GRANGE EXERTS GOOD INFLUENCE ON RURAL LIFE

There is much significance in the action of the executive committee of the New York State Grange in the steps just taken relative to one phase of the big state fair at Syracuse. Learning that application had been made to the fair commission to allow a prize fight in the new coliseum on the grounds, the executive committee of the State Grange immediately met and passed a formal resolution, asking the fair commission to deny the use of the buildings and grounds for any such purpose, as being wholly contrary to the principles for which the state fair is designed, and likewise in violation of the highest ideals of the rural people of the Empire State.

This action is in line with the general policy of the Grange in behalf of clean entertainment, and such policy it exemplifies in the administration of its own halls throughout the United States. All Grange programs and entertainment features are maintained on a high moral plane and when dances and social functions are conducted in Grange halls they are very closely supervised; when made public at all, tickets of admission are frequently issued so that no objectionable parties can secure admission. By this policy the environment in which the Grange seeks to put around its young people in the country is kept at the maximum of wholesomeness, and very great service to the rural welfare is being constantly rendered by the Grange in this respect.

Striving toward similar ideals, Granges, as a rule, bar from their halls all events, games of chance and similar projects calculated to mislead or defraud patrons of such attractions. In this respect the Grange has set a good example, even to churches, and is in line with the recognized Grange policy relative to agricultural and country fairs, in which the organization demands a high standard of attraction, protesting everything of objectionable and catch-penny kind.

TROOP NO. 1 HAS BIRTHDAY

Gathered around a huge birthday cake bearing ten lighted candles, the officers and members of Troop No. 1 of the Boy Scouts celebrated the ten years just completed by that organization in Roseburg. The banquet and anniversary program was held in the M. E. Church, there being 66 present to enjoy the event. A fine dinner was served after which an excellent program was given. Russell L. T. Lintott, scoutmaster, presided as a toastmaster. The history of Troop No. 1 from the time of its organization in 1915 by Professor Morris until the present time was given. Gerald Geddes told of the first five years of the troop, giving some intimate history of the early days of scouting in this city. The second five years of the troop was told by Maynard Bell, an Eagle Scout.

Mr. Lintott introduced all of the members of the troop and they were given a round of applause. L. J. Barnes gave a baseball reading in the Swedish dialect that brought down the house. Mr. Barnes' impersonation of a resident of Minnesota at a game of the great American sport could not be improved upon. E. A. Britton, Douglas county Scout executive, presented the 19-year emblem to the troop. His remarks were short and to the point, stating that the emblem was a tribute to the service of both the officials and the members. V. T. Jackson, president of the council, made a short talk, urging the cooperation of the parents in Scout work. Mr. Jackson, whose heart and soul is in the interest of the Scouts, showed his enthusiasm in his talk. Bert G. Bates gave a chalk talk and his various sketches kept the boys in an uproar. Rev. Joseph Knotts, chairman of the troop committee, gave an address to "Our Troop." Rev. Knotts is also a Scout enthusiast and is giving freely of his time to aid the boys in their work. His talk along the lines of scouting was very interesting. Under the leadership of Scout Maynard Bell the entire assembly arose and repeated the Scout oath and law and pledge of allegiance to the flag. The Star Spangled Banner was then sung, closing the meeting.

TILLAMOOK-PORTLAND TOLL ROAD IS ASSURED

(Associated Press Local Wire.) PORTLAND, Ore., Sept. 1.—The county courts of Tillamook and Washington, in a special session at Hillsboro yesterday, approved the draft of a franchise and contract for a toll road short cut to Tillamook from Portland.

The approval of the franchise and the contract was sent to the state highway commission with the signatures of the two county courts attached and requested the commission to make an early decision. The two counties are willing to consider any changes or amendments or alterations that the commission may desire.

The regular business meeting of the American Legion Auxiliary to be held September 2nd, will be postponed until the next meeting night, September 15, owing to the absence of the officers.

OREGON VS. MULTNOMAH AT FOOTBALL ON OCTOBER 3

(Associated Press Local Wire.) EUGENE, Ore., Sept. 1.—First practice for the 1925 football season of the University of Oregon football team will be held September 15, according to Richard Shore (Dick) Smith, coach. The University will open one week later. The first game of the season for the Oregon men will be October 3, against the Multnomah Athletic Club of Portland.

All but three or four members of last year's team will be back this year, and prospects are fairly bright, according to the dope. Some of the players are already in Eugene, ready for the season to open.

A BRIDE'S DIARY

A Love Story of Today

By Idah McGlone Gibson

Cleo Madison eloped with Lieutenant Paul Armstrong, U. S. A. It does not take Cleo long to discover marriage is not a path of roses. On the train, going to the army post, she has an allegorical dream indicating her future problems. The colonel, Arthur Blakely, Beidon, of the post, is a "lady killer" and his actions have compromised Rita Thordahl, the wife of a reprobate lieutenant. Rita is innocent and Cleo forms an immediate and deep friendship for her. Rita, at Cleo's instigation, decides to leave the post and joins a vaudeville troupe under the name Rhoda Thordahl. Paul has been having his troubles, chiefly liquor and gambling. Cleo refuses to be gushingly sympathetic. The post is agog with gossip and suspicion when Rita leaves and the colonel implores Cleo to give him information—unsuccessfully. Cleo makes a series of domestic troubles with Cleo and Paul. Cleo puts Paul in the hospital by hitting him on the head with a vase. After a serious time Paul puts through due to a blood transfusion from Chick Adams, an old sweetheart of Cleo's. Paul's mother and father have arrived, called to the post because of their son's desperate illness. Cleo's father has also come.

Cleo tells her father that she would Paul. Paul's parents are unaware of this, but his mother makes herself unpleasant just the same.

A STRANGE VISITOR. When I drove up to the house with Paul's mother in the car, I found Johnson prowling around the front gate. Although he said nothing to me, I was sure that there was something very important on his mind, and that he wanted to see me alone.

"Mrs. Armstrong," I said, "will you allow me to introduce to you Mr. Johnson, who has been very kind to Paul and me ever since I have been here. I hardly know what I should do without him."

Mrs. Armstrong immediately became very ritzy, and I could see that she was going to rage me as soon as Johnson left for introducing her to a servant. Johnson paid no attention to her whatever except to mention her name politely, then he turned to me.

"The trunks have come, Mrs. Armstrong. I put them in the upper hall. Would you like some tea? It will be about an hour before meal."

I looked at my mother-in-law coaxingly. "I think I would like some tea, Cleo. I have had a long, hard journey and a very annoying time since I arrived. Will you have it sent to my room? I will drink it while I am dressing. You might come up and have a cup with me," said Mrs. Armstrong in her highest and mightiest tone.

There was a slight, very slight raising of Johnson's eyebrows. I wondered what he wanted to tell me.

My mother-in-law evidently caught that glance, for after he had left the room she said to me: "I cannot understand why you introduced me to your servant, Cleo. Is that Army etiquette? Does he have to be introduced to all the company just because he wears a uniform? I'm learning a lot of new things about the United States army since I came here, and I like the idea less than ever that Paul is in it."

"The man, to whom I introduced you, Mrs. Armstrong, was a soldier in the World war, and he was decorated by both the French and English governments for bravery upon the field. Both his legs have been shattered, and he has a bullet in his lung. I have always found him a most reliable gentleman, and in your stepson's chosen profession he holds a more honorable record than you, stepson. He is, in taking care of Paul's household still doing his duty as he sees it. He never presumes, he never complains. He really has done much to make my life bearable since I came here."

Mrs. Armstrong looked at me most curiously. I bore the scrutiny calmly, although I was furious at her manner. At last she said: "I must confess I have never heard a married woman speak so enthusiastically of a man, not a relative, as you have done of this man who is in reality your servant. You say he has made you comfortable, and you indicate that consequently he is a friend of yours."

"Do you know, Cleo, you have always in some way made me think of a cat. You are perfectly content, and will purr and stretch yourself prettily if some one puts you on a soft cushion in front of the fire and gives you plenty of milk; and you become the friend of that person. If, however, you do not have these, you spit and scratch as you have been doing to me ever since I came here."

My mother-in-law stopped as though I, in my catishness, would spring upon her and scratch her eyes out if she said more. I only yawned, however, and told her I didn't resent being called a cat—in fact sometimes, including the present moment, I would rather be a cat than a woman. Mrs. Armstrong looked at me perfectly disgusted and marched off to her room, as she had heard Johnson going up the stairs.

I sat down. It was really the first time I had had to collect my thoughts that day.

All at once I heard the front door open. I thought it was my father, with Mr. Armstrong, and I idly wondered why they had been so long.

"Where have you been?" I called. "Come right in here."

I looked up to face a perfectly strange man—a man in uniform, a man who had once been handsome, but who now was fat and flabby, with paunches under his bloodshot eyes.

"Pardon me, I think you have made a mistake in the house," I said. "These are the quarters of Lieutenant Armstrong."

Antlers Theatre.
With a European circus as the locale, and a tragic clown as the central character, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "He Who Gets Slapped," which is to open tonight at the Antlers Theatre, is declared to be one of the most unusual pictures of the season.

"He Who Gets Slapped" is the story of a brilliant scientist, who is deserted by his wife, and whose life work is stolen by his patron and friend, "HE", embittered, and seeking forgetfulness, becomes a clown in a French circus. This is the beginning of the story and the picture carries its audience into the backstage of a European circus, with the story told by clowns, acrobats, trick riders and the other performers of the hippodrome.

Lon Chaney, king of character actors and make-up wizards, plays the leading male role, that of the unhappy clown, "He", and it is reported he has made it one of his greatest characterizations. Norma Shearer and John Gilbert play the romantic leads. The supporting cast includes Tully Marshall, Ford Sterling, Marc McDermott, Clyde Cook, Harvey Clarke, Poullette Duval, George Davis, Ruth King and others.

HELPED THROUGH CHANGE OF LIFE

Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound during this Critical Time

Baltimore, Md.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to help me through the change of life and for a broken-down system. I had been complaining of long, time-consuming dragging along had tried other medicines which did not help me much. I read in the newspapers of the Vegetable Compound and I bought a bottle. I felt better. I did not stop with one bottle, but took it through the whole critical time and am now practically a well woman. I have two daughters whose health was very bad before they married and I was worried about them. I got the Vegetable Compound for them and it helped them, and after they married it also helped them in bearing their babies. This is a great and good medicine for all complaints of women, and I recommend it to all."—Mrs. L. GINGRICH, 1775 N. Gilmer St., Baltimore, Maryland.

The Vegetable Compound is a dependable medicine for women of a middle age. Let it relieve you of nervousness, that feeling of strain and those annoying hot flashes so common at this time.
