ROSEBURG BOOSTERS WHO FINE COPS

HEAR BIG CHIEFS AND THEIR FAITHFUL SQUAWS 'BRING HOME THE BACON' FROM STATE FAIR

Million Dollars Worth of Advertising Obtained for the Umpqua Valley as a Result of Their Efforts at Oregon State Fair on Friday.

Loaded down with two huge silver loving cups and with traces of the bright-colored war paint still lingering on their smiling countenances, the Umpqua Chiefs, and Umpqua Squaws returned to their reservation at six o'clock this morning on their special train after spending a day at the Oregon State Fair proving that Roseburg has the best crowd of boosters in the entire north-west.

The Umpqua valley chieftains galloped away with all honors in the Hospitality Day contests at the State Fair yesterday. Of the three cups offered, the Roseburg delegation captured two, one for the best drilling in front of the grandstand and the other for the most spectacular and sensational stunt staged during the Night Horse Show. The third cup went to the Bandon Beach boys who won it because they traveled the greatest distance to the fair.

Three hundred strong, the Umpqua Valley redskins marched through the fair gates at ten o'clock yesterday morning, led by the Douglas County Concert Band in full Indian regalia and their "nee-naubed" with war-paint. The American Legion Drum corps with their tom toms were on the job every minute of the time and made a tremendous hit. From the first moment of their appearance until midnight when the train loaded with the whooping warriors sped southward, the Douglas county delegation was in the limelight. Not a minute was wasted throughout the entire day and the thousands of fair visitors heard of the wonders of the Umpqua valley from every side until they were at last convinced that here is the original location of the Garden of Eden.

Two thousand copies of "The War Whoop," official Umpqua Chief publication were distributed on the grounds during the day and were in great demand, being voted as one of the finest advertising features of the day. The "War Whoop" described the invasion of the Chiefs, the subsequent capture of the city and predicted the winning of the silver cups, a prophecy which came to pass.

After parading through the grounds and exhibit buildings, the boosters returned to their train where they were served with lunch. Again they bedecked themselves in feathers, blankets and greasy paint and started for the race track. In the most colorful exhibition of the whole fair they stampeded to the track and with a tremendous Indian setting the drill team dropped their blankets and staged their stunt. They were attired in a garb to represent the brown skin of an Indian and carried shields bearing the individual letters of "Umpqua Chiefs." They were "letter perfect" in their drill. Alvin Knudtson, their drill master, was greatly pleased at their showing and the Chiefs were loud in their praise of his efforts in coaching the team to such perfection. The grandstands cheered loudly as the team went through their capers. The swash-buckling Pirates of Coos Bay were there with clanking cutlery but after viewing the exhibition of the Chiefs retired to the grandstand and did not drill.

bringing as captive a Coos Bay Pirate, Ashland Indian, Grants Pass Caveman, and Bandon Beachman. The leader of the braves, Victor Peterson, announced that his followers had taken these pale-faces as hostages until their Princess could be found. A renegade Indian, represented by Guy Gordon, clashed between the captives and the Chief and in a frenzy urged that they be burned to the stake as their scalplocks were mere pittance for the loss of their Princess. Then in a scathing denunciation of the four representatives of the booster clubs he brought down the house. Caustic remarks concerning the boasts of the various clubs were hurled at them and the audience applauded gleefully. Just as he had finished with the fourth man, the remainder of the searching party cut loose with war whoops from the edge of the arena and one of them appeared carrying the limp form of Princess Umpqua. She was soon revived upon being returned to her happy homeland and entered into a dance of joy. Miss Conlee was the hit of the evening in her dance and the thousands who viewed it applauded until the building was in an uproar. The entire tribe then engaged in a tribal dance and made their exit. This stunt won the silver loving cup for the most spectacular stunt of the evening.

Douglas county and the Umpqua Valley received a million dollars worth of advertising yesterday as a result of the excursion of this booster organization. It was money well spent and the Umpqua Chiefs are now more firmly organized than ever. Their drill team will continue their work during the winter months and plan an attendance at either the Rose Festival or Populotion Roundup next year.

The Umpqua Squaws deserve a lot of credit for their part in the ceremonies. They entered into the day's festivities with a great deal of pep and really received more applause than did the Chiefs.

One Cron-Douglas county is assured of a booster crop and with a bunch of men and women such as the Chiefs and Squaws this section of the state should forge ahead during the next few years.

Methodist Conference Has Pledges of $135,000 Toward $250,000 Pension Fund.
(Associated Press Leased Wire.)
EGUE, Ore., Oct. 3.—The Methodist Episcopal conference this morning in session accepted into full membership John A. Lind, of Stayton, E. W. Withnell, of Banks, Lester B. Bailey, of Marcola, and H. L. Welles, of the Klamath Indian reservation. Henry Cross and M. G. Tennyson were admitted on trial.

Several changes in membership standing were made during the session. Rev. H. M. Cooper, Rev. W. E. Inralls, Rev. H. H. Miles, and Rev. H. W. Robbins were made effective in membership. Rev. B. A. Bristol, now superintendent, will locate, as will J. F. Coleman, who has been retired for the past six years.

A lively discussion was aroused when the matter of payment of a pledge made by the conference for a part payment of the Bishop Matthews Hughes Memorial window in the Methodist Episcopal church was brought up. The conference a year ago pledged $500, half of which had been paid. This morning a solicitation among the ministers resulted in nearly collecting the balance. The campaign for a fund of $250,000 for a permanent ministerial pension fund has resulted in a sum of $135,000 being raised. It was reported, following the reading of the report on pledges by T. E. Elliot, chairman of the committee. The fund is being given every encouragement, and hopes for its completion in the near future are held. Both C. B. Harrison of Portland and T. E. Elliott were commended for their work in this matter.

COURT REFUSES TO POSTPONE TRIALS OF THREE CONVICTS
SALEM, Ore., Oct. 3.—Circuit Judge Kelly today overruled the motion of Judge Will R. King, counsel for Murray, Kelly and Wilcox, to continue the trial of their cases until December and as a result Murray must go on trial here Monday morning on a charge of murder in the first degree. Time for trial of the other two convicts has not been set.

In handing down his decision, Judge Kelly declared that he was convinced the defense had not exercised the requisite amount of diligence, having had 30 days from the time of the arraignment in which to act and that during the entire period the court had been open to entertain any motion on its behalf. The court declared that the witnesses for the estate had all been subpoenaed, and that it was too late for the counsel to request postponement. The request, if made, should have come at a much earlier time, Kelly stated.

The state has subpoenaed 23 witnesses, and counsel for defense estimates that 10 days will be consumed in the trial of Murray.
