COMMUNITY STANDARDS.

It seems a desirable thing to have a home in some fine city or neighborhood, but if people want that sense of pride, they must conform to higher standards than ordinary ones. These things are not accomplished without money and effort. The people on a certain street may rather enjoy the easy going habits of that neighborhood. The feeling prevails that "anything goes." So if a man's grounds are neglected, he can satisfy himself with the thought that it is a plain neighborhood, where people do just as they like. But if he wants to sell a home on that street, the slack standards prevent his getting a good price.

In a fine neighborhood, a family will feel, if some part of their property is not up to the habits of the street, that that condition of things can not be allowed to continue. So they improve it in that respect, and the example incites some one else to improve something that was getting shabby. So standards are maintained and improved right along, and the neighborhood becomes more and more choice. If people want their community to go ahead, they must look at their own civic features with a somewhat critical eye. The spirit of mere knocking and fault finding will do no good, but if some feature of their community is below what that town ought to have, it is of no use to overlook that situation and let the matter drift. Influential people should take a stand and insist that something better must be done, and the whole population should agree that such a condition is below standard, and must be remedied. We have maintained these high standards in the main in Roseburg, but there are conditions here which we all know, which are below the ideals we entertain for our home town, and which should be improved.

It seems to be as good as settled that Tom Murray, the notorious Oregon convict, will plead insanity in an effort to save himself from the gallows for his part in the recent murderous outbreak. It also seems to be as good as settled that such a plea will not save him. Governor Pierce has already declared that Murray need not expect clemency and that he will hang. The public will naturally accept the governor's word and look forward to the time when Murray will do a jig on air. The convict unknowingly spoke with prophecy when he remarked upon his capture at Centralia, Wash., that "the jig is up." Kelly and Willos, fellow murderers of Murray—in intent if not in fact—will attempt to cheat the noose by the assertion that they did not actually participate in the killing of Guards Holman and Sweeney. Their quoted statements since their recapture show that they are trying to create a belief in their absolute innocence, and so far they have claimed most everything possible in their behalf except that the two dead guards committed suicide. They may succeed in establishing even that supposition if they are tried by the type of jurors that of late years have been making a mockery of justice throughout the country.

Liquor valued at more than $100,000,000 on the bootleg market and property worth approximately $10,000,000 were seized by prohibition agents during the fiscal year ended June 30, it was announced this week by the treasury department. During the period 6,000 liquor law violators fell into the clutches of the prohibition agents and 10 of the officers were killed in the performance of their duties. This is certainly "reporting progress." It is likewise an eloquent refutation of the oft-heard assertion that the prohibition law cannot be enforced. True, the job isn't finished, but Uncle Sam has never started a job that he failed to finish, and it's a safe prediction, judging from the aggressive campaign he has outlined, that he will not fall down on this one.

After a lapse of seven years since the close of the World war, the United States is preparing to resume speaking terms with Germany. Schools all over the country are gradually establishing or restoring the German language in their course of studies. This is a sure sign that the racial hatred engendered by the war is disappearing and that none of it will be transmitted to the coming generation of citizens. Germany, as a republic, is receiving from this country consideration to a degree that she could never have gained as an arrogant monarchy.

How long should a wife live? WIFE OF "CHAIN" GROCER ASKS FOR DECREE, ALIMONY

OAKLAND, Cal., Aug. 27.—Three women were named in a divorce action brought Tuesday against Loren Skaggs, Pacific coast "chain store" millionaire. Mrs. Jewell B. Skaggs alleged that her husband participated in gay parties with a Miss Perry and a "Jazz Jew" of Oakland and with a "Margaret Young" of Salt Lake. She charged embezzlement and neglect. Mrs. Skaggs asked for a restraining order which would prevent disposal of property worth $2,000,000 and sought $1000 a month alimony. Men's suits cleaned and pressed, 41 So. HUGE GARAGE BE BUILT FOR LOCKWOOD CO.

(Continued from page 1) work which comes to our doors every day, because of the lack of space. This agency has led the entire state of Oregon for the past five years in the sale of tractors. In 1923 we were one of the 9 out of 189 agencies in Oregon receiving a gold star trophy from the Ford Motor car company for a 100 per cent increase in sales. Already this year we have passed our quota on the sale of Lincoln cars. We have sold over 2 1/2 carloads of implements and 2 carloads of oil. In our spare parts department we are carrying over $11,000 worth of stock and equipment. From parts on our shelves we would assemble twenty five chassis complete, and have enough bodies and parts to turn out several entire Ford cars of each type. "This new building is to be constructed entirely according to the plans which we have devised after years of experience in this particular business. We are planning not for the present but for the future as well. With the lines which we anticipate the Ford Motor Company will offer in the future, we will require much additional space, and in the erection of the building which Mr. Casey and his business associates are constructing for us, we will have a structure which will give us the finest garage and agency between Portland and San Francisco. "The new Ford changes are bound to create added popularity and as the implement business is growing by leaps and bounds, there is no question but that the added space and facilities are essential for future growth."

The new building, Mr. Lockwood says, is designed with a view of increasing efficiency and saving labor. The repair department is to be almost completely re-equipped, and will have the most modern equipment available. Overhead tracks and cranes, with electric hoists, will speed up the heavy work of the shops, while the latest and most improved machinery will make it possible to turn out the mechanical repairs of all kinds with accuracy and dispatch. "The erection of this fine building will be one of the city's greatest improvements of the year. The old Empire barn which is today being razed, has in recent years been a great eyesore and fire hazard, and its removal not only does away with one of the most unsightly structures of the business section, but eliminates a risk which might have done great damage in the event of fire. The plans and specifications, which were drawn by Architect Frank E. Alley, provide for a building, which will be a credit to the corner. The oak and rose wood fronts will be of steel and glass, while the lines upon which the structure will be built are attractive in every way. Construction is being started at once, and the excavation is being rushed, in order that it may be completed before the rainy season. It is expected that the Antlers Theatre. "Black Cyclone," the Hal Roach feature showing at the Antlers Theatre tonight, is the story of Rex, a wild horse—a flashing black of great power—an ebony streak in the sunlight. He was born in the Wild Lands, self-taught and self-taught, for a rattlesnake bite had deprived him of his mother, while he was still of tender age. He sought protection in a herd, but its leader, the ferocious Killer, drove him out. He had no place in his herd for an outcast—a weakling—a baby stallion. But there came a day when this untamed weakling was a magnificent, powerful creature who defeated the Killer, who had never before known anything but victory!

Rex, who made his film debut in 1924 in "The King of Wild Horses," is an even more magnificent magnificent creature in "Black Cyclone," a story which shows his wooing of Lady, a beautiful dappled grey mare, and his great love for and protection of her; and of his friendship for a man who saved his life from the treacherous quicksands. But three people are required to tell the story of the handsome "Black Cyclone," and they are Guinn "Big Boy" Collins and Christian J. Frank. Among the animals are Rex and Lady; the Killer, one of the craziest spotted horses ever seen, and the best, a burro, that is quite the funniest little animal in existence. For atmosphere are hundreds of wild horses, a wolf pack, a honey-hunting bear, and a man-hunting cougar.

MAN'S PLIGHT RECALLS TRAGEDY 40 YEARS AGO

(Associated Press Leased Wire.) SALEM, Ore., Aug. 27.—"Uncle Billy" Hawkins, 60 years old, who over 40 years ago shot and killed Harvey Ogil, local book store clerk, in a quarrel over a woman, was taken from the Marion county poor house today and committed to the state hospital here. Hawkins was a drug clerk when the shooting occurred. He served a number of years in the penitentiary and was pardoned by Governor Lord. After his pardon he was said to have moved into the hills near Stayton, this county. About a year ago he was brought to Salem and committed to the poor farm. During the past year his mind has been falling rapidly, stated the examining physician, and he gave up his job after a short time to live after his reception at the state hospital.

RECORD OF ARCTIC FLIGHTS GIVEN BY MACMILLAN AIDE

Planes Explored Over 6,000 Miles of Bleak Region Stretching Beyond Base at Etah.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—A complete resume of the flying operations of the navy airplanes with the MacMillan Arctic expedition was received here today from Lieutenant Commander Byrd by radio in response to a request from the National Geographic Society. The dispatch shows that the three planes flew an aggregate of 6,066 miles and saw an area nearly as large as the state of Maine. Only one forced landing was necessary during all the flights.

The dispatch follows: "My records show that the planes have a total of 75 hours and 50 minutes flying time, which at 80 miles per hour equals 6066 miles total flown—by NA-1 away from Etah, 2,500 miles; by NA-2, 1713 miles; by NA-3, 1853 miles. "Total miles flown away from Etah by three planes on work accomplished flight mission 5292 miles. "The only forced landing occurred at these flights. The NA-3 was forced down on the way to Iglood Inghart, a half mile from Etah harbor. Approximately 20,000 square miles was seen from the planes on these flights. Of course many of the flights were made over the same course south and southeast of Bay Skord, extending for at least 70 miles. "These are unusual ranges and mountain peaks, some reach an altitude of at least 7500 feet and mostly covered with snow, except a few comparatively low ranges near Bay Skord. "These mountain ranges do not show on any charts I have seen. Mountain ranges lie nearly all the way from Sawyer Bay to Cannon Ford and it is thought that most of this region is unexplored by white men. No mountains are shown on charts in a direction 215 degrees from Sawyer Bay, but there are mountains in that region that extend at least 25 miles. "There is a lake about 2 miles long, frozen over in the mountains between Sawyer Bay and Cannon Ford, about 200 miles from the northwest end of Sawyer Bay. "The Greenland ice cap reaches an altitude of at least 10,000 feet in a direction 100 degrees from Robertson Bay. "It is thought that little has been known heretofore of ice conditions around Ellesmere Island in the summer period. Nearly all of the many fjords seen by us show them to be filled with ice which occasionally opens up but soon closes in again. Bay Ford and Eureka sound east of Axel Heiberg Island are filled with drifting ice. "The land in Ellesmere Island is firm, but too rugged to afford a landing place. "In all the territory flown over the Greenland ice cap a comparatively warm stratum of air was experienced, 1,000 feet and a bitterly cold one at 11,000 feet.

DENTIST TAKES ROUTE CHOSEN BY BRUMFIELD

(Continued from page 1) with his stepfather's explanation of what he was doing. "The children look, I'll have to put a new bottom in it." Step Son Likely Next Victim. When the relatives of Mrs. Young demanded an investigation of her disappearance, the dentist produced letters purporting to have been written by her and indicating that she had gone to Paris to obtain a divorce. In his confessions, he explained she had written these at his request while she was under the influence of liquor. The letters failed to halt the investigation and when after a lengthy questioning Young was told at the district attorney's office that "we are going to dig in that cistern," he broke down and talked. Questioning of Patrick Grogan, heir to $1,500,000, the estate of Patrick Grogan, the "Olive King," convinced authorities that Young planned to murder the boy also in order to inherit the estate. He had succeeded in having the boy make a will to him, which was destroyed after the arrest and confession. Cook with gas. EUGENE MAYOR HURT. EUGENE, Ore., Aug. 27.—Mayor E. B. Parks of Eugene, and J. A. McLean, local hotel proprietor, were slightly injured yesterday, when the heavy car in which they were riding was struck by another machine at Corvallis. The car driven by McLean was overturned and was badly damaged. Mayor Parks escaped with slight bruises, and a few cuts, while McLean's back was wrenched.

MONGOLS DENY ASSERTION CREDITED TO ANDREWS

MOSCOW, Aug. 27.—The Mongolian mission in Moscow today issued a statement denying the assertion attributed recently to Roy Chapman Andrews, leader of the third Asiatic expedition of the American Museum of Natural History in Mongolia, that friction between the Soviet government and the Mongolian government at Ulaanbaatar had created conditions which made a continuation of the expedition's scientific research impossible.

WEEK DAY BIBLE SCHOOL PLAN TO BE DECIDED UPON

A meeting will be held at the city hall Friday night, Sept. 25th at 7:30 to discuss the proposal to have week-day Bible instruction in Roseburg. The Oregon law permits children to be excused from the public school for one hundred and twenty minutes per week for religious instruction. This law was introduced and sponsored by Senator Eddy of this city. The proposed instruction will not be conducted by the public schools, but by the churches of the city. The meeting on Friday night will be composed of the pastors of the various religious organizations, and two other delegates from each religious organization. It is hoped that every religious organization in the city will show an interest in this movement. Many other communities have had similar schools conducted to the satisfaction of all and to the profit of all. The Ministerial association of the city has been leading in the local movement.
