

TWENTY-YEAR-OLD KILLER BACK IN STATE PRISON TO AWAIT DEATH ON GALLOWES

If Kelly was actually there. Then realizing that the murderer was "pulling" some of the stuff that has made him a page one story several times in the past three years the crowd joined Murray in a smile.

"I'd like some coffee," said Murray as the officers debated whether to take Murray to the police station for questioning or to start at once for the penitentiary.

"Well we'll fix you at the station, Tom," said Jenkins.

"Oh, give me some real coffee, chief. I know that jail house coffee and this may be the last time I will have a chance to get some good coffee. Let me have some in the station, chief."

Jenkins assented and the party started for the depot restaurant.

"He's changed a lot since I saw him last," said one of the waitresses.

"Did you know him?" gasped one of the other waitresses.

"Sure I've seen him lots of times."

"Say, how about this bird Carson?" asked another spectator.

"I'll bet he is scared to death," was the reply. "I'll bet, he'll get to the depot and buy a thousand dollars' worth of tickets somewhere."

At the lunch counter Murray exhibited a prodigious appetite, considering the hearty meal he made at Centralia after his arrest early this morning.

"Murray Knows Fate." "I could see how you got you to bits and laugh while I was doing it," officers said Murray told Philip Carson, who caused his arrest in Centralia early today as they were enroute to Portland.

"I would a thousand times rather be in my place than in yours—and I'm going to hang," Murray continued.

The youthful bandit, partly recovered from his fit of rage, greeted a milling mob at the Union station with a grin.

At the Union station restaurant he drank a cup of black coffee, ate three pieces of buttered toast, then smoked a cigar with considerable gusto.

There was only one thing on which he would talk—his prison break. And he talked little on that, after learning that the letter he had dictated to Charles Newman, New Era rancher, had been printed.

"That letter told the absolute truth to the hilt," he said. "And I wouldn't retract a word of it if I hang—as I probably will."

He rubbed his hand nervously over his throat.

Classifies Himself. "Did you leave Portland the same night you made young Leslie Newman drive you here?" he was asked.

"Listen," retorted Murray. "I'm a crook, yes? and a murderer, and a tough egg. And that young hoodler who brought me here is a gentleman and an honest man, get me? you take his word for what happened?"

"Well, what about the Tenth and Washington street story you told him to tell?" he was asked.

"I don't remember where I got out of the car," Murray retorted. "Philip Carson had told police in Centralia that Murray had confided to him that they got near the Kenton district and then made young Newman say that he let them out on the west side."

"Did you go to Hood River that night?" was the next question.

"I fell asleep and don't remember," the young bandit retorted. "Then with an impatient gesture—"

"What the hell difference does it make? You can't believe me, I'm a cold blooded murderer and a crook and a thief. And anything I say will probably be used against me."

Won't Squave On Willos. Under heavy guard he was transported to the Portland police station, where he was seated on a long bench.

"I remember this bench," he said. "I sat on it two years ago."

Police easily recalled the time Murray was arrested here following the Florence bank hold up in a residence on the east side by a detail of police headed by Captain Moore and Detective Goltz.

"We want a little talk with you Tom," said Captain Moore.

Goltz urged the youth to tell the hiding place of Kelly and Willos, whom Carson said Murray left in White Salmon, Wash., yesterday.

"They may go to your mother's home, Tom," he said. "They may think they would be safer there than anywhere else. And if they get there, and the police found out about it, there'd be a fight. You know that. And your mother might get killed. And you wouldn't want that to happen, would you? You'd better tell us where they are."

"Now, listen to me," retorted Murray. "Listen to me. Damn! Willos kill a guard who was ready to shoot me? Didn't he save my life? I'd be a fine— to spill on him, wouldn't I? I'm not like the bird who stole me, and you know it."

"Not even if I hang," he added.

The Girl in the Case.

"Do you think Eva Sauerman told on you when you got arrested?" he was asked.

"She got me where I am now," said Murray vindictively. "If it hadn't been for her, I wouldn't be here. You or she or anybody else can't make me believe she didn't snitch."

"Do you bear her any ill will?"

law, regardless of who did the actual shooting, officials say, that all can be held and tried as accessories making them equally guilty and amenable to capital punishment.

Two women will be members of the grand jury to sit on the cases of the three alleged slayers, these being Mrs. Mabel Settlemier, housewife of Woodburn, and Mrs. Grace Neiberg, housewife of Stayton.

Other members of the grand jury are Arthur Glor, farmer of Salem; George Kesch, farmer of Stayton; Selas Ruda, Gates; L. W. Rotter, farmer, Salem, and Fred E. Maters, insurance man of Salem.

This is the first time in the history of Marion county that women have sat on a grand jury to consider evidence submitted in a case the punishment for which may be death. Mr. Carson stated.

"Vag" is Novelist. SEATTLE, Aug. 22.—Phyll Carson, who captured Tom Murray, escaped killer from the Salem, Ore., penitentiary, lived in Seattle until five years ago when he moved to Portland. His father and a brother reside here at present.

"I'm going to White Salmon and I'm sure we'll get the other two," he told the Seattle Post-Intelligencer, over the long distance telephone early this morning.

"When a man commits murder, I believe any measures are justified to run him down. Our families aren't safe with such desperadoes as these running loose."

Chase Is Over. CENTRALIA, Wash., Aug. 22.—"I'm glad it's all over. I'm glad there'll be no more shooting. I'm tired and want to rest and eat."

It was at the end of the trail that Tom Murray uttered these words. He was addressing the officers as they were awaiting a train here to bring him to Portland, then to Salem to face charges of murdering two guards at the state penitentiary.

"I guess I'll be hung for this, all right, but at least the chasing is all over."

"I'm only sorry that I didn't get to see my mother, because I think as much of her as any son ever thought of his mother."

Jones Blamed for Shooting. SALEM, Ore., Aug. 22.—When Tom Murray, Ellsworth Kelly and James Willos, escaped convicts, forced Leslie Newman of New Era and John Wilde of Monitor, to drive them into Portland from the Newman home, the boys did not desert them in the downtown district as they reported to police, according to Philip Carson, brother-in-law of Dr. Henry E. Morris of this city, who affected Murray's capture in Centralia last night.

"Murray told me last night that the boys drove them clear through Portland to Kenton and let them out there," said Carson this morning.

"Murray said that the reason he broke with Willos and Kelly was that he was out of their class—that Willos had a face that would brand him as a criminal anywhere. Murray said he was bound for Cuba."

"Murray said that they did not get any money from the taxi driver and his passenger, the night they escaped here. He said that Kelly never fired a shot, and that there never would have been any shooting if Jones hadn't gone crazy and started shooting."

Carson Claims Reward. According to Carson the convict did not know it was he who had given him up until the train bearing the entire party was stopped at Keise this morning to allow photographers to take pictures. Murray saw the photographer's taking Carson's picture and said:

"Did that turn me in? I'm going to hang and I wouldn't be in his shoes for a million dollars."

Carson arrived at the prison accompanied by a Portland newspaperman shortly after 10 o'clock this morning and put in his verbal claim for the rewards offered for Murray.

Murray's Mother Faints. PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 22.—Tom Murray's mother fainted when deputies from Sheriff Starwick's office visited her at her Bathbridge Island home, near Seattle this afternoon and informed her of her son's capture, according to a telephone message received by Chief of Police Jenkins from Starwick.

The message further said that Mrs. Murray had been unable to talk since and that doctor's say her condition is serious.

The Seattle deputies were sent to talk to her and she was taken to the hospital.

Murray refused to discuss his two companions in the break or what has become of them when he was held in his cell by Deputy Warden Lilly.

The cell in which the slayer is housed is on the first tier in the north end of the cell house and is double locked with new padlocks. Over it has been constructed a screen to prevent fellow prisoners from passing anything in to Murray and to keep him from passing out notes or any other articles.

Murray's wounds, one in the hand and the other in the forearm, are superficial and are healing nicely.

Preparing Murder Charge. SALEM, Ore., Aug. 22.—District Attorney John A. Carson announced today that he will convene the Marion county grand jury in a special session here next Wednesday morning to lay before that body information asking for indictments for murder in the first degree of Tom Murray, James Willos and Ellsworth Kelly, escaped convicts from the penitentiary.

When the trio escaped, two guards and one convict were killed. The charge of murder will be lodged against the three for the death of the guards. Under the considerable supply of foodstuffs at Bingen, they will take to the hills and "hide out." In western style, rather than attempt to continue in their auto, if they are accustomed to life in the wilderness, they could remain there for an indefinite time and as the section is remote from any considerable settlement, it would be almost impossible to organize posse large enough to cover the numerous canyons with any degree of success.

Sheriff Warwick said he has no doubt the Bingen robbers were the bandits.

Weatherman Bell hadn't any more than completed his prediction of "probable showers" this morning when they materialized.

Starting at 10:30 this morning old Jupiter Pluvius loosed the spigot ever so slightly. And what's more the showers may continue tonight and tomorrow, because that's what the meteorologist report says. This local cohort of old Jupiter says "unsettled weather, probably showers tonight and Sunday with thunderstorms in the mountains; generally cooler."

The total precipitation for the month so far has been nothing. The normal rainfall is 23 1/2 of an inch, and if the average is kept up there has to be quite a little more rain yet before September 1.

Today's shower was the first perceptible shower since June 8, when only .01 in an inch fell. At noon today a little over .06 of an inch had been recorded. With continued low barometric pressure Mr. Bell expects the rain to continue.

WADSWORTH PREDICTS LOWER TAX RATES BY MARCH 15, NEXT YEAR. (Associated Press Leased Wire.) SWAMPSCOTT, Mass., Aug. 22. Tax reduction and re-organization of the executive department were proposed to President Coolidge today by Senator Wadsworth, republican, of New York, as two of the major problems to be pressed at the next congress by the administration.

Senator Wadsworth predicted that a tax bill providing reductions in both the surtax and normal income rates would be passed before March 15, when first payments of the new year are due. He advocated that the administration then put through its plan of re-organization which provides for a new department of education and relief.

Although some opposition has been voiced to provisions of the reorganization bill, he was confident it could be passed in much the same form as proposed to the last congress.

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 22.—Current prices on country produce were well maintained at the close of the week and the market was generally steady and unchanged in most lines.

Recent advances in egg prices prevailed at the close today with the market showing a strong undertone. With outside markets advancing local values are expected to work higher during the coming week.

Butter market continued steady with all grades of cubes unchanged.

Country dressed meat arrivals continued moderate this week and prices held firm with a good call for fancy stuff. Choice light veal closed at 16 1/2 to 17 cents and choice light hogs at 20 cents.

Slight improvement is shown in the live poultry market for the week. Light hens brought 14 to 15 cents at the close while heavy hens sold up to 23 cents. Ducks also ruled higher with young white Pekins bringing 24 and 25 cents.

The cheese market continues to display a good healthy tone. Local jobbers report stocks moving out good at the recent advances.

Fruits and vegetables ruled generally steady during the week. Dealers get a good price for fancy, large sized peaches but ordinary stocks are lumped off at a 40-cent cut.

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 22.—Cattle receipts 56. Today's receipts all common and medium size, mostly sold early. Total receipts for week 2500 cattle and 685 calves; compared week ago: all classes 2866 head.
