ADVERTISING AT LEGION SESSION GIVEN APPROVAL

The suggestion made by Dr. E. B. Stewart, commander of the state department of the American Legion, that the state be advertised in some way at the national Legion convention, has met a ready response from Chambers of Commerce throughout the state. The Roseburg chamber has taken the lead in stirring up interest, and letters have been written to various bodies all over the state. Bend, Corvallis, Portland and Ashland, have all responded, and all are quite well pleased with the idea. Various means have been suggested, but as yet nothing has been decided upon. Canned cherries and prunes, to be used as favors, have been proposed, and prizes are being secured.

A good suggestion for the parade is an entry in the form of the old Covered Wagon. It is the consensus of opinion that any advertising should be state-wide, rather than of a community nature.

SCHOOL PUPILS TO BE EXAMINED BY INSTRUCTORS

Teachers Required by Law to Make Health Examination of Students in Lower Grades.

When school opens on Sept. 21, a new law authorizing physical examination of school children is to be enforced here for the first time. It was enacted by the 1925 legislature and affects all state schools. It does not apply, however, to high schools; only to the elementary grades. School authorities, in co-operation with health officers and nurses, have heretofore acquiesced in the examination of school children to some extent in the interest of public health, and while this is the first time physical examination has been specifically authorized by law, other than such reasonable examinations as may have been necessary or advisable to guard against the spreading of contagions.

The new law limits the examination to a more or less superficial one. The purpose, as stated in the act, is "of determining defects of vision, hearing, breathing, dentition or other external obvious physical defects which will prevent or interfere with the normal education of the child." It is not to be a medical examination, nor is it to be made by a school nurse or doctor, the act prescribing that the examination shall be made by the "superintendent, principal or teacher" and "made during the first month of the school year." If any defect is observed, the teacher shall report it to the parent or guardian, but there is nothing in the act to ground for complaint that individual liberty is being interfered with, nor to authorize the suggestion of medical or surgical treatment, or any particular remedy, for the reporting of the defects to the parents, which, without further direction, simply states that such defects are apparent.

The rights of a parent or guardian who may object to such an examination are amply protected by an exemption clause, and a simply worded statement of one's objection in writing, addressed to and filed with the superintendent, principal or teacher, will exempt the pupil from any examination or test for or on account of any physical defects or non-contagious diseases.

The following is a copy of the new law, which is known as Chapter 27, General Laws of Oregon, 1925:

Section 1—The state superintendent of public instruction shall provide, prepare, or cause to be prepared blanks or other supplies for the examination of all children attending the elementary public schools of the state of Oregon, for the purpose of determining defects of vision, hearing, breathing, dentition or other external obvious physical defects which will prevent or interfere with the normal education of the child. He shall provide, prepare or cause to be prepared necessary instruction for the use of the tests, blanks, records and other supplies and shall furnish same to the elementary schools of the state.

Section 2—The superintendent, principal or teacher in every elementary public school of the state shall, during the first month of the second school year make the examinations or tests provided for in section 1 of this act in such manner as shall be required by the state superintendent of public instruction and prepare the same upon the blanks furnished and make a written report thereof to the state superintendent of public instruction.

Section 3—The superintendent, principal or teacher shall report any physical defect of any child under his supervision to the parent or guardian as soon as such defect or defect are apparent to observation or revealed by examination or test; provided, that any blank, record or other form or method employed to communicate knowledge of any defects to any parent or guardian shall, without further direction, simply state that such defects are apparent.

Section 4—Any parent or guardian may object in writing to the superintendent, principal or teacher against the examination of his or her child or ward and such pupil shall be exempt from any examination or test for or on account of any physical defect or non-contagious diseases.

states in the safeguarding of the rights of the individual, as well as in public health activities. There is no form of treatment, medical or otherwise, compulsory in this state. The rights of the individual to employ the physician or nurse of treatment of his choice is fully recognized in the revised health code passed in 1921. Surgical operations, such as the removal of adenoids or tonsils, are not compulsory, neither is vaccination or other inoculation of vaccines and serums in cases of smallpox, diphtheria or scarlet fever. Some medical authorities approve and urge the so-called "snick" and "Dink" tests for the purpose of immunizing children against diphtheria and scarlet fever, but no such tests are compulsory.

The laws of Oregon leave the individual free to make use of such tests or not, as personal preference may dictate. Section 5218 of Oregon laws reads as follows:

Section 5218. Oregon laws. Nothing in this act shall be construed to empower or authorize the state board of health or its representatives, or any county board of health or its representatives, or any city board of health or its representatives, to interfere in any manner with the individual's right to select the physician or nurse of treatment of his choice, nor to interfere with the practice of any person whose regular occupation is the practice of medicine or nursing, or to interfere with the practice of any person whose regular occupation is the practice of dentistry, or to interfere with the practice of any person whose regular occupation is the practice of pharmacy, or to interfere with the practice of any person whose regular occupation is the practice of optometry, or to interfere with the practice of any person whose regular occupation is the practice of podiatry, or to interfere with the practice of any person whose regular occupation is the practice of chiropractic, or to interfere with the practice of any person whose regular occupation is the practice of osteopathy, or to interfere with the practice of any person whose regular occupation is the practice of naturopathy, or to interfere with the practice of any person whose regular occupation is the practice of any other profession, occupation, or business, or to interfere with the practice of any person whose regular occupation is the practice of any other profession, occupation, or business, or to interfere with the practice of any person whose regular occupation is the practice of any other profession, occupation, or business.

ESTIMATE OF PRUNE CROP IN NORTHWEST

PORTLAND, Ore., Sep. 8.—The Pacific Northwest prune crop will be approximately 6,000,000 pounds. While the crop is not so large this year, yet the prunes are good size and excellent flavor. A good crop and good quality, the market is favorable to the grower. Future sales are being made around 14 cents on 30-40's and 13 cents on 40-50's in 25 pound boxes. A. B. Good, Portland.

Knowing that the northwest prune crop is right, New York dealers are working under the assumption that receipts will be light. The result is a strong, heavy market for Oregon Italian prunes. The first car of Oregon new crop prunes, arrived August 17th. By the end of August receipts in New York totaled 27 carloads, September is expected to be the big month on Oregon receipts in New York.

The Oregon Bartlett pear deal is practically over. In the local market good wrapped stock will sell promptly today at $3 to $3.25 a box. In the eastern market, Oregon Bartlett pears have been topping the California Bartlett pears due to fine quality and size. Being free from blight and blemishes recent auction sales have been made as high as $3.15 a box for extra fancy and around $2.75 for fancy grade.

Early Oregon apples, too, are bringing good prices in the east. Only a few cars have been sold so far and the market is holding strong. Gravenstein and winter bananas are bringing around $3.99 for extra fancy with an extreme top of $4 a box.

With apple, pear and prune shipments likely to be light this month, there is little likelihood of the market easing off to any great extent.

A BRIDE'S DIARY

A Love Story of Today By Idah McGlone Gibson

Cleo Madison eloped with Lieutenant Paul Armstrong, U. S. A. It does not take Cleo long to discover marriage is not a path of roses. On the train, going to the army post, she has an allegorical dream indicating her future feelings. The colonel, Arthur Blakely Beidon, of the post, is a "lady killer" and his actions have compromised Rita Thordike, the wife of a reprobate lieutenant. Rita is innocent and Cleo forms an immediate and deep friendship for her. Rita, at Cleo's instigation, decides to leave the post and joins a vaudeville troupe under the name Ribeta Thorwaldson. Paul has been having his troubles, chetty liquor and gambling. Cleo refuses to be gushingly sympathetic. The post is agog with gossip and suspicion when Rita leaves and the colonel implores Cleo to give him information unsuccessfully. Climaxing a series of domestic troubles between Cleo and Paul, Cleo puts Paul in the hospital by hitting him on the head with a vase.

After a serious time Paul pulls through due to a blood transfusion from Chick Adams, an old sweetheart of Cleo's. Paul's mother and father have arrived, called to the post because of their son's desperate illness. Cleo's father has also come. Cleo tells her father that the wounded Paul.

Paul's parents are unaware of this, but his mother makes her unpleasant just the same. Cleo, alone in her home, is confronted by the drunken Lieut. Bill Thordike, husband of Rita, who demands to know where his wife is.

He attempts to kill Cleo, but is accidentally killed himself as he struggles with Johnson, who has rushed to Cleo's aid.

A MESS WITH MAMMA-IN-LAW

After I left Chick's room I knew I could not get Rita by long distance until after the show, for it was then nearly 8 o'clock. I also determined that Paul should not be worried until morning, so I started for the mess as it came to me suddenly that I was very hungry.

Dinner was almost over, but a place had been saved for me beside my dear old Dad, who squeezed my hand as I sat down beside him and whispered:

"I was getting nervous about you, I started for the mess as it came to me suddenly that I was very hungry."

"Well, I must say that you have been a long time. What did Paul say when you told him all the disagreeable things that had happened this afternoon?" demanded his mother.

"I didn't try to see him," I answered. "I wanted him to sleep through the night. If possible, and I knew if I should tell him half the things I wanted to, he would not close his eyes."

"Then what have you been doing all this time?" she asked curiously, lowering her voice.

"I've been going over the whole thing with Chick and consulting with him as to whether we would better send for Rita."

"Of course you're going to send for her," Mrs. Armstrong raised her voice stridently. "She's Lieut. Thordike's wife, isn't she?"

This made me very angry with her, for she would be heard by the whole table. I could see Mrs. Ralston, who had arrived, and was composedly eating her belated dinner, prick up her ears.

I wouldn't let them lay the whole blame on Rita, so I said in the same high voice: "Well, I have some doubts as to whether she should come or not, therefore haven't sent for her yet. You probably know by this time, Mrs. Armstrong, that Rita is playing on the Orpheum circuit. She cannot throw everything to the winds and come at a moment's notice to attend the funeral of her husband, from which she has been separated for some months. She told me she hoped she would never see him again."

"Hush, Cleo," commanded my mother-in-law; "you must not talk so about anyone you profess to be friendly with."

I raised my eyebrows. I thought I was doing Rita a good turn.

"What an extraordinary person!" remarked the wife of the Major.
