

SANDY

ELENORE McNEIL

THE STORY THUS FAR

Beautiful Sandy McNeil visits her cousin, Judith Moore, a stenographer in San Francisco, and tells of her engagement—forced upon her—to Ben Murillo, a wealthy Italian. Judith and Douglas Keith a student, are sweethearts. Sandy, spied upon by her sister when she meets Timmy, a boyhood admirer, in the romantic Spanish garden of their Santa Barbara home, is censured by her mother. Sandy later overheard her uncle, Bob, telling Mr. McNeil that a marriage shutting out the joys of life "amounts to death for a girl like Sandy."

Now on with the Story

CHAPTER 3

She swam with long, lazy strokes, her vivid hair gleaming like a crown. At last she made for the shore, coming out of the water slowly. Drops sparkled in her eyes and on the red, laughing, sandy hair. "You're not kidding, Sandy?" "Oh, I've got to! I've got to!" She held her chin upward, taking deep, luxurious breaths. The young man's heart thumped, looking at that long, white throat and the dark, taunting eyes. What a knock-out she was!

His fair skin tingled, it was so young and clean. Sandy liked the snap of his blue eyes and the dimple in the middle of his chin. With a high hearted serenity she refused to think of a day when all this joyous adventuring would end. She drifted along, fencing with her parents, taking her courtship lightly; turning on her heel when her sisters frowned or advised.

Now she wondered if she loved Timmy. She wished with a little dart of self-pity that it was he instead of Murillo they wanted her to marry. Wished it was Timmy whose money would restore the McNells to ease and prominence. Of course, she wanted to make things pleasant for her mother—paint the old house, put new carpets on the stairs. She wasn't marrying for any such reason, yet all these trifling matters had their weight. Mrs. McNeil was a perfectly healthy woman, but she would say with a sadness that turned Sandy's heart inside out—she would say: "I haven't much longer for this earth. I'd like a little peace and quiet in the few remaining years of my life." Then Sandy would cease quarreling with a sister or remain home to do the super dishes or whatever it might be that had induced her mother's melancholy.

was always a blithe confidence that all would be well. She would come out on top. Something would happen to end her confused uncertainty.

It happened on Sunday when Sandy made a sneak to go on the picnic with Timmy. There were just four of them. Deep in the Santa Barbara hills they knew of a shack where they could cook steaks and coffee. They left quite early in the morning, because Sandy must be back in time for an 8 o'clock dinner with the Murillo family.

He kept on for half an hour. Then Sandy said wearily: "What in the world are we to do? It looks as though it's going to pour cats and dogs. We'll never get home! They'll have fifty-nine eleven fifts by the time I arrive—"

"I can just see my mother standing at the window—the injured look she'll have! The way she'll say: 'You care a great deal for your family, I'm sure. The one day we expect dignity from you, you couldn't be on time. You couldn't leave half an hour earlier and save us all this anxiety—' Timmy, or I'm ruined for life." The shack where they had picnicked was on a side road. No machines passed. It was four miles to a garage.

"I'm freezing! Can't you force that door open. Let's take ourselves out of this deluge!" They went forlornly to the cottage. The rusty lock gave under Timmy's furious push.

radio concealed about me, I was afraid to leave you here alone any longer."

"I suppose to be decent, we'll have to sit up all night. Timmy, Lord, I'm tired! Do you hear that tree beating against the window?" In sheer nervous exhaustion she lay down on the couch, closed her eyes. It seemed that she had slept but a moment. She jumped to her feet, her heart beating wildly.

Timmy stooped down at the hearth where embers glowed—he heaved them up, piled on old newspapers—

"What was that, Timmy? Lord, did you hear that?" He was sitting on the floor, his arms folded on his knees, his head resting. He looked up wearily. "It's only thunder, Sandy—it's been going like that for the last two hours."

elemental agony. Lightning flashed. It illuminated the room with a yellow fitful glare—a blanched, earthy radiance.

Sandy shivered: "Isn't it weird? Oh, if I'd only left that damn purse there. If we hadn't managed to make them hear! She gave a short, moaning cry, meaning it for a laugh: 'I should care! I suppose we could stop the rain!'"

LEGION TO STAGE

BIG CELEBRATION

If last night's rousing meeting of Unkup Post of the American Legion is any indication of the enthusiasm of the members, this year's Armistice Day celebration will surpass all previous ones. The committees gave their reports last night to the veterans who crowded the club room to capacity. Every committee reported excellent progress and things are already well lined up for the day. The parade this year, another big event for E. A. Britton, will be one of the features of the evening program. The patriotic exercises at the Auditorium is another big event of the morning and at noon, the veterans of the county will be banqueted free of charge at the armory. In the afternoon the American Legion football team will play the Eugene All-Stars at the Finny Athletic Field. In the evening the big Mardi Gras dance will be held at the armory and this one event will be a celebration in itself. The legionnaires are all pepped up and advertising will be distributed to all parts of the county next week. It is hoped that the attendance this year will break all records.

HALLOWEEN DINNER

Big chicken dinner on Saturday, Oct. 24th. Given by the ladies of St. Joseph's church at the armory. Come and enjoy a good dinner for 50 cts. Will serve from 11:30 a. m. on.

DE PINTO AND STARKEY PUT UP A FAST TEN-ROUND BOUT.

KLAMATH FALLS, Ore., Oct. 21.—Mike De Pinto of Portland and Kid Starkey of Klamath Falls fought a slashing ten-round draw here last night in the main event of the municipal boxing commission card. The boys stood toe to toe in near-severe round and gave everything they had. They are lightweight. Earl Stoig of Bend met a tartar in Chuck Shams of Klamath. This bout ended in a draw of six rounds of terrific fighting. The hall was packed by the largest crowd which has attended a card here since boxing was revived a year ago.

3 NEW ARTISTS ADDED TO CAST OF "SMILES"

The rehearsals for "Smiles" continue nightly and much interest is manifested by the members of the cast who are giving of their time to help in the work. Director George M. Hall, with great pleasure, announces three guest artists from Eugene, who will delight all. Madame Arah Hoyt Rae, contralto, having just returned from an extended trip abroad, studying in Paris, Switzerland, etc., will render the opening number, "In the Garden of Dreams," supported by the entire chorus of 150 voices. Madame Rae was a student of F. X. Arens of Chicago and New York City. A real treat is promised all who bear her wonderful voice. Mrs. Myma L. Barner, lyric soprano of Eugene, who with great ease takes a high E above C will render several selections, also several duets with Madame Rae. The ladies will be entertained at the home of Mrs. McMillin during their stay in Roseburg. Mr. Richard Studley, formerly a local boy, will render, "Three for Jack."

WOMAN'S CLUB PLANS WORK FOR COMING MONTHS

The regular meeting of the Roseburg Woman's club was held Tuesday at 2:30 p. m. in the Moose hall, with Mrs. J. C. Ponsler, president, presiding. Mr. H. G. Sterling, representative of the Edison White chautauqua, who was present, explained the liberal terms that his company was offering for the coming chautauqua season. The value of chautauqua and the urgent need of culture and education which is derived from it to offset the jazz life of the present day was emphasized by Mrs. C. S. Heinline. In the general discussion which followed the major idea was that the Roseburg Woman's club stood first and foremost for civic improvement, and hence it might well sponsor all movements that tended to develop the educational and the spiritual life of the community. The club then voted to assume the jazz life of a chautauqua for next summer, and the contract was signed at the close of the meeting.

PORTLAND FOLK GIVE JEWELS FOR SPURIOUS CHECKS

(Associated Press Lead Wire.)

PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 21.—Police and county officers, seeking a man who obtained several diamond rings from Portland persons, aggregating in value about $10,000 in exchange for spurious checks, purporting to have been certified by a bank at Oregon City, today found the driver of a car used by the swindler in visiting the homes of his victims. The driver, who officers said was innocent of any connection with the swindle plan, gave the officers a good description of the man.
