ALASKAN ESKIMOS BECOME SUCCESSFUL FOX FARMERS.

NOME, Alaska, Sept. 15. — Frank DuFresne, in charge of the Seward Peninsula for the United State Biological Survey, reported that Eskimos are taking a full part in developing the farming of foxes and the marketing of their pelts into a bounteous Alaska industry.

The south side of the peninsula is on Bering Sea and the north on the Arctic Ocean. On the north coast line white men destroyed the Eskimo livelihood by annihilating the whales and burning the driftwood.

The Eskimos have taken to white foxes, and some families are making incomes of $2,000 annually. From catching wild foxes and selling the furs, the natives have gone on to developing simple ranches.

The women do most of the work—it's the aboriginal way—but, Du Fresne pointed out, families threatened with extinction are beginning to thrive, though father sits around the cabin that has replaced the igloo.

CANADIAN HORSES ROUNDED UP TO PROVIDE MEAT IN EUROPE.

REGINA Sask., Sept. 15. — A syndicate was in the Western Canada market this summer for 50,000 horses to be shipped to Belgium, France and other European countries for human consumption. George Pootmans of this city headed the syndicate.

Pootmans said he would buy all types and sizes or even crippled horses just so that had no organic diseases. Great numbers of wild horses roaming the ranges in the southern part of Saskatchewan were to be captured and used. Pootmans declared that he would have to purchase the bulk of his 50,000 order at a rate of $3 a head to make the venture successful.

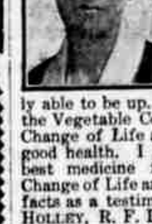
SICK 3 YEARS WITHOUT RELIEF

Finally Found Health by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound



Columbia, S. C.—"Your medicine has done me so much good that I feel like I owe my life to it. For three years I was sick and was treated by physicians, but they didn't seem to help me any. Then I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and got strong enough to do my housework, where before I was hardly able to be up. I have also taken the Vegetable Compound during the Change of Life and it has left me in good health. I recommend it as the best medicine for women in the Change of Life and you can use these facts as a testimonial."—Mrs. S. A. HOLLEY, R. F. D. No. 4, Columbia, South Carolina.

Why suffer for years with backache, nervousness, painful times and other ailments common to women from early life to middle age, when Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will bring relief?

In a recent country-wide canvass of purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound over 200,000 replies were received, and 98 out of every 100 reported they were benefited by its use.

CHINA SEEKS HELP IN EFFORT TO BLOT OUT KIDNAPING

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—Nearly twelve years of organized effort to stamp out kidnapping in China has served only to disclose that far greater exertions are necessary if this particular form of slavery is to be done away with

The situation has prompted the Chinese who organized in Shanghai in 1912 the Anti-Kidnapping Society of China, through which nearly 4,000 women and children victims have been rescued from their captors, to launch a campaign abroad for help in the task. Joseph J. Keegan of Shanghai, the Special Foreign Commissioner of the society, has placed before the State Department a plan to raise a fund of $5,000,000 for extension of the crusade against kidnappers. The move will be called to official attention also in London and Paris, although it is through the aid of private citizens that the project is to be carried out.

Chinese kidnappers not only seize women and girls in the larger cities and ship them to far corners of the vast country to be sold to brothel keepers, but prey also on the religious desire of well-to-do Chinese to leave behind them sons to worship at their tombs and those of their ancestors. Where a wealthy man without a son of his own so desires, Chinese law permits him to adopt a boy to be reared as his own son and religious custom makes ancestor worship by such an adopted son as acceptable as though the boy were the blood descendant of the father. The kidnapping organizations seize upon this fact to send representatives to a wealthy man who has no son and interest him in tales of a boy of fine qualities and who could be adopted provided the debts of the deceased father also were taken over. When a deal has been made on this basis, a youngster of the right age is kidnapped on the streets and palmed off on the victim of the scheme.

Boys also are kidnapped for sale into labor slavery. Recently in Shanghai the police of the French settlement discovered more than 30 kidnapped native boys ranging in age from 12 to 15 years.

The anti-kidnapping society maintains a special force of agents to hunt out kidnapping bands and cooperate with the police. Of the victims rescued, however, it has been possible to find parents or relatives of only a few and the society now maintains an industrial training school at Kiangwan where more than 600 are being educated and equipped to take care of themselves. The cost of the work has reached a figure of about $70,000 annually and the drain upon the purses of the Chinese who originated the rescue work has compelled them for the first time to seek help outside of China. Mr. Keegan was sent to lay the facts before a number of wealthy men of philanthropic instincts here and in Europe.

"Throughout China, but particularly in the central and southern provinces, is spread a vast, loosely knit organization of kidnappers who ply their terrible trade to an increased extent as the years pass, with a thorough contempt for provincial officials or police, in the present disorganized state of the country," Mr. Keegan explained. "The number of kidnapping crimes committed in China is difficult to estimate, but is well over fifty thousand.

"There is always a ready market, albeit an underground one, for boys and girls suitable for sale into slavery, and pitiable is the life of drudgery they are condemned to. More mature girls and young women are sold into what might be termed 'yellow slavery.' In all cases rescue is difficult, particularly as the abductors or kidnappers seldom attempt to market their catch near their field of operations and generally take the victims to a distant city."

OREGON GRIDMEN CALLED TO FIELD

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

EUGENE, Ore., Sept. 15.—With a brief review of essentials of football on the schedule for the first few days, Coach Dick Smith of the University of Oregon issued the first call for practice here today. All eligible lettermen were on deck and an abundant string of last year's freshmen and substitutes were also available.

Light scrimmage will be taken up shortly. Heavy scrimmage will not be in order until the season is well under way.

STATISTICS GIVE U. S. FIRST PLACE AS CARELESS COUNTRY

CLEVELAND, Sept. 15. — The opening gun in the world wide war against accidents on the streets, at home and in workshops will be fired on Monday morning, September 28, when representatives of more than 30 nations will attend the fourteenth annual Safety Congress in this city, where 450 speakers will address 90 separate gatherings, which will be in session until Friday, October 2.

America will be branded as the most careless nation in the world by speakers who will point out that the accident death rate for the United States is 76.2 fatalities for each 100,000 population, almost two and one-third times as high as the record of England and Wales, which is only 33.6 for each 100,000 population. The safest country appears to be Denmark whose rate is 20 for each 100,000.

The League of Nations will be represented by Dr. Frederick Ritzman, of the International Labor office of Geneva, Switzerland, who will come here especially to tell about plans for accident prevention campaigns in other countries and to obtain data regarding eforts that are being made here to conserve lives and limbs and properties.

What is needed in the United States to reduce the number of lives lost through accidents will be dwelt upon by Judge John Barton Payne, of the American Red Cross, whose topic will be "The Nationalization of Ideas and Ideals."

How America should mobilize her peace time force, will be pointed out by Rear Admiral William S. Sims, U. S. N., who will speak on "Safety in the Nation."

Participating in the Safety Congress will be the National Safety Council, National Civilization Rehabilitation Conference, National Organization for Public Health Nursing, American Society of Safety Engineers, and trade groups representing every industry in the country.

A BRIDE'S DIARY

A Love Story of Today

By Idah McGlone Gibson

Cleo Madison eloped with Lieutenant Paul Armstrong, U. S. A. It does not take Cleo long to discover marriage is not a path of roses. On the train, going to the army post, she has an allegorical dream indicating her future problems. The colonel, Arthur Blakely Beldon, of the post, is a "lady killer" and his actions have compromised Rita Thorndike, the wife of a reprobate lieutenant. Rita is innocent ,and Cleo forms an immediate and deep friendship for her. Rita, at Cleo's instigation, decides to leave the post and joins a vaudeville troupe under the name Rheda Thorwaldson. Paul has been having his troubles, chefly liquor and gambing. Cleo refuses to be gushingly sypathetic. The post is agog with gossip and suspicion when Rita leaves and the colonel implores Cleo to give him information—unsuccessfully. Climaxing a series of domestic troubles between Cleo and Paul, Cleo puts Paul in the hospital by hitting him on the head with a vase. After a serious time Paul pulls through due to a blood transfusion from Chick Adams, an old sweetheart of Cleo's. Paul's mother and father have arrived, called to the post because of their son's desperate illness. Cleo's father has also come.

Cleo tells her father that she wounded Paul.

Paul's parents are unaware of this, but his mother makes herself unpleasant just the same.

Cleo, alone in her home, is confronted by the drunken Lieut. Bill Thorndike, husband of Rita, who demands to know where his wife is.

He attempts to kill Cleo, but is accidentally killed himself as he struggles with Johnson, who has rushed to Cleo's aid.

THE POINT OF VIEW.

"Think it over, Rita," I said to her just before I hung up the receiver, for I heard father driving up to the door and knew that Mrs. Armstrong was with him. "Think all that I have said to you over, my dear. Probably Chick will call you up tomorrow night and you can tell him then. Goodbye, dear." Rita clicked her receiver as she hung up.

"I do hope Paul's mother will be so tired that she will want to go straight to her room," I said to myself as I went to the front door to let them in; but no such good fortune was in store for me, I found out from her very first words.

"I can't understand, Cleo, why you made friends with such a notorious woman as this Rita Thorndike. You should have known better, my dear. Why, her scandalous actions with Colonel Beldon had almost ostracized her from all the rest of the women at the Post.

"Mrs. Ralston said that she was ready to weep when she found that you were making her an intimate friend instead of some of the older and more mature women who could advise you."

"Did Mrs. Ralston say anything about ostracizing Colonel Beldon?"

"Certainly not. The wife of an officer does not criticize the Colonel of the regiment."

"All right, but I'm going to criticize the wife of one of my husband's officers. I think Mrs. Ralston is one of the most unpleasant old women I have ever known.

"I wonder just why the older generation of men and women never say anything to you that does you any good whatever. I've known a great many older people in the short time I have lived, and I have never known one that has said to me: 'Take courage, child. I've gone through the same processes of experience, of mistakes and misunderstandings, and I have at last come to a proper adjustment of life.' Instead of that they have loaded me down with criticism and never have seemed to understand that I must go through the name experiences, mistakes and misunderstandings, if I would have a character worth impressing upon my time or my race."

"Good Lord, Cleo. What has changed you so since you were married? You talk as if you were about 75 years old."

"I sometimes feel like that old, Mrs. Armstrong. Oh, how I would like to get back to the gay, carefree days that I had before I married your son."

"There—it's out at last. You are blaming all this mixup, all this trouble, on to poor Paul. I never wanted him to marry you. I always told him he would rue the day he married you."

"Well I think you told him the truth, Mrs. Armstrong. But we had to marry to find it out. If I hadn't married Paul, I probably would have gone through life thinking I had lost the best there was. I do not feel that I have lost anything whatever in this experiment."

"Do you mean to tell me, Cleo Armstrong, that you consider one of the sacraments of the church nothing more than an experiment in your case? What does Paul think about it?"

"I haven't asked him yet, but I imagine he thinks the same thing I do."

"I'm quite sure he doesn't. My son has had a decent bringing up."

"Thank you. His education was obtained mostly from private schools and the military academy at West Point. But let's don't quarrel I know you think me an intensely disagreeable young woman, and I shouldn't' be surprised if your son thought the same if he could be made to own up honestly what he does think."

"I'm telling all this to you simply because I know something has got to be done about this marriage of ours. We must adjust matters in some way or else we will have to break apart."

"This is the most horrible thing I have ever known. If this is the flapper standpoint, it's no wonder the world is going to the dogs."

"That is from your point of view, Mrs. Armstrong, but from mine and possibly your son's, the world is just finding itself, and while we are groping in the darkness, yet we have come to one conclusion, and that is that marriage must be made very hard and divorce very easy if we would have happiness and content in the home and healthy, decent children."

GERMAN PRISONER OF WAR FLEES RUSSIA AFTER ELEVEN YEARS

BONN, Germany, Sept. 15. — After eleven years' imprisonment in Russia, during which he made several unsuccessful attempts to escape, Paul Cons, the sculptor, finally has reached Bonn. During the Russian campaign of the German army in August, 1914, Cons was wounded and taken prisoner. When he recovered he declares, he was assigned to a Russian working squad and put at hard labor.

His repeated attempts to escape were frustrated until this year, when Cons and three companions succeeded in crossing the border.

PITTSBURG WINS 9 TO 4 VICTORY FROM THE ROBINS

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—Major league clubs are enmeshed in their final inter-sectional tussle of the 1925 season today with first division teams pitted against the leaders in both circuits.

Pittsburgh regained its winning stride after taking four setbacks in a row by whacking out a nine to four victory over the Robins yesterday. Vic Aldridge was master in the box, hanging up his seventh consecutive triumph.

As the Giants were speeding westward to open a series with the third place Cincinnati Reds, the victory advanced the lead of the Pirates to six and one-half games.

The Athletics lost ground in their forlorn pennant chase by dropping the final of a six game series to the Yankees, 3 to 1. Sam Jones limited the Mackmen to two singles.

Although idle, the world champion Senators gained by the Athletics' defeat and their lead was stretched to eight games.

Washington had the Tigers for opponents in the opener of a series today. Since their last visit to the capital, the Bengals have become a more formidable club and are now hard on the heels of the Browns for the third place.

"Goose" Goslin, left fielder for the Griffmen was re-instated after a conference with Manager Bucky Harris and President Clarke Griffith. He was indefinitely suspended by the Washington pilot after a wordy battle during the game with the Athletics Sunday, in which Harris brought the player to task for misplays. At the time he was fined $100, but whether the penalty has been rescinded was not learned.
