Park Near Old Oregon Trail for President Harding Memorial Is Projected by Tri-State Society

PENDLETON, Ore., Sept. 26.—Articles of incorporation of the Harding Memorial Park Association, a body that will draw its membership from the three Northwest states of Idaho, Washington and Oregon, have been prepared and sent to the corporation commissioner at Salem, according to Frederick Steiner, Pendleton attorney. Mr. Steiner was chairman of the organization committee appointed at a meeting at Meacham in the summer of 1924 to draft the articles and work out the general plan of organization. A general meeting of the interests of the association will be held at Milton, October 8.

The general purpose of the association is to create a memorial to the late President Harding in the form of a beautiful park which will mark for all time to come the respect of the West for the president who lent his presence to the dedication of the final stretch of the Old Oregon Trail highway over the course of the historic trail that saves the northwest and insured its inclusion in the borders of the United States, Mr. Steiner declared.

"The Oregon trail means more from the historic point of view than many of us of the present day have stopped to realize," he said. "If that trail had not been blazed over desert and mountain,

Moroni Olsen Is Significant Figure

Moroni Olsen, coming to Roseburg in "Olympion" October 2, auspices Business Women club, is one of the significant figures on the American stage. Rodin would have studied him with enjoyment, and Goya would have painted him with zest.

To attempt what this man is doing—to be a pioneer in the business and beauty of stage production for audiences accustomed to the commercial road show—takes the old Viking spirit of his northern forebears.

When you study the roundness and completeness of a play as he presents it, you gain a glimpse of the sacrifice of himself as an actor, and better understand the high accomplishment of the man who allows no personal ambition, no natural desire for "starring" himself, to mar the representation of that shadow of reality which the best "group acting" gives us.

Perhaps the highest praise audience can bestow on any director is that they journey homeward with no thought of the actors in their minds, but instead, an absorbing memory of the parts created, and an intense desire to win from living that mysterious something which upholds courage and clarifies experience.

America is justly proud of her creative pioneers. In the future magazines will feature the origin and accomplishment of the Moroni Olsen Players, pioneers in a special kind of play production. The director, Moroni Olsen, a most unassuming person—has rather avoided publicity so far, on account of his aims and ideals.

What many people do not understand is that he is a philosopher as well as an actor and critic. His fellow workers are his enthusiastic partisans and converts. All of their work, as he plans, for the perfect whole—the production.

You cannot have a flawless ensemble, nor present a true picture of that shifting opalescent thing, life, without true subordination of parts. From the first play produced by his company, Mr. Olsen has preached his doctrine and practiced it. The scene gains even if Sarah cries!

But he has done more. He has trained and encouraged every actor with him to believe in the immense beauty that will be their reward for such thought and work. In other words, he is making men and women with a strong understanding of what is best in living, while directing them toward what is finest in acting.

So that even this is not the end. All his company, as they achieve this sense of oneness, this incomparable beauty that will be their reward, may exist through patient thought and unified work, perceive their power to change and modify, at least in some slight measure, the days and aims of those with whom they come in contact. Slowly they perceive that a great actor must be a great man. Deeply they feel that the hour of the stage is but the culmination of all their hours of work, study, sacrifice and love.

Antier's Theatre

A picture of undoubted import to this year's motion picture contributions is "Sun-Up" which comes to the Antier theatre on Sunday. It is a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture and was directed by Edmund Goulding.

Goulding is well known as a writer and scenarist. He has written the best seller "Fury," several of the starring vehicles for Mae Murray, and is co-author of "Dancing Mothers," one of the most successful plays now running in its second year in New York.

"Sun-Up," as conceived for the stage by Lulu Vollmer, created a sensation on the stage in New York and on tour with Lucille LaVerne playing the part of "Ma" Cagley, the same role she interprets in the screen version. According to advance reports the screen version is even more powerful in its dramatic sweep than the stage play.

Those two favorites, Pauline Starke and Conrad Nagel are featured in leading roles. Nagel plays the part of the lawless mountain boy to whom understanding comes through contact with the outer world gained during the war. Miss Starke is his sweetheart, and is said to give her finest and most sympathetic performance in an exceedingly difficult role.

THEATRES

Liberty Theatre.

Words can only hint vaguely at the spirit of sheer comedy which breezes through Douglas MacLean's latest screen triumph, "Introduce Me," which opens Sunday at the Liberty theatre.

It is safe to say that this picture will come to remain a model farce comedy for other producers to imitate but it is difficult to see how it can ever be eclipsed. It confirms the growing opinion that Douglas MacLean is the screen's most gifted light comedian. It cannot be compared with any former efforts of this youthful star so far does it surpass any of his previous successes.

"Introduce Me" is one long succession of thrills, fun and love which gathers speed as it rushes to an amazing climax. Douglas MacLean has introduced into this delicious story of a would-be mountaineer some of the most hair-raising adventures ever presented in a picture and this clean-cut young American makes his efforts without the aid of queer clothes or grotesque actions.

The performance was marked with well-drawn applause, chuckles, of mirth, staccato, laughter and sitting-on-the-edge-of-your-seat thrills.

THE EVENING ENSEMBLE NOW WORN BY EVERY SMARTLY DRESSED WOMAN

GLORIA SWANSON WEARS THIS EVENING ENSEMBLE IN SILVER & APRICOT, AFTER HER OWN DESIGN. BEADED ENSEMBLE OF BLACK, SHADED TO GREEN.

By VYVYAN DONNER

LAST winter found the new idea coming along of having evening ensemble outfits—that is, gown and evening wrap to match. This spring and summer found the idea still good—and it now looks as tho the fall season will demand such costumes for every smart woman. So don't dream of planning your autumn evening gowns without planning for a cape or coat to match.

Two evening ensembles are shown above, in photo and sketch. The photo shows Gloria Swanson, the Paramount star, in an ensemble of her own design. It is a creation in apricot and silver. Silver cloth forms the tight, short slip, and the over-dress is of apricot georgette. This georgette is trimmed in scroll work of Persian design, worked out in slender silver cords. Huge silver corded edges the "collar" of the matching wrap, and edges the georgette tunic.

The stockings are apricot, and the shoes are silver—and the whole ensemble, including Gloria, is to be seen in the new Paramount picture "The Coast of Polly."

Another of Miss Swanson's ideas in dresses is sketched at the right. This dress shows the use of the flare, and the V neck, which is going to be so much the vogue this fall and winter. The gown at the right has a heavily beaded skirt which ripples out gracefully at every step, scintillating smartly all the time.

The colors are unusual for evening—being a deep green, grey and black, with navy another shade to relieve it. The matching wrap is of grey velvet, lined in green georgette. Green stockings, and green shoes, with black tips, complete the picture. But we must mention that jet beads glisten all around the hemline, forming a glittering, quivering fringe—and the earrings, if any, MUST be of onyx.
