Interstate loading of our railway transportation probably comprises 70 to 80 per cent of the total goods carried by rail. The proportion of interstate movement of power will increase no doubt. And this interstate movement is of high importance for economy in power production.

Power Resale Rates.
"But interstate problems arise only where the activities of the operating companies extend beyond state lines. They fall into two classes, first, where the same company is engaged in generation and distribution over a district embracing parts of two or more states, and second, where an operating company purchases power generated in a foreign state—the latter instance also embracing the "interconnection" between districts lying in different states. As to the first class, it has been well established by the courts in analogous instances that the state commissions have the power and authority to establish 'reasonable rates' to their consumers whether the property may be wholly within the state or not. These cases take care today of the large proportion of the two percent passing our state lines. There remains, therefore, a small fraction of the problem, which the distributing company buys power by interconnection, or otherwise from outside the state. Here the question is simply as to whether the rate paid for the purchased power is reasonable. If unreasonable, the commission may refuse to allow its full amount in setting the rate base. It is open to the commission to fix a rate for resale to consumers within its jurisdiction based upon what the commission considers a fair price."

State Control Enough Now.
"It is difficult to conceive of a situation which, so far as public interest goes, could not be controlled in this simple and effective manner. If in the passage of time and the accumulation of experience the unexpected, either economic or legal, should happen and we find an occupied field requiring regulation, it will be time enough then to talk of federal control. No such condition exists today or is apparent in the future."

"The third contention is that some of the states have not or will not set up adequate machinery for protection of public interests. But federal encroachment for this reason is the ultimate extinction of local government."

"The fourth contention is that this evolution of the industry has developed 'trusts' which do or will defy public interest. I am perfectly confident that American states are not going to surrender their rights and their freedom to any 'trust' or 'trusts.' The American people have not forgotten how to take care of themselves."

NEW SETTLERS COMING TO STATE
After traveling far, and visiting all the places of interest on the Pacific Coast, looking for a location, R. E. Courson, lately arrived in Portland from the Hawaiian Islands, has at last found in Oregon the land of his desires.
Mr. Courson, guided by the Land Settlement of the Portland Chamber of Commerce, made a visit to the Tumalo Irrigation Project, near Bend, Oregon. He returned the first of the week to Portland with the word that it was the finest proposition for settling on a farm that he had ever seen. He has purchased 40 acres on the Tumalo and will specialize in poultry raising.
From extreme Florida comes another settler for Oregon. After visiting many parts of the United States, living for a time in Chicago, San Antonio, Texas, and Miami, Florida, Mrs. Florence Sadler has decided that Portland is the most beautiful residential city that she has ever seen.
Arriving here a little over ten days ago, Mrs. Sadler was so taken with the Rose City that she began looking for a home. She is now the proud owner of a beautiful home in Laurelhurst.
Mrs. Sadler was accompanied by her daughter and the two left im-

AMERICAN APPETITE FOR EAR CORN PUZZLING TO FRENCH
PARIS, Oct. 14.—(A. P.)—The American appetite for green corn, a delicacy almost unknown in France, caused the Paris Mide to comment in a paragraph that was headed with the French proverb "there is no arguing about taste and color."
The head waiter of a leading restaurant brings in with ceremony a weird dish which he lays before his American customers, observed Mide. He places before them great white cylinders which the people from across the Atlantic seize and eat with relish.
"What ever is that they are eating?" asks a Parisian. The waiter explains that it is boiled maize. He brings in a green head to the Parisian and shows him the contents.
"And you are asked for many of these?"
"Thirty or forty a day."
Why cross the ocean to eat boiled maize in a Paris restaurant, concludes Mide.

STATES SHOULD KEEP CONTROL OF UTILITIES

Transfer of Regulation to Federal Government Is Opposed by Hoover.

LOCAL POWER BEST

Tremendous Expansion of Industries Seen, But No Need Yet of U. S. Control.

(Associated Press Land Wire.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14.—A plea against surrender of local government prerogatives to federal authority was made here tonight by Secretary Hoover in an address to the National Association of Railroad and Utilities Commissioners.

"I was devised in spirit to sustain a dual purpose—to protect our people among nations by a great national power and to preserve individual freedom by local self-government."

"If we are to stretch the Interstate Commerce provision in the Constitution to regulate all those things that pass state lines, we shall automatically absorb to federal authority most of the government that lies within state lines, because our economic life has become so enmeshed that there is no longer that easy conception of our forefathers of what constituted interstate commerce. If we do not resist this extension, what becomes of that fundamental freedom and independence that can rise only from local self-government?"

The Commerce secretary addressed himself mainly to the question of local and state regulation of public electrical utilities.

Personal Desire Viewpoint.
"I want to kick to local authority," he said, "when the power rates are unjust. I want to kick where the searchlight of public opinion and local knowledge can be brought to bear. Far more than this, I want to live in a community which governs itself. I do not believe the people of our communities have yet become so supine or so careless of the fundamental advantages of self-government that they are ready to surrender control of their most intimate concerns to a paternal government at Washington, however wise or however powerful."

"We should all agree that regulation of public utilities is vital. Because of the fabulous duplication of equipment, of investment, of increased financial instability and operating expense with increased control of service to the consumer, it is involved in a system of unrestricted competition, the 48 states acting independently have abandoned the notion of maintaining the kind of competition as a method of holding down rates and holding up service. But when we deliberately clothe industry with the security of monopoly, neither the industry nor the public any longer disputes the necessity of full control of rates, profits, service and finance by governmental regulation."

Electrical Field Expanding.
"Second, we can agree that a revolution is in progress in the electrical industry through the scientific discovery of long-distance transmission and the consequent economies in production and improvements in service to be gained by the consolidation of generation to central plants with the same equipment providing the night lights of cities and the day load of industries. This revolution is as necessary as the rising sun if we are to have cheaper power and greater service. The result is the creation of larger companies covering power districts surrounding these central generation plants."

"At this point, I wish to emphasize a distinction that has an importance in all conception of regulation, ignorance of which has been responsible for such misapprehension. This interconnection simply means the sale of surplus power from one district to another and does not bear any more implication of 'trusts' and 'giant monopolies' than the interchange of cars between different railway systems."

"Until lately there has been no suggestion of Federal regulation. No new question would arise today but for the great revolution in the organization of this industry. Because of this revolution arguments are now advanced for the substitution of Federal for state regulation."

Actual Value Earning Basis.
"There may be a watering of stocks in progress. But if rates be based either upon the true value of plant and equipment or upon actual investment, watered capital does not and cannot affect consumers. Our state and municipal system of regulation is steadily building up this basis of regulation."

"The argument is sometimes used that the power situation is parallel with the railroads, where Federal regulation has been found necessary. It differs in several profound respects. Power has no such interstate implications as transportation."

"Furthermore, there has been outrageous exaggeration of the probable extent of interstate power. For economic reasons these power districts will in but few cases reach across state lines. The

RHINE SECURITY PACT MEETS WITH GERMAN APPROVAL

Polish Frontier Disputes Will Be Submitted to Arbitration When They Develop.

LOCARNO, Switzerland, Oct. 15.—Germany today officially announced her adherence to the Rhine pact of mutual guarantees, framed at the security conference here, with the object of outlawing war.

The pact will be signed by Germany, France and Belgium as the principal parties and Great Britain and Italy as guarantors.

After the announcement of Germany's adhesion, the conference at its eighth plenary session, adopted the text of the draft security pact.

The official communique issued after the meeting said:

"At today's plenary session, the conference accepted the complete text of the draft security pact, and then the question of arbitration treaties was taken up. Poland and Czechoslovakia were invited to attend."

Present indications are that the ceremony of signing the Rhine security pact will take place on Saturday.

A solution of the problem of the Polish-German arbitration treaty has practically been reached by enlarging the scope of the treaty to make it virtually the same as the treaties between Germany and France, and Germany and Belgium. This means that all possible disputes, even those arising out of frontier questions, would be submitted to arbitration.

The Polish and Czechoslovakian representatives were invited to join the meeting, it was explained to hear a statement outlining the work of the jurists of the draft treaties of arbitration between Germany and France and Germany and Belgium the texts of which have been adopted by the delegations concerned.

PARIS, Oct. 15.—Today marks an historic date," said Premier Painleve on learning of the successful completion of the draft security pact at Locarno.

As soon as he received the news the premier telegraphed the congratulations of the government to Foreign Minister Briand, head of the French delegation at the conference.

SCARCITY OF WHALES CAUSES THE STATION TO BE DISMANTLED.

SEATTLE, Oct. 14.—The Itay City Whale station of the American-Pacific Whaling Company, one of a few remaining in the United States, is being dismantled. Lack of whales in the ocean tributary to Grays Harbor necessitated the shut-down. Only 21 whales have been brought into the station since the opening of the season last April. In previous years the catch averaged from 200 to 300 whales a season.

Radical changes in ocean currents along the north and south Pacific coast have made new feeding zones.
