ARGENTINE IS HELD MODEL OF LASTING PEACE

Coolidge Gives Praise in Speech at Monument to Gen. San Martin.

NATION ACCEPTS GIFT

Latin-America's Progress Boon to Humanity and Reply to Pessimism of Old World.

(Associated Press Special Wire.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28.—South American statesmanship, with its goal of lasting peace, was held up as a model for the world by President Coolidge today in accepting as a gift from Argentina to the United States a monument to General Jose De SanMartin, Argentine soldier, patriot and statesman.

Praising SanMartin as Latin America's George Washington and as one of the foremost creators of the new world, the President stressed "the fact that South American statesmanship has on the whole been dominated by an earnest and increasingly successful purpose" to avoid war.

"A will for peace," he said, "even though the way to it was not always open." Now when men and nations are all giving heed to the voice which pleads for peace, the president continued, "they will do well to turn to these lessons from the statesmanship, the experience and the constant aspiration of the South American nations."

"The continent which of all the world," he said, "has known less of war and more of peace than any other through this trying period is well entitled to pride in the service it has rendered to its own people and in the example which it has set before the rest of mankind."

Day of Pessimism Past. "The sophisticated statesmanship of an older world," had entailed profound misgivings as to the ultimate fate of the new American republics when they first were launched, the president said, and added:

"Now, I am glad to say, we hear less of such misgivings. The world has had its test. The institutions of men have been through their trial. That trial has quite definitely answered the questions of pessimism. It has provided us with much specific information by which we may judge for ourselves whether the institutions of a republican new world or of a monarchial old world were best adapted as conservators of human happiness and human progress. We are content to leave the final verdict to history. The republican peoples of the Americas are prepared to take their chance of the judgment."

Passing over the brilliant military career of SanMartin, President Coolidge said he was "like our Washington, one of those seemingly inspired military chiefs who are capable of thinking at the same moment of terms of war and of policies of the battlefield and of the great human form. For me the great significance of SanMartin and his deeds and times lies less in their brilliancy in the moment of accomplishment and more in the justifying verdict which a later time and a riper experience have pronounced upon them."

Inspiration to Republics. Expressing hope that the SanMartin statue would "stand through the centuries, as an inspiration to all who love liberty," the president added:

"The high and humane doctrines of international relationship which were expounded by such men as Calvo, Drago, Alvarez, Bello, Ruy Barbosa, Rio Branco and a long list of others are now recognized universally. The record of arbitrations, mediations and adjudications, among the Latin-American countries constitutes one of the fairest pages in a century's story of mankind's effort to eliminate the causes of war. Among their international treaties we will find models of cordials and limitation of armaments and prevention of strife in arms."
