FORMER DOUGLAS COUPLE RECALLS INDIAN OUTBREAK

The Portland Oregonian of August 16 contains the pictures of Mr. and Mrs. Darius H. Smyth, residents of Harney county, Oregon, who were married at the old Hotel McClellan in Roseburg by Judge Finley Watson in the early 60's. They are Oregon pioneers and survivors of the Indian war of 1878 that scourged the settlement of Happy Valley, near the town of Burns. The article that accompanies their picture says: "Accustomed to dangers and hardships as were all early Oregon settlers, the most trying experiences faced by these sturdy trail-blazers came in the summer of 1878 when the Bannocks and Putes combined under Chief Buffalo Horn and attacked the white settlement in Happy Valley. George C. Smyth, father and John, brother of Darius, stood off 800 Indians until they were finally killed, but not until they had taken heavy toll among the redskin warriors. Darius took part in the battle with these Indians at the Battle Ground, east of Riley.

Darius Smyth was born in Lincoln county, Missouri, in 1844, and crossed the plains by covered wagon to Eugene, Ore., in 1853. Mrs. Nellie Mynatt Smyth came to Oregon with her pioneer parents in 1853, also settling in Lane county. Both moved to Douglas county later and after their marriage there moved to their present residence at Happy Valley in 1874. Their children include Claude, Cory, Darius H. Jr., Mrs. Pearl Hamilton and Mrs. Myrtle Moore, all of Harney county.

GOING TO FRISCO FOR MARKET WEEK

Mrs. Alma Harness, manager of the local Marksbury store, expects to leave Thursday for San Francisco, to attend the market week merchandising event in the southern city. The local store, which has been undergoing alterations for several weeks, is now respondent in the new interior arrangement is certainly one of the most attractive places of Roseburg. With the new carpets down, new draperies at windows and balcony, and the panels on both sides of the store, there is nothing left to be desired in the way of improvements. Under this new arrangement the room has been lengthened considerably, making ample space for the ever increasing business of the establishment, and ladies of Roseburg and adjacent communities will appreciate the efforts of the management to make the place "comfy" and homelike for them when shopping.

EVANGELIST TALKS TO LARGE CROWD

A large crowd, estimated at about 600, attended the revival service last night at the tent on Rose street. Alice Wilson Parham, lady evangelist, spoke on the subject, "What Seek Ye." She questioned the audience as to their reason for coming to the service, naming those who came for curiosity, for relief from sorrows, because they enjoyed the music and those who came to seek the Lord, who is not far off, but right in Roseburg, she said.

"People are seeking for a good time, wealth fame or position," said the evangelist, "but the Bible commands us to seek the kingdom of God and His righteousness and all these things shall be added unto you." Many people nowadays are looking after their business, their family or pleasure and leaving God to the last, but the people who neglect Christ though they may have riches and seemingly good times, are not happy nor peaceful, but on the contrary money and pleasure have been the ruin of thousands who have made them their gods.

The evangelist said the world would never prosper as it should until people came into obedience to God. "Though people may be moral and seemingly upright," she urged, "unless they have given their hearts to Christ they are not satisfied or beneficial to the community."

She told the story of some of her own experiences before she became a Christian and how when she gave her heart to Jesus everything was changed and real contentment came into her life. The secret of true happiness is found in seeking Christ first, she stated. A great number responded to the call for those who would start to put Christ first.

The subjects which the evangelist will discuss this week are: Monday, "Are There Modern Monarchs?"; Tuesday, "One Hundred Fifty Days at Sea"; Wednesday, "A Kiss in the Dark."

LEEPER DOME HEAD DRILLER RECOVERS

W. L. Cobb, general manager of the Leeper Dome oil drilling operations near Oakland, reported this morning that drilling has been continued at the regular 24-hour shift today with the return of the head driller, J. J. Woodruff, to the field. Mr. Woodruff was recently injured and work was somewhat handicapped by his inability to be on the job. Mr. Cobb reports today, however, that drilling is going good and that he is pleased with the progress being made.

JAPAN MAY BUILD BASEBALL PARK IN GARDEN OR SHRINE

TOKYO, Aug. 17.—(A. P.)—The spirits of the ancient lords of Japan may be expected to hold an indignation meeting if plans promulgated by leading Japanese architects with the return of the head driller, J. J. Woodruff, to the field. Mr. Woodruff was recently injured and work was somewhat handicapped by his inability to be on the job. Mr. Cobb reports today, however, that drilling is going good and that he is pleased with the progress being made.

It is reported that the association of the Meiji Shrine is interested in the plans and might be expected to contribute 400,000 yen to the work. If the baseball park idea should prove successful, it is hoped that wrestling halls, tennis courts, swimming pools and other athletic courts can be added so as to make the external grounds of the shrine one complete national playground.

A BRIDE'S DIARY

A Love Story of Today
By Idaho McGlone Gibson

Cleo Madison, after eloping with her boyhood sweetheart, Lieutenant Paul Armstrong, goes to his army post and she finds out almost immediately that married life is not too rosy. There is much fatigue at the post. Rita Thordike, wife of a no-good lieutenant, flies from the post after much gossip about her and Col. Binkley Nelson. Cleo helps Rita and resolves not to let her own name become the subject of gossip. Paul exhibits a passion for gambling; loses $500 to the Colonel one night, pays, and loses $500 to a pair of cheap gamblers the next night. He is broke and gives the gamblers his wife's car in settlement of the debt. Cleo is furious; the Colonel wants to help and Paul is somewhat sullen. The quarrel between Cleo and her husband increases, culminating when Cleo throws a vase and cuts Paul so badly, he has to take to the hospital. "Do I love Paul?" Cleo wonders.

She is quite hysterical when Maj. (Dr.) Stetter tells her how ill Paul is.

FULL CONFESSION.

When I confessed to Major Stetter the disgraceful fact that I had lost my temper and thrown a vase that had cut my husband's head, I broke down and began to cry. The Major came over and raised my head. He looked me in the face with a kind smile upon his lips. Still there was a peculiar expression on his face as he said in an undertone: "That accounts for it."

He seemed to have forgotten me as a personality. He had just heard something that cleared up a doubt in his mind. I was sure of that, and it was confirmed the moment after his said.

"I knew, Mrs. Armstrong that your husband was not telling the truth about the wound, for your andirons would not have made such a jagged hole. Besides, I found a minute piece of porcelain when I was probing the wound."

"Oh Major, you don't think that Paul will die, do you? I don't want to tell this to everybody, and you know Paul doesn't want everyone to know it, for he's got it even from you. I think I'm cured—I think I will never let my temper run away with me again."

"You can see what a terrible position I am in. Suppose the gossiping women at the Post should hear of this—why they would treat me worse than they treated Mrs. Thordike. They wouldn't understand that I did it to hurt my husband and they would say whatever and perhaps they would be right. But I contend, Major, that it is a very human thing to do, after all. Paul had been gambling."

"Yes, I know," said Major Stetter compassionately. "I was one of the party at Colonel Nelson's the night he lost five hundred dollars. I could tell by his face it was a great blow to him, and I said as much to the Colonel after he went away."

"You see, my dear, sometimes we old fellows who have plenty of money forget that the young chaps like your husband have no right to lose a lot of money for an evening's entertainment. Perhaps we are more to blame even than he was. I felt very sorry for you, because we found out directly that he had no income outside his lieutenant's pay, and we knew you two children were having hard enough work to live on it without young Armstrong losing five dollars, much less five hundred, at cards."

"You know, Major, Colonel Nelson tried to return the money to Paul. I wouldn't let him do this, because I thought even though part of it would come out of my Paul ought to learn by sad experience what it meant. I was spreading him about all that this evening. It made him very angry and he said something that kindled a raging fire of wrath in me."

"Words meant nothing. I could not think of any words that were adequate to answer what I considered a crowning insult. I wanted to hurt him—I wanted to hurt him physically. The vase was on the table beside me, and I let it fly. I never dreamed that if I should hit him, it would be as serious as it is. In fact, I did not think of anything consciously. I expect that subconsciously I had an idea that only by hurting him physically could I make him understand how much he had hurt me mentally."

"Not anything but violent action could have purged my soul at that time of its overpowering rage. Of course, his moment I did not

SURTAX RATE CUT DUE IN CONGRESS

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)
PLYMOUTH, Vt., Aug. 17.—Final action on a tax reduction bill by the House before the Christmas recess or soon thereafter was prompted by President Coolidge today to Representative Tilson of Connecticut, who will be the republican floor leader in the next session.

Taking advantage of the visit here of Secretary Mellon and Senator Smoot, who is chairman of the finance committee, the president went over the tax reduction program with the representatives of the house, senate and treasury.

Secretary Mellon presented tentative estimates showing the effect on the treasury of certain reductions and later Mr. Tilson predicted a cut in the surtax rate to a maximum of 20 per cent, or even 15 per cent on the basis of the treasury figures.

The monument is surrounded by an iron fence and the epitaph was written by President Thomas Jefferson, whom Lewis served as private secretary. Lewis was buried in 1809.
