ARMY REPLIES TO CRITICISM OF AIR SERVICE

Independent Aviation Body Recommended by General Patrick Not Favored

IDEAS HELD UNSOUND

Lesson Learned from World War Is That Airplanes Serve Best as Aid to Infantrymen.

PIERCE FAVORS EXTENSION BY BOTH RAILWAYS

Competition Between S. P. and Oregon Trunk Best for Inland Region.

ZONE IDEA IS SCORED

Development of State, Not Row Between Roads, Is Sole Concern of Governor.

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)
PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 13.—Governor Walter M. Pierce took the stand in the rail hearing today as the first witness for the Oregon Public Service commission, as intervenor, and recommended that both the Southern Pacific and the Oregon Trunk be allowed to make the extensions for which they have applied. The hearing is being conducted before Charles D. Malaffie, director of finance of the Interstate Commerce commission.

The Southern Pacific completed its case this morning. Paul Shoup, executive secretary of the company, testified, telling of the acquisition of the Oregon, California and Eastern (Strahorn line), and the Nevada-California-Oregon company line.

He said that everything would be done by the Southern Pacific to make its control of the Strahorn line satisfactory to Klamath Falls. He said his company will begin standardizing the Nevada-California-Oregon line as soon as the Interstate Commerce commission gives approval and ratifies the acquisition of the line by the Southern Pacific.

Would Aid Lakeview Also.

Governor Pierce recited that the Oregon commission had sought to obtain a cross state line from Crane to Odell, and that a line be built south from Bend, to open up a large region of the state now without rail transportation. He emphasized the need of development of the territory around Lakeview. He favored standardization of the narrow gauge road now entering Lakeview from the south, and declared that Lakeview should have an outlet to the north, giving connection with markets served by the Northern lines and the Union Pacific. He added:

"Where a single line of railroad is sufficient, I do not believe in duplication of construction, but I do believe that the vast central Oregon country should have rail competition and that competing companies should have joint user privileges with existing companies. At present we are prevented from reaching the eastern markets. We need a cross-state line. Such a line, if built under conditions and safeguards which will permit the owning companies freely and ac-

Pittsburgh Buys Rhyne and Waner, San Francisco Stars

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)
PITTSBURGH, Oct. 13.—The Pittsburgh Pirates were understood today to have closed a deal with San Francisco of the Pacific Coast league for the purchase of Hal Rhyne, star shortstop, and Paul Waner, outfielder, at a reported price of $100 and three players to be delivered.

October 13.—Manager McKeech said the deal was pending, but would not confirm it definitely, saying he had not yet had a final conference with Barney Dreyfuss, club president.

Rhyne and Waner have been two of the most eagerly sought minor league stars this season. At one time it was reported the New York Yankees had put through negotiations for them.

FIRST HEAVY FROST OF SEASON REPORTED TODAY

The first heavy frost for the fall season was recorded at the local U. S. weather bureau station this morning. Although the frost was not classified here as a "killing frost," it is feared that in some of the outlying localities it has officially marked an end to the melon season. The temperature this morning at the time of the observation at 5 o'clock stood at 35 degrees, but at 8 o'clock this morning had dropped two degrees lower, making the minimum 33 degrees, one point above freezing. The prediction is for continued fair weather with light to heavy frosts tonight.

ARMY REPLIES TO CRITICISM OF AIR SERVICE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—The army general staff presented to the president's air board today a statement in rebuttal to witnesses who have urged sweeping changes in the national defense organization.

It denounced as unsound the proposed department of national defense, asserted that "direct administration and control" of the air service actually does rest "in the hands of the chief of the air service," and presented a general denial of charges of mismanagement in the administration of the air service itself.

Presented by Brigadier-General Hugh A. Brum, assistant chief of staff, the statement covering 51 typewritten pages, was prefaced with the remark that "the war department has considered with painstaking thoroughness and care his various propositions and views presented to the board."

"The 'worse' in the last sentence of the above quoted paragraph was underscored in the official text of the statement.

Says Patrick's Ideas Unsound.

"It is believed," General Drum testified, "that the ideas expressed by the chief of the air service are fundamentally unsound * * * in his conception of a new national defense doctrine, whereby the theater of operations along our frontier is to be divided into three 'theaters of action'—sea, air and land, each with a separate commander, responsible for national defense in his respective theater."

The general staff also was said to view as "unsound" the proposal for a separate air corps within the army, urged by General Patrick as a step looking to creation of the license department.

Asserting that "air units are essential to an army and must be an integral part thereof," General Drum added that "we must not be blinded to the sacrifices of the American doughboy."

"The 'prance of horses,' he continued, "the boom of cannon and whirl of airplane propellers cannot replace the dogged determination, the 'will to win' of the American infantryman. The mechanical device can never replace the mental, moral, and physical qualities of a man."

"The air service is no worse off," he added, "than the infantry, cavalry and other branches of the army. In matters relating to promotion, housing, ratio allowances and lack of funds with which to purchase material.

Aviation Officers Command.

"General Patrick claims that the war department has not realized the full importance of the air arm and regards its air service as a 'stepchild.' The air service in the United States regular army is given relatively greater strength than in any country of military importance except possibly Great Britain whose geographical and political position warrants special air strength."

"The impression is given that our air service units are not commanded by flying officers. Such inferences have a sensation ring, but are not borne out by facts. All flying units are directly commanded by air service flying officers. All non-flying officers are on staff or student duty."

"The chief of air service commands and is directly responsible for more than seventy per cent of (Continued on page two.)

BROCCOLI IS ENCRANCHING ON TURKEY CROP

Douglas county turkeys are becoming so epicurean that growers are finding it too expensive to satisfy the appetites of the birds and as a result Thanksgiving turkeys will be scarce in this district. Hereofore turkeys in the Umpqua Valley have been content to roam the wide ranges and stuff themselves to a contented fullness on the abundant grasshoppers, beetle bags and snails, but now their tastes have changed and these appetizing viands no longer hold the place which they once occupied upon the menu of a connoisseur, spread-tailed gobbler. Umpqua Valley turkeys now demand broccolis. In fact, they insist upon broccolis. If their owner doesn't grow broccolis they will invade the fields of a neighbor, there to find substitutes in the luxuriant foliage of the most popular variety of winter cauliflower. That the neighbor may object to having his broccolis plants denuded and left exposed to the wintry blasts does not in the least worry the turkey. He may depart temporarily from the field when the irate broccolis planter rushes to the defense of his valuable patch, but leaves a turkey within a mile of a broccolis patch he has located and he will return as often as a sneeze in hay fever time.

ROAD DISTRICT PLANS WILL BE HEARD OCT. 29

The formation of the Umpqua Highway Improvement District is to be officially considered by the Oregon State Highway commission at Elkton at 2 o'clock p. m. on Thursday, October 29, according to an announcement made by the commission today. At that time a meeting will be held where arguments for or against the proposed improvement may be presented.

LEVY IS PROPOSED

The proposition is to create a great improvement district, including the larger portion of the north-west section of Douglas county, comprising all of road districts six, seven, eight, twenty, twenty-one, twenty-two, thirty-four, forty-six, forty-nine and sixty-seven and parts of districts four and five. A more complete description by name and bounds is contained in the official notice published by the commission.

The district would have a valuation of $5,000,000, and it is proposed that if the district is formed to vote a special levy of 30 mills, which would raise slightly over $150,000. This levy would be extended over a period of three years at the rate of 10 mills each year.

The money so raised would enable the county to meet the government and state in completing the Roosevelt highway in Douglas county and the Umpqua highway between Drain and Reedsport. If the county will cooperate with the government on a 10-60 basis, the county having the small end, the government will adopt the Drain-Reedsport section as a federal road, insuring its completion and maintenance.

The state demands $115,000 in cooperation on the Roosevelt highway, and until the county agrees to cooperate refuses to place the Drain-Reedsport section on the federal highway map, so that no government money is obtainable until the Roosevelt highway is provided for.

If the district is formed it will give $7,000 to the Roosevelt road, while the county must guarantee to raise a like sum to meet the state. This will leave $90,000 to meet the government on the Umpqua highway, insuring its completion.

Some opposition has been expressed regarding the formation of the special district and the meeting at Elkton on the 29th is expected to be a lively one. Notices are being published and posted on bulletin boards in the districts affected.

THIEVES HAUL OFF FORTUNE IN SILK

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—Silk valued by the owners at $250,000 was stolen from the show rooms of S. J. Aronson, in Madison Square, this morning by four robbers who left the watchman handcuffed and gagged. He was found seven hours later. The silk was hauled away in a truck.
