Miss Parrott Returns From Travel Abroad

Miss Rosa B. Parrott, who with Mrs. Adeline Stewart, of Sutherlin, spent the summer touring Europe, returned to Roseburg this week after a wonderful experience abroad. The following is an account of some of the most outstanding features of her trip:

Europe is the place where dreams come true; where all you have read, talked and thought about materializes; but try to take others on the journey with you, using only the medium of words in a herculean task, and in order to keep the recital within readable length, it can be little more than a catalogue of names.

"I am going to answer first three questions that have been asked me by everyone I have met. I did not suffer from 'mal de mer' (I am not answering for Miss Stewart).

We went with the Bennet Travel Bureau, of New York. There were twelve in the party including the conductor, who, during the winter months, is assistant manager of the Metropolitan Opera House, of New York. The others of the party came from Washington, Missouri, Florida, New York and Oregon. The party was very cosmopolitan, representing every section of the United States. These questions answered, I shall begin our trip.

"We sailed from New York on the Orca, of the Royal Mail Line, June 29th, and landed at Cherbourg, France, the 29th, where we had our first experience with foreign porters and customs, but by no means our last. From here by a continental train, which had all the conveniences of our own, to Paris. A week here, interspersed with motor trips to Versailles, Rheims and the battlefields, gave us an opportunity to glimpse this mecca of every American tourist, and to visit its famous opera house where we saw 'Thais.' From Paris we went to Avignon, known because it once housed the Popes. Nice, the best known city of the French Riviera, was our next stop. A motor drive over the famous great Corniche road took us to Monte Carlo, then by train to Genoa, sought by Americans because of Columbus' statue and birthplace. Rome, politically, historically, religiously, artistically and literally the most important city in the world, was next visited. Today in Rome is insignificant and you are intrigued only with what is meant to be the world yesterday. From here we went to Naples—in distinction of "the dirtiest city in Italy and the most beautifully located" is deserved. A motor trip to Pompeii and back over the world-renowned Amalfi Drive to Sorrento was a memorable experience. The Blue Grotto, ideally beautiful, was reached from Sorrento. Florence, the cradle of Renaissance literature and art, was next visited. Then came Venice. The canals, gondolas, pigeons, the famous horses of St. Mark and the Rialto, were all most intriguing. Milan, with its cathedral that defies description, and its incomparable "Last Supper," was our next stop. From here across Lake Como to the famous winter resorts of Bellagio and Lugano, then by train through St. Gotthard's tunnel and by motor over the Furka Pass to Glatsch at the base of the Rhone Glacier. From here by motor over the Grimsel Pass to Interlaken, where the Jungfrau dominates the landscape. Next to Lucerne where Thoreau's "Lion" is the lodestar. Then by boat to Fieseler and by motor over the Axenstrass to Tell's Chapel, which marks the spot where he escaped from Gessler. Next Strassburg with its Cathedral and uncopied astronomical clock. Brussels clothed with new interest for the tourist since the World War, was our last stop on the continent.

"We crossed the channel from Ostend to white-cliffed Dover, from which to London we travelled in one of those trains with locked compartments and in which your lunch is brought to you at one station in baskets and collected at the next. A week in London served as in Rome and Paris, to glimpse its outstanding wonders. From London we motored to Kenilworth and Warwick castles, to Stratford-on-Avon and to Shrotony.

"While a glimpse of London was all the time accorded, yet it was a fitting climax to a trip that registered few disappointments. On August 1st, I sailed on the Orduna of the Royal Mail Line, for the states, and Miss Stewart, with several others of the party, motored to Scotland. The Orduna docked in New York on August 15th, my two months on the continent was most delightful, but I found no country that equaled the United States and no city that paralleled Roseburg."

Mr. and Mrs. M. Purdum, of Los Angeles, were guests of Mrs. and Mrs. A. J. Young Friday and today. Mr. and Mrs. Dorland have been on a motor trip to Tacoma, and left today for their home.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Parrott, of Crookston, Minnesota, were guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Lunatic, Friday. They left this morning for Oakland, California, where they will visit.

Small tables were placed for the guests, with unique cloths of black and white checked crepe paper, and were centered with rose colored candles. Place cards of burnt parchment were used. Varying enough from the usual to be interesting, the guests moved from one table to another at the end of each course.

She states that the outlook in the east is quite prosperous.

Past Noble Grand Club Has Picnic

One of the enjoyable picnics of the summer was had Thursday when the members of the Past Noble Grand Club of the Rebekah lodge and their families motored to Maple grove for the evening. About forty were present and spent the time playing games and giving impromptu stories about a large bonfire by the river bank. A picnic dinner was spread beneath the trees at dusk and following the dinner a program was presented.

Miss Dorothy Dale Jackson gave a reading to an appreciative audience, followed by two interesting readings by Mrs. Frances Russell and one by Mrs. Ernie Schwarz. The picnicers participated in singing and a portable furnished music during part of the evening.

Association Congratulates Supreme Commander

Members of the Women's Benefit Association of Roseburg will hold a special celebration meeting in the Macabee Hall in the near future honoring the election of the Association's Founder and Supreme Commander, Miss Bina M. West, as the first woman president of the National Fraternal Congress of America. This event took place at the annual convention held in Duluth the week of August 10th.

Mrs. Clara B. Bonebrake is the general chairman of arrangements. At the meeting Thursday evening, the members were much enthused over the prospects of a fine campaign for new members for the fall work.

The National Fraternal Congress of America represents eighty-eight of the leading fraternal benefit societies of the continent in which the Women's Benefit Association stands fourth. Miss West was the youthful founder of this woman's society in 1892 and now it has the record of being the largest of its kind in the world.

In commenting on her election, Miss West stated: "I am old-fashioned enough to believe that there is a special place in the world for the fraternal benefit system of insurance. The majority of societies are now scientifically operating and combined with this, are the many fraternal features which make living possible and happier for ten millions of people on this continent. They have already paid out in benefits many billions of dollars and if there had been more fraternalism in the old world there never could have been a world war.

Members of the Roseburg review sent a message of congratulations to President West, assuring her loyal support in making a woman's pioneer presidency in the National Fraternal Congress an outstanding success in this new role now entered by women.

Miss Hena Gates left Thursday for Glde, where she will be the house guest of Miss Marie Lane for a week.

THEATRES

Liberty Theatre. Harry Carey is undoubtedly the finest actor of Western roles on the screen today. Any doubt about this is assuredly cleared up by his performance in "The Bad Lands," his latest production made under the supervision of Hunt Stromberg, which opened yesterday at the Liberty theatre and shows for the last time today.

In this production Carey unquestionably gives the finest performance of his long and successful screen career. In every phase of his presentation he is the direct opposite of average actors of similar parts, whose chief claims to fame are that they look well on a horse.

"The Bad Lands," a story of pioneer days, which for over a decade has been a favorite with both child and adult, has been produced as a super comedy. The production of such a type of story it can readily be imagined presented unheard of difficulties but it is said that the inexhaustible imagination of the cinema camera has surmounted every obstacle and the result is both mystifying and hilarious in the extreme.

Majestic Theatre.

Thrilling attacks by real Indians on trading post, fort and wagon train are among the many spectacular features that mark "The Red Rider," Universal Blue Streak Western in which Jack Hoxie is the star and which will be screened at the Majestic theatre commencing Sunday. Among the players are Mary McAllister, Jack Pratt, Natalie Warfield, Marin Sals, William McCall, Francis Ford, George Connors, Clark Constock and Duke R. Lee. Cliff Smith directed "The Red Rider."

Antlers Theatre.

D. W. Griffith has given the pendulum of the motion picture another push. When, years ago, he revolutionized the screen by producing "The Birth of a Nation," the first full length picture ever made, he started the pendulum swinging in the direction of massive mobs, and gigantic "sets." He showed that pictures were an ideal vehicle for emotions en masse, for brilliant pageantry and drama on a grand scale.

With "Broken Blossoms," he gave another tilt to the pendulum, by transferring to the screen a brief but intensely dramatic tale, one which dealt with human emotions in the individual instead of in the mass. But even here, it was the sheer beauty he brought to picturesque surroundings, the beauty which his genius brought to vivid but exotic characters which succeeded.

In his latest picture, "Isn't Life Wonderful," which comes to the Antlers theatre Sunday and Monday he has revolutionized all previous ideas of picture-making by returning to life itself, plain, stark, simple human emotion in the most commonplace surroundings. He has pictured love; not the love of the great or the unusual, but the love of everyday folk. He has pictured the life not of startling figures, but the life of the workaday man and his maid.

"Isn't Life Wonderful," does not appeal to any particular set or kind of people. Because it appeals to all. It is filled with beauty, it is replete with humor. But it is not the kind of beauty which requires a trained eye to appreciate, nor the kind of humor which requires a mind keen to wit to understand.

SEATTLE, Aug. 29. — Roy C. Lyle of Seattle, arrived home today from Washington, where he was made Pacific Northwest prohibition administrator, effective next Tuesday, and announced that he would begin work with practically the same organization used by his predecessor, F. A. Hallett.

Lyle said that he would make changes very gradually. The only definite thing he stated as to personnel was that William M. Whitney, Seattle, assistant and legal adviser to Lyle in Lyle's present position of director for the state, will "continue to do essentially the same work." This notwithstanding that Lyle's present position and that of Whitney are abolished under a re-organization order by General Prohibition Chief Andrews.

Lyle pointed out that whereas he had formerly one state under him, he will now have three besides the territory of Alaska and declared that he didn't even know many of the people in the organization.

Factor and Drucker, investigators said, several months ago, put over a $500,000 fraudulent oil land deal in England, selling Arkansas property through the British Allied Estates, Ltd., and the Cambria Trust, Ltd., companies they organized. Investigators say some of the land is under water part of the time and none of it is improved.
