ROSEBURG, OREGON, TUESDAY, SEPT. 1, 1925. INTERESTING AS SEWING BEE.

We are indebted to Congressman Oldfield, of Arkansas, authorized spokesman for the democratic party, for the information, given out in his speech at Portland this week, that the presidential campaign in 1928 will be fought on the tariff issue.

The Umpqua Chiefs, Roseburg premier booster organization, will meet tomorrow evening for the purpose of planning a program of merit to be put on at the Oregon State Fair on Hospitality Day.

The decision of the Southern Oregon Conference of Seventh Day Adventists to build an academy in this county is welcome news, and our sister community of Sutherlin is to be congratulated on the fact that the institution will be near her boundaries.

Tom Word is not sure that he wants a job at the state pen. His uncertain health is the reason. Mr. Word is a fine selection for the important office, providing his health would permit.

The trio of convicts that recently escaped from the state penitentiary, and on whose hands are the blood stains of two guards slaughtered while making their exit, will have able leadership in their defense in the person of Will R. King.

"Babe" Ruth, the player with a wicked stroke, is just about to meet his Waterloo in the baseball arena. "Misconduct, drinking and staying out all night" downs an athlete about as quick as it does any other person with less physical ability.

Tom Murray has been declared "perfectly sane" by an alienist. There'll be no trouble getting another brand of specialists to declare him insane before he reaches the gallows.

Those Kiwanis fellows had something up their sleeve last night for the Rotarians. They sure pitch a wicked horseshoe. But we still maintain that we can beat 'em playing pinochle sitting on a one-leg stool.

Down at Los Angeles well drillers have gone to a depth of 7,130 feet with no signs of oil. And they're still plugging away. This is the California spirit of doing things—and will quite likely prove profitable.

Anyway, the recent rumpus at the state penitentiary will be the cause of getting rid of a few undesirables that would otherwise have remained on the job until some political czar knocked them off.

PRUNE PICKIN'S

GOOD EVENING FOLKS— The Kiwanis fellows demonstrated their skill by pickin' the Rotarians at Hoos-shoes yesterday eve and Lather Barnes, One of the Rotarians Who didn't show up, is appearin' on the Main stem in his Elks' marchin' suit Makin' caustic remarks Concernin' the ability Of his team mates— But ye ed has it On good authority That the Rotary fellers Begged him to stay At home as a Sacrifice and thus Enable them to have A better chance to win.

Cook with gas. Round-up Office Ends Long Vigil

PENDLETON, Ore., Sept. 1.— Today officially marks the opening of the "Round-up season" in Pendleton and cowboy hats, loud shirts and high heeled boots make up the uniform in vogue. This morning saw the ending of the long vigil maintained by ticket buyers, who have kept their places in line for a week, with the opening of the round-up ticket booth.

The Round-up's bucking horses, splendid string of vicious outlaws, are taking their daily workouts in the Round-up arena. Among the more famous of the show's lancers are No Name, Sam Jackson, Fox, Battleground, Desolation, Blue Vitrol, Bill Meadood, U-Tell-em and Monkey Wrench and all are performing up to former marks. In addition to the well known horses, the Round-up has this year a group of outlaws, gathered from the far ends of the west, who will be given a thorough tryout and who, if they prove worthy, will be allowed a part in Pendleton's Round-up.
