OXFORD BAGS TO GO; PANAMA HATS BE USED FOR SHOES

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

ADVANCE LONDON, Sept. 5.—Joseph Caillaux, finance minister of France who is going to Washington to discuss France's debts with the American financial authorities is as much at home in London as at Paris, as he has been coming here since boyhood.

The ease with which the French statesman handles English is illustrated by his remark on being informed that Chancellor Churchill had made an appointment with him for 3:15 p. m., at the treasury on the last day of their recent conference.

"Tell the chauffeur to be at the French embassy at 3 o'clock," he said to his secretary.

"Not at 3:10 or 3:05, but at 3 o'clock to the dot. Five minutes don't make any difference to chauffeurs, but they might muck up the whole business if he's a minute late."

M. Caillaux considers Gladstone's last home rule speech as the most wonderful bit of oratory he ever heard in any language.

The flapping "Oxford Bags", those baloon type trousers, have gone the way of all extreme fads in conservative England.

It was not so much that they were bizarre in style that caused their downfall, but the fact that White Chapel and Billingsgate—the antithesis of Oxford and the West End—were too ready to copy their voluminous folds that finished them with those who first displayed them. Young Oxford could not brook such dubious popularity.

Shawls are to be fashionable in England this winter because Queen Mary has made up her mind to do the women of the north Scotland islands a favor.

The Queen follows with great interest the fortunes of the island folk and has become much perturbed that there is considerable poverty among the women there owing to the demand for Shetland shawls having fallen off in recent years.

In society circles the word has gone around that the Queen intends to bring about a shawl revival as soon as possible.

To do that all that is necessary is for the Queen, Princess Mary and the Duchess of York to wear shawls on a few occasions. Then the shawl will come again into its own, helping to make the Shetland weavers happy once more.

Bustles, too, are coming back There are also dresses with flat—in the form of dresses with a sort of old style bustle effect. Such dresses are being shown new at London's fall fashion shows.

There are also dresses with flat backs, dresses that hang straight, dresses that flare, long skirts, short skirts, pannier skirts, skirts that are gathered and others that preserve the familiar 'pencil silhouette.'

There are evening gowns with one, two or three trains and some the skirts of which consists of three frills, the lowest of which stops just below the knees.

The most startling novelty is a "snakeskin dress" of the softest chiffon velvet, stamped to resemble the skin of a serpent. The illusion is heightened by the fact that the dress is of narrow strips of material, giving a shaded effect.

That nice old Panama hat can be used to make stunning new shoes for a number of Paris bootmakers have decided that panama footgear should go with the Panama hat and this feature might as well be added to the list of fashion freaks.

These shoes, however, are nothing to the very latest foot covering which was exhibited at the modern arts exhibition where the showing of one of the leading dressmakers is a shoe made of black lace, so sheer and so perforated that over gold leaf stockings, they make the feet appear naked.

The tendency toward gold and silver stockings has been shown by a noticeable number of dressmakers who this season, more than ever are trying to harmonize shoes and stockings with gowns.

Former Premier Clemenceau's caustic wit again has burned an over-enterprising newspaperman, who tried to pry from the Tiger at a safe distance some comment on Joseph Caillaux during the finance minister's recent trip to England.

A British journalist telegraphed an inquiry to the former Premier, prepaying the reply.

M. Clemenceau, who during the war, caused M. Caillaux's arrest, leading to his exile for correspondence with the enemy, wired as follows to the correspondent:

"I think the telegraph is a very convenient invention for indiscreet persons because it does not expose them to being put out by those they bother."

BERLIN, Sept. 5. — Germany without prohibition has reduced its annual per capita consumption of beer by almost half in the last quarter century, according to professor Loeckermann, an opponent of prohibition legislation.

In 1900 professor Loeckermann's figures showed, the annual per capita consumption of the foaming brew was 124.63 quaris; in 1924 this had dropped to 63.4 quarts. In 1914, when Germany was at the height of her industrial prosperity, the figure was 103.5 quarts.

This summer for the first time since the German revolution band concerts are being held again in the public squares and parks of Berlin. Martial air alternate the programs with sentimental folk songs and the classical symphonies.

To identify auto speeders Commissioner Fauere of the Berlin traffic police proposes that all automobiles should be equipped with a device he has invented by which an illminated disc on the side of the car automatically registers a change of color when the legally permitted speed is exceeded.

As long as the automobile moves along within the allowed maximum, the disc shows white, but as soon as the speed is exceeded the disc blazes out with a red light. Commissioner Faure believes that by such a device the general public would be enlisted as a partner with the police in insisting that speeding be stopped.

WESTERN MAN IS NAMED PRESIDENT

Marked recognition of the progressive methods of Western Chain Store Operators is shown in the election of Mr. M. B. Skaggs to be president of the National Chain Store Grocers' Association at its annual convention in Chicago today.

This association is composed of the larger operators of chain grocery stores in this country and represents about thirty thousand stores.

Within the last ten years Chain stores have taken an unusual position in the business of the nation, and today are recognized as a great economic factor in helping humanity solve the problem of the ever rising cost in the distribution of necessities.

Mr. Skaggs has rare business ability. Beginning with one small store at American Falls, Idaho, in 1915, he has builded day by day until now the Skaggs stores have food distributing stations in the principal cities in the states of Idaho, Utah, Oregon, Washington, Colorado, Wyoming, Nevada, Nebraska, and California, which furnish employment to fifteen hundred energetic, progressive young people.

This great progress is the reward of honest industry built upon the great principles of character, integrity, service and helpfulness. Mr. Skaggs has carefully selected and personally supervised the training of his managers and their assistants; inaugurating a liberal plan of profit-sharing which has attracted men and women of an unusually high type to his organization.

He ever makes plain the fact that the temptations in business are so great that it demands the highest type of conscience, the clearest brain, and the most genuine manhood to properly conduct a Skagg store; further reminding each employee, "That he who would help himself must help humanity; we benefit ourselves only as we benefit others."

In the recognition of Mr. M. B. Skaggs as their leader the National Chain Stores pay tribute to a great Western organization of Western men, the Skaggs United Stores, of which he is president.

I will not pay any bills that may be made other than myself.

ITALY TO HAVE ENCYCLOPEDIA

ROME, Sep. 12.—The Senatorial committee, entrusted with compiling the new official Italian encyclopedia, has completed its preliminary work and has accepted a program whereby its task will be completed in 1933. It is expected the work will consist of 32 volumes, each of about 1,000 pages.

The committee now is studying a suggestion that it compile a sixteen volume biographical dictionary with scope extending from Roman days until the present.

AMERICAN METHODS HELP RUSSIAN ARMENIAN ORPHANS

LENINAKAN, Russian Armenia, Sep. 12.—A novel experiment in education is being tried with signal success by one of the great American orphanages here. Each child is treated as an individual, and a separate time-table is drawn up for his benefit. Class work is largely abolished in favor of individual training in workshops and at daily household tasks. Each child is encouraged to specialize in the particular work for which he seems to have capacity and inclination.

This system is particularly necessary in these Near East Relief institutions, because every child is required to leave the orphanage at the age of 16, by which age he must be equipped to earn his own living at some trade. Twenty-nine different trades and handicrafts are being taught in the workshops, and the graduates who have been apprenticed out during the past three years are now employed in 235 different occupations, many of them showing great promise of success.

TRESPASS NOTICE

YOUNG MAN GIVES HERO THREE CENTS FOR RESCUING FIANCEE

PRESSBURG, Czechoslovakia, Sep. 12.—Three cents was the financial measure of the joy experienced by a young man when a gypsy saved his sweetheart form drowning in the Danube. The young lovers had a quarrel, which ended with the young woman jumping into the river. Her betrothed, becoming frantic, called wildly for help. The gypsy, taking in the situation, jumped into the water and brought the girl ashore.

Her lover expressed his joy at the prompt rescue and then handed the hero one Czech crown, equivalent to three cents.

ATTACK MADE ON HOMESTEAD LAW AT LAND HEARING

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

PENDLETON, Ore., Sep. 11.—An attack on the 640-acre grazing homestead law was made today by Dan P. Smythe, prominent sheep man, when he appeared as a witness before the senate sub-committee on public lands which continued today its hearings begun yesterday under the chairmanship of Senator Robert N. Stanfield.

The law that permits the filing by a homesteader on 640 acres of grazing lands has not been a success, the witness declared. A section of desert land is not sufficiently large to enable a man to provide for himself and family on what the land is capable of producing, and the outcome of the law has been that the homesteader has sold out his land to some stockman as soon as possible after acquiring title from the government.

"The old homestead law that permitted the settlement of quarter and half sections was a mighty fine law and was one of the big factors in settling the west," Mr. Smythe said. "But the good land has been taken, and the law now is not valuable."

He suggested that sale of the public domain where it is still held by the government in comparatively small plots would be a good thing for both the government and livestock operators.

He expressed his belief in the value of regulation work on the forests for grazing activities as performed by the forest service and gave it as his personal belief that some regulatory work should be continued. Greater latitude should be given grazers in acting on their individual judgments with a provision that they be held responsible for any damage they might cause ranges by overstocking or by any other improper practices.

K. G. Warner of Pilot Rock expressed the belief that long time leases should be provided for. Another session will be held this afternoon.

A BRIDE'S DIARY

A Love Story of Today

By Idah McGlone Gibson

Cleo Madison eloped with Lieutenant Paul Armstrong, U. S. A. It does not take Cleo long to discover marriage is not a path of roses. On the train, going to the army post, she has an allegorical dream indicating her future problems. The colonel, Arthur Blakely Beldon, of the post, is a 'lady killer" and his actions have compromised Rita Thorndike, the wife of a reprobate lieutenant. Rita is innocent ,and Cleo forms an immediate and deep friendship for her. Rita, at Cleo's instigation, decides to leave the post and joins a vaudeville troupe under the name Rheda Thorwaldson. Paul has been having his troubles, chiefly liquor and gambling. Cleo refuses to be gushingly sypathetic. The post is agog with gossip and suspicion when Rita leaves and the colonel implores Cleo to give him information—unsuccessfully. Climaxing a series of domestic troubles between Cleo and Paul, Cleo puts Paul in the hospital by hitting him on the head with a vase. After a serious time Paul pulls through due to a blood transfusion from Chick Adams, an old sweetheart of Cleo's. Paul's mother and father have arrived, called to the post because of their son's desperate illness. Cleo's father has also come.

Cleo tells her father that she wounded Paul.

Paul's parents are unaware of this, but his mother makes herself unpleasant just the same.

Cleo, alone in her home, is confronted by the drunken Lieut. Bill Thorndike, husband of Rita, who demands to know where his wife is.

He attempts to kill Cleo, but is accidentally killed himself as he struggles with Johnson, who has rushed to Cleo's aid.

A TALK WITH RITA.

When I drew up to my home I was glad to find that Mrs. Armstrong was still over at the mess hall.

"Don't you think I had better go after your mother-in-law, Cleo?" asked my father.

"I think she'd hate you if you did, dad. She's probably getting an earful of gossip. I'm quite sure she's pumping Mrs. Ralston with the same energy that Mrs. Ralston is pumping her, and they're both having a perfectly wonderful time, because they're both fearing me up into litter bits. However, I am perfectly willing to pay the price if it will keep her there until after I have talked with Rita."

"Well, you go in the house, daughter," said dad, "and I'll go back and try to keep the awkward squad from firing over you too often. I'll not hurry to bring her home, so take your time in telephoning to your friend. Don't think about the cost of it, either, as I will pay for it, my dear."

I threw my arms around my father's neck and kissed him. Dear old dad, how sweet he was! It seemed to me I had only put in a call, when the bell rang and I heard Rita's voice: "Hello, hello." As I answered back she recognized mine.

"I'm so glad to hear you, Cleo. How is Paul?"

"How'd you know about Paul, Rita?" I exclaimed in surprise.

"Chick said he had had an accident when he talked with me last night, and when he did not call me up tonight, I immediately decided it was because Paul was worse. That's the reason why I called you up, dear."

"So you were calling me, were you Rita? It's very strange that you should do it just at this time. I had just put in a call for you. I thought when I heard your voice it was in answer to it.'

I felt a little constriction at my heart, dear diary, when she innocently intimated that Chick had been in the habit of telephoning her every night. Consequently I hesitated a little before I began telling her about the startling events of the day. In fact, I really did not know how to begin.

Rita spoke again. "Has Chick gone back home, Cleo? I wanted to tell him how well we are doing here."

"No, Chick is in the hospital," I blurted out. I heard a little gasp.

"Cleo, what is the matter with Chick? He semed all right yesterday when he talked with me."

"Noting, Rita dear, except that he gave a quart of his blood to Paul. Don't worry about it, however, as he is quite all right now, and the doctor says he may get out tomorrow." I caught a sigh of relief as it came over the wire before Rita asked: "Is Paul better, also?"

"Yes, dear. He will probably be out in a week, and as for Chick he will be talking to you tomorrow night I am sure.

"I wonder why he didn't tell me, Cleo, that he was going to do this?"

"Surely you haven't known him this long, Rita, without realizing what a modest chap he is. But let's not talk about anything but yourself. I have something to tell you of greater importance, than to detail you the steps in Chick's and Paul's convalescence."

"What is it, Cleo—what is it? Has Bill come back?"

"Yes. He came over here to my house this afternoon with the avowed purpose of putting a bullet through me."

"Then he was drunk and dopey! It was bad enough when I was able to confine his cruelties to myself, but when he begins to practice them upon my friends, I think the time has come when I should say: 'It is all over.'"

"You won't have to say that, Rita. It is all over."

"What do you mean? Is Bill in the guardhouse? Tell me, tell me, what do you mean?"

"I will, my dear, if you'll let me. You see, Lieutenant Thorndike seemed to have found out that you had slipped out of his clutches and that I had helped you to do it."

"Never mind what he thought, Cleo. Tell me about yourself. He did not hurt you, did he?"

PENDLETON IS IN READINESS FOR ROUNDUP

PENDLETON, Ore., Sept. 12.—(Special.) — Pendleton is in gala dress for a very great occasion: the Pendleton Round-Up, which opens Wednesday, September 16, for a four day show.

The streets are gay with banners and electric lights and Pendleton citizens are wearing sombreros and loud shirts which rival those of the cowboys who are here already awaiting the opening day. The competition will be especially keen among these riders, bull doggers and ropers, for there is assembled the best cowboy talent in the world. Among strong contenders for the Roosevelt trophy, given the all around cowboy champion, is Paddy Ryan, who last year won the trophy.

Visitors of note will not be lacking. Irvin S. Cobb, famed as an author and humorist, is coming, and will be accompanied by Charles Russell, the well known cowboy artist of Montana. They will, with Mrs. Russell and Mr. Cobb's daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Frank M. Chapman, Jr., of New York, be guests in the private car of J. L. Doyle, division superintendent of the Great Northern.

C. C. Moore, governor of Idaho, will be among the guests. This will be Governor Moore's first visit to the Round-Up.

PRUNES USED IN PLUG TOBACCO.

Few people know it, but the Oregon prune has an outlet which takes care of a large share of the splits and a considerable quantity of smaller sizes in the manufacture of chewing tobacco. A number of packers here ship a car or two each to tobacco companies directly every year for this purpose. So far this business has not materialized to any extent this year ah far as is known.

The prunes are used in adding a sweet flavor to the tobacco plug and also assist in making up the constituency of the tobacco which holds the plug together so that it fits the receptive mouth.

ANOTHER FILE SPECIAL

A shipment just in of flat and half round files and rasps, 10, 12 and 14-inch sizes at 15c, smaller sizes at 5c and 10c. These are rejects but 100 per cent usable. Get this special at Carr's.
