of Los Angeles, had bought 38 acres in Jackson county, and E. M. Carl, Onaga, Kansas, had bought 17 acres in Josephine county.

Among those who are interested in locating in Oregon and who are at the present time looking over the country, is G. E. Josephson, of New Windsor, Ill. Mr. Josephine is an experienced horticulturist and is interested in the walnut industry in Oregon. He is now looking over Yamhill county with a view to locating. F. A. Ramsey, of Maricopa, Calif., who is visiting his cousin, Frank Ramsey at Forest Grove, is favorably impressed with what he has seen of Oregon, and is thinking of locating here. M. E. Culbertson, Yakima, Wash., is here looking for a sheep ranch.

Arthur Foster, who recently succeeded W. G. Ide, as manager of the Land Settlement Department, is looking for an increase of out-of-the-state arrivals during the latter part of August. During the 1924 season, according to Mr. Foster, the rush at the Portland Municipal Auto Camp was after August 15th.

NEW BASIC ELEMENT, HAFNIUM, TURNED IN-TO METALLIC FORM

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 14.—Two ounces of the new basic element, hafnium, have been produced in metallic form, one ounce of which has been sent to the United States. It is understood that the new element may be successfully used in the manufacture of audion lamps for radio.

Niels Bohr, discoverer of hafnium and winner of the Nobel prize for physics in 1922, was not able at first to turn the new element into metallic form. He has now, however, accomplished this, assisted by Poul Berglund, a civil engineer. Success was attained by oxygenization of a substance called alvit, found in Norway and France, and containing six per cent hafnium.

A BRIDE'S DIARY

A Love Story of Today

By Idah McGlone Gibson

Cleo Madison, after eloping with her boyhood sweetheart, Lieutenant Paul Armstrong, goes to his army post and she finds out almost immediately that married life is not too rosy. There is much intrigue at the post. Rita Thorndike, wife of a no-good lieutenant, flees from the post after much gossip about her and Col. Blakely Beldon. Cleo helps Rita and resolves not to let her own name become the subject of gossip. Paul exhibits a passion for gambling; loses $500 to the Colonel one night, pays, and loses $500 to a pair of cheap gamlers the next night. He is broke and gives the gamblers his wife's car in settlement of the debt. Cleo is furious; the colonel wants to help and Paul is somewhat sullen. The quarrels between Cleo and her husband increases, culminating when Cleo throws a vase and cuts Paul so badly, he has to take to the hospital. "Do I love Paul?" Cleo wonders.

"COME QUICKLY, MRS. ARMSTRONG"

When I got back to my apartment I hadn't time to fret about what Major Ralston thought of Colonel Belden's and by being out on a lonely road at the time of night he found us and the lie the Colonel used in excuse. I found Johnson and an orderly pacing up and down in front of my house.

"What's the matter, Johnson?" I asked, frightened. "Is Mr. Armstrong worse?"

"Now, don't worry, Mrs. Armstrong. Be calm," said the orderly in one of those patronizing tones that men use to women when they have something dreadful to impart.

"How can I worry when I do not know anything to worry about?" I answered quickly. "What has happened? Why are you here?" (I hate these people who are always telling one not to worry, not to cry, not to get nervous.)

"Tell me, Johnson, what is the matter? Why were you pacing up and down here waiting for me?" I commanded peremtorily.

Johnson, who had not spoken, came forward.

"Lieutenent Armstrong's wound opened again, and they had a hard time staunching the blood. Before the doctors and nurses succeeded in doing so, the Lieutenant became very, very weak. Major Ralston thought you should be notified, and when I told him you were not at home, he volunteered to drive out the desert road and see if he could find you. He said he had seen you go out that way a little while before. He asked me to stay here so that if he missed you, I could inform you of the Lieutenant's condition."

"Is the wound all right now?" I asked.

"Yes, I think so," he answered, "but Lieutenant Armstrong is so weak he cannot speak. Major Stetter is waiting at the hospital to see you."

"Why didn't you say that before? That should have been the first thing you told me," I remarked impatiently as I wheeled about and started down the street toward the hospital. I didn't know I was going so fast until I heard both men puffing a little as they followed after me at a smart dog trot.

"I'm a murderer. I'm a murderer!" I kept repeating breathlessly to myself as I ran down the street. It was an awful thought. I saw myself standing in the dark cell, and my name in big headlines in the paper.

"Oh, I didn't mean to! I didn't mean to!" I whispered to myself.

I was terror-stricken at the thought * * * I, Cleo Armstrong, * * * murderer of my husband * * * I was almost sure Paul would die. * * * These two men were keeping something from me. * * *

As I neared the hospital door my steps began to lag. I was choking. My breath was cold as it came across my lips * * * Perspiration like ice water * * *

What if Paul was already dead? What if I should have to go direct to the authorities from the hospital and give myself up—for of course if Paul should die I would tell my story.

What a failure I had been as a wife! I had thought I was going to be so happy—make Paul so happy. I wondered if those other murdresses had been as unconscious of doing anything wrong as I had been.

The thought was so appalling that my knees gave out completely. I crumpled up and would have fallen if Johnson had not put out his hand and jerked me to my feet. The orderly came to his help, and between them they half carried me through the door, where I was met by a nurse.

Before she got to me I heard her say to some one: "Here she comes. Keep quiet."

Then she turned to me and said: "Don't worry, Mrs. Armstrong. Don't worry."

I turned to Johnson, hardly knowing and certainly not caring what I said or did.

"If anyone tells me again not to worry, I think I shall scream. Find out immediately how my husband is, and tell him I am here." In a few minutes the doctor came into the room.

"Major, tell me, tell me immediately, how is my husband?"

He opened his mouth, and I could see the words "Don't worry" forming on his lips.

"Don't tell me not to worry, Major. You know it is impossible for a wife not to worried about her husband, and I have more cause than most wives."

Major Stetter looked embarrassed, and I knew that I had the right hunch when I decided he was going to tell me not to fret.

TWO WEEKS SALE IS ANNOUNCED

The Rexall Drug store is putting on a special sale beginning tomorrow and which continues to the end of the month. There are a whole lot of things that are listed in the announcement in this issue that careful buyers will be glad to get at the big reductions offered. The store is today undergoing a preparation for the sale, and everything will be in readiness for the event when tomorrow comes. This sale is announced as a "Factory to You" affair, and the factories that are partially owned by the Rexall Stores supply the merchandise direct, and in this way the "middleman" is eliminated. Articles included in the sale range all the way in price from seven cents to a dollar and upward, and in every case the buyer gets the benefit of a saving that will be appreciated. In the goods offered are toilet articles, creams, family medicines, household needs, rubber goods, candy and a lot of things everybody has to keep handy for daily uses. It is not a one cent sale, but is next of kin to those events that have given the Rexall wide favor in this city heretofore.

Sister Walked to Church

"Physicians had given my sister up to die; they wanted to operate for gall stones, but she was too weak and could only talk in whispers. I got her a bottle of Mayr's Wonderful Remedy and in 3 weeks she was able to get about and walked a mile to church." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. At all druggists.

PEAR HARVEST NOW UNDER WAY.

Harvesting of Bartlett pears started in several orchards here Tuesday and will be carried forward as rapidly as possible until the work is completed, says the Sutherlin Sun. While the local crop of Bartletts will be small this season, the pears are of good size and the quality excellent.

The local crop of Bartletts, which is estimated at about five carloads, has been purchased by Guy Conner and will be shipped to the canners at Woodburn. The price paid for the local fruit ranged from $56 to $80 per ton, the highest price was paid to C. Hamilton. In several cases the lower prices paid were for orchard run.

The crop of Bosc and Howell pears which will be ready to harvest some weeks later, will be small but of good quality. Continued rains just at the time when the trees were in full blossom, is thought to be the cause of a crop shortage this season.

Among the pear growers in the Sutherlin valley are: Martin Lloyd, E. C. Ewans, Mark N. Tisdale, W. S. Duer, W. J. Ladd, J. C. Campbell, R. N. Pickens, David Grieve, George Neal, C. W. Hartley, E. F. Simpson, William Cobb, Vilas Brown, J. E. Swinden, Wilson Hartshorn.

SINNOTT ADVISES IRRIGATIONISTS TO WAIT, WATCH, HOPE

BEND, Ore., Aug. 14.—Watchful, patient waiting, not entirely devoid of hope for a brighter future, about sums up the trend of Congressman Sinnott's speech delivered at a banquet at Madras held in entertaining the congressional delegation in Central Oregon this week for an inspection of the north unit irrigation project.

In referring to published accounts of the irrigation situation in Oregon and all that has been said in regard to the present status, Congressman Sinnott likened himself to the little colored boy, who was lined up with others and asked what they would like to eat.

The first boy said watermelon, the second possum, etc. When the last boy was asked what he would like he replied:

"Boss, what am there left for me?—the rest just done said it all."

In referring to published acts a result of the recent tour of Secretary of the Interior Work, the congressman said:

"We can do nothing but wait. I don't believe they know themselves what they are going to do. Secretary Work believed the state should finance the projects and the state has not appropriations for such. That, to me, seems to briefly sum up the situation. As to the outcome, we can but wait, watch and hope."

Senators McNary and Congressman Crumpacker also addressed the same meeting briefly complimenting the unit settlers on their work.

Congressman Sinnott last night stated he may remain here for a couple of days, then leave for Klamath Falls and Crater Lake.

"Our trip was made to study the Central Oregon irrigation situation more closely and also to get acquainted with our people."

EVANS MUST MAKE BETTER SHOWING TO WIN TOURNAMENT

OAKMONT, Pa., Aug. 14.—Charles (Chick) Evans, Jr., of Chicago, only man to win the national open and amateur golf titles in one year must make a remarkable recovery from his present form if he is to be a factor in the 1925 amateur event at the Oakmont Country Club, August 31 to September 5.

Evans obtained both championships in 1916 and held them for three years as there were no tournaments in 1917 and 1918 because of the war. Crowded from the top by Francis Ouimet in the third round of the 1919 play, he regained the crown a year later and at the same time had sweet revenge, for Ouimet was his victim and the score very one-sided, 7 and 6. For five years he occupied the place in golf that Bobby Jones does today.

Of late he has been unable to maintain a championship stride. Only this year he failed to qualify in the mid-western district for the national open and last year in the amateur Ruddy Knepper turned him back in the first round by the overwhelming margin of 9 and 7.

Evans was born in Indianapolis in 1890 and learned golf as a caddy after moving to Chicago when a small boy. He came into prominence in 1910 when he won the Western open championship at the Beverly Golf Club, Chicago. He captured the Western amateur title eight times within the period of 1909 and 1922.

Illness and injury have had much to do with Chick's career. In 1914 he made his second invasion of Europe—the first time he went on a cattle boat—and in France seeking honors he fell down stairs before his second round match. Then he returned to America to suffer a sprained ankle on the eve of the national open, but hobbling around he missed a putt by two inches to lose the title. Walter Hagen first came to notice by winning that year.

In the 1923 amateur Evans tied Jones for the medal with 149 but was defeated by Willie Hunter in the first round.
