$40,000 STOLEN GEMS RECOVERED; THIEVES IN JAIL

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 20. — Jewelry value at $40,000, stolen yesterday by thre thugs who held up the woman proprietor of the Silveira jewelry shop near the Ferry building, was recovered today with the arrest of three men who gave the names of Leo J. Tyma, P. M. McVicker and C. V. Murphy. Police said all three have police records.

Tyma was arrested today in a stolen auto in chase through the down-town streets. Part of the stolen loot was found on him, the police said. McVicker, who police say, has police records in Seattle and Spokane, and Murphy were captured later in a hotel. A portion of the loot was in the room and the balance was found in a suit case in the basement of an apartment house.

FRENCH LABOR WANTS WAGE GUARANTEE LIKE THAT ACCORDED BONDS

PARIS, Aug. 20.—Finance Minister Caillaux's gold coupon loan has made guarantees against risks of loss through depreciation of the franc the question of the day.

Labor agitators says that the workingman is entitled to the same guarantee as the investor and that wages must be guaranteed in the same ratio as interest on bonds. The movement has extended to office employes, functionaries and state pensioners. Its supporters find their argument in the government's loan prospectus and some apprehension might be entertained as to the consequences if it were not for the reassurance furnished by bankers and financial experts who believe the Minister of Finance has a safe margin in the rate of guarantee of 95 francs to the pound. They agree generally that the franc ought not remain long below that figure and that it may even rise above it slightly if the gold coupon loan turns out to be the success that it now promises.

With the floating loan reduced to innocuous proportions Caillaux, they predict will be able to put through parliament at the next session the new taxes with which he proposes to provide a sinking fund for debts, then there will be no longer any reason to apprehend disaster to the franc.

It is pointed out in reply to the demands of labor that the workingman is far better off generally than the small bondholder. His wages as compared with the prewar rates have been quadrupled while office salaries, government pay and pension rates have not been doubled on the average. They are in paradise, it is remarked, as compared to the small investor whose rate of interest on pre-war investments has remained the same and whose capital has dwindled to half the original investment. The latter has no way of increasing his income or of preventing the scaling down of his capital, while the laborer has amply succeeded in solving the problem for himself, it is argued.

DUBLIN PLANS PRETENTIOUS CENOTAPH FOR WAR HEROES

DUBLIN, Aug. 20.—A. P.)—The Chief Commissioner of Police in Dublin, who served as a colonel in the British army during the European war, has recommended the acceptance of the offer of the national war memorial committee to acquire Merrion Square, erect a great war memorial or cenotaph there and hand the square over to the city as a public park.

On the appeal of the late Earl of Ypres, when Viceroy, a large sum was subscribed to commemorate the service of the Irish troops in the war. The money has remained idle ever since and $200,000 now is available for the Merrion Square project. This is the largest of the great squares of Dublin and the proposal to convert it into a public park, rivalling St. Stephens Green is recommended as a boon to the poor population and the children of the poor streets in the neighborhood who acquire a playground.

Merrion Square is at present the private property of the owner of the houses on it, and an act of parliament will be necessary to effect the transfer.

WEALTHY FLORIDA MAN ACCUSED OF POISONING WOMAN

MIAMI, Fla., Aug. 21. — John Gobel, wealthy Daytona real estate dealer, is being held without bail here today following the recommendation of a coroner's jury yesterday that he be detained in connection with the death of Mrs. H. B. Hunt. Testimony was given at the inquest indicating that Gobel poisoned the woman and had confessed to one of the officers. It was also intimated he later attempted to bribe County Solicitor Robert R. Taylor, Jr., and Deputy Sheriff L. A. Short. Dr. Grimes, who attended the woman before her death, said she kept saying: "Why did he do it?" and repeatedly mentioned Gobel.

When the woman began to cry, stating Gobel had poisoned her, Gobel said, "don't mind her boys; that's her alibi—she's a doper," Deputy Sheriff Latham testified. He added that the girl put her arms around Gobel's neck and asked him "why did you give me that?" but Gobel only pushed her away. Later, the witness said, when talking with Gobel about the case, he said, "I'm sorry I did it. I'm sorry."

FIRE EATS CROPS IN KLAMATH; WORK TO SAVE TIMBER

KLAMATH FALLS, Ore., Aug. 21.—Unless there is a sudden change of wind, the fire which is now burning through peat land and volunteer crops of oats on the west side of Klamath lake will not strike the green timber, according to a report early today by Jack Kimball, secretary of the Klamath Forest Protective Association.

The fire had already burned over nearly 600 acres of peat land on the farm of Seimens and Bloomingcamp, and was still burning steadily this morning. Forest rangers, are combatting the flames in a determined effort to keep them from the stands of green timber near by.

POOR CONDITION BABE RUTH WILL CUT HIS SALARY

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—A dispatch from Cleveland to the New York Evening World today says that Babe Ruth, home run king, will not receive his salary of $52,000 a year when his present contract expires, and he signs a new one.

A slump in his batting, which now is under .250 for this season, will result in reduction in his pay, says the dispatch.

When the present season ends, Ruth will hike to the Canadian woods to get his legs into shape and try to recover his batting eye, thereby preventing the salary reduction, according to the dispatch.

"Manager Ruggins and Yankee officials," it said, "have talked matters over with the Bambinoo and they did not mince any words in explaining to him that he would face a big cut in his salary unless he changed his tactics."

A BRIDE'S DIARY

A Love Story of Today

By Idah McGlone Gibson

The Story So Far.

Cleo Madison after eloping with her boyhood sweetheart, Lieutenant Paul Armstrong, goes to his army post and she finds out almost immediately that married life is not too rosy. There is much intrigue at the post. Rita Thorndike, wife of a no-good lieutenant, flees from the post after much gossip about her and Col. Blakely Beldon. Cleo helps Rita and resolves not to let her own name become the subject of gossip. Paul exhibits a passion for gambling; loses $500 to the colonel one night, pays, and loses $500 to a pair of cheap gamblers the next night. He is broke and gives the gamblers his wife's car in settlement of the debt. Cleo is furious; the colonel wants to help and Paul is somewhat sullen. One angry word follows another after the colonel leaves. Cleo finally becomes so enraged at an insult from Paul that she throws a vase at him. It hits his head, makes a nasty gash and Paul is now in the hospital at death's door, due to the wound. Chick Adams, an old sweetheart, drops in at the army post and offers a blood transfusion to save Paul. The offer is accepted. He is now talking with Cleo in the hospital preparatory to undergoing the transfusion operation.

CHICK AND CLEO

"Although you may not know it, Chick, what you are going to do for Paul is for me too. He would probably die if you did not give him some of your blood: It seems to me it's the finest thing a man could do in all the world for his friend. Helping a man to live at any cost to yourself is much better than dying for him." I was silent a moment. Then I said: "Yes, there is something you can do for me, Chick. I wish you would wire Dad to come down here."

"Your father will be here late this afternoon, as well as Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong. That was one of the first things the doctor told me when I got in."

"Then it is true!" I whispered thickly. "Paul is going to die."

"They have not given up hope yet. Indeed, the regimental doctor says that his living until now is in his favor. He says, however, that Paul has had a very close call."

"Chick, I did it."

"Did what?"

"I killed Paul."

"Dear Cleo, are you crazy? Paul is still alive. Nobody has killed him yet."

"But you know, Chick, he's going to die, or they would not have sent for his folks — and Chick, I tell you I did it—I did it."

Chick seized my hand quickly in his.

"Snap out of it, Cleo, snap out of it. You must not let yourself think such fantastic things."

"It is not fantastic, Chick. It's a fact."

"Look here, Cleo," said Chick earnestly, as though he were talking to an imaginative child. "You know you're all wrong. Paul slipped and hit his head on the andirons of your fireplace. The doctor told me Paul told him this just before the wound opened again and he had the second hemorrhage. It's no wonder the doctor told me not to excite you."

He put his hand on my forehead. It was damp with cold perspiration, instead of feverish as he expected to find it.

"I think I had better go get the doctor right away."

"Don't go, Chick. Just sit down here by my bed and listen to what I have to say. Don't close your mind to my sanity. I was never more rational. I know poor Paul told Major Stetter that he fell and hurt himself, and in doing so he lied like a gentleman. The truth of the matter is, Paul and I had been quarreling, and I picked up a vase and shied it at him. If he—he—Oh, Chick, I can't bear it. I can't bear it."

"You know you are brave enough to bear anything that comes to you. You know you did not really mean it. You know you did not really mean to hurt Paul. When he is strong enough to talk he will be the first to say so. Last, and perhaps least, you know I'll stand by you."

"Does the doctor think there is any chance for him?"

"Of course there is. As soon as he gets a quart of blood he'll feel like a fighting cock. Cleo, I don't think it was just chance that sent me down here. I thought I wanted to try out my new car, that I wanted to see Paul, that I was lonely for the sound of your gay voice."

"You can't give him that much blood, Chick," I interrupted.

"Of course, I'm not going to give all that to him—I was only joking. You take things too seriously, Cleo, darl—" Chick stopped suddenly as though some one had put a hand over his mouth.

I pretended not to notice, but oh, dear diary, I hope you will understand when I tell you I was glad that Chick was going to say "darling." I felt so forlorn. I had been so alone. My vaunted independence had dropped from me like a ragged cloak, and left me cold and shivering and frightened. Yes, I was glad that I knew he still cared enough for me to call me "darling."

I wanted some one about me who loved me unquestioningly, who cared for me even though he knew I was guilty of wounding Paul so grievously. It just seemed as though I could not wait until I saw my dear old Daddy, for upon his breast I could weep my troubled heart out, even while nestling within his protecting arms.

"Do you suppose, Chick, the major will let me go in and see Paul before he goes into the operating room? Surely he will not keep me here."

COOLIDGES SPEND DAY AT OLD HOME WITH JUST FOLKS

NORTHAMPTON, MASS., Aug. 21.—Back in his home town for a fleeting call, President Coolidge visited today with old friends and neighbors and continuing on his way to Swampscott.

Men and women who knew Calvin Coolidge as a struggling attorney, a city councilman, mayor, member of the legislature, lieutenant-governor and governor, joined in respectfully honoring him as president.

A limited number of intimate friends had access to the home of Mrs. Elmira Goodhue, the president's mother-in-law where he and Mrs. Coolidge were overnight guests.

The president and his wife arrived here late yesterday after a 135-mile dusty automobile ride from Plymouth, Vermont, where they had spent six days at the home of the president's father. Their departure from North Ampton today was timed to permit them to be back at the summer White House before nightfall.

Shortly after his arrival here, the president signed the Belgian debt agreement, brought here for his signature.

Despite his gruelling motor trip yesterday, Mr. Coolidge after supper rode to the building where he once had law offices, climbed a flight of stairs hoping to find his old law partner, Judge Ralph Heminway, but returned home disappointed. Profiting by his experience of last night, President Coolidge armed himself with a key to his law office, returned to the building, in which it is located and succeeded in gaining admittance through the door which bears the lettering "Calvin Coolidge-Ralph Heminway, law office."

Judge Heminway joined the president and for half an hour they indulged in reminiscences and discussed personal matters. The office walls are lined with law books belonging to Mr. Coolidge and when he returned to the Goodhue home, he took a batch of papers along for later perusal.

Mrs. Coolidge spent the morning visiting with her mother. Photographers and movie men, standing outside the house in a drizzle, were rewarded when Mrs. Coolidge and Mrs. Goodhue came out on the porch and posed for pictures.

To please the photographers, Mrs. Coolidge went back into the house, returning with "Beans," a Boston terrier, who once lived at the White House, but because of his inability to get along with the other dogs, has been making his home with Mrs. Goodhue for a year or more. With the pup clasped in her arms, Mrs. Coolidge posed for another series of photographs.

MA STRIBLING IS AGAINST FOOTBALL FOR HER BIG BOY

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Aug. 21.—Young Stribling, the school boy pugilist, arrived here yesterday in his "bungalow on wheels" on his return trip to Georgia after traveling through 21 states.

Those on the street who noticed the big automobile with "Stribling" painted all over it, perhaps also noticed the quiet-like woman in the machine with her family.

In a good looking, dimpled woman of 37, Young Stribling has found a rare degree of service. For him she is fight promoter, manager, "second" and chum, as well as mother.

To serve her son, "Ma" Stribling takes up her domestic tent and hitches it wherever the gong rings for Young Stribling to enter the ring.

"Ma" Stribling raised her boy to be a fighter, and a winner. In 99 fights, the battling Georgian has never been knocked down.

"He gets his strength from me," "Ma" Stribling said. "I have seven brothers and more than six feet tall, all weighing more than 200 pounds."

Young Stribling stands five feet 11 and weighs 167 pounds. "Ma" Stribling is only 17 years older than her boy. She was married down South at 16 to a man she saw for the second time on her wedding day. The courtship was carried on through correspondence.

Stribling intends, after the hoped-for fight with Dempsey, to go to college and favors Yale. "Ma" Stribling says she will never permit her son to play college football.

"My, that game is too rough for my boy."
