INDIANS GATHER NOT ON CAYUSES BUT IN GAS CARS

(Associated Press Leased Wire.) SPOKANE, Oct. 29.—History was being re-enacted today in Spokane but with a decidedly modernized aspect.

As in the old days Indian tribesmen of the Pacific northwest are gathering for their encampment beside the falls. But unlike the days of half a century ago, the braves and their squaws are arriving not on cayuse-back, with trailing wickiups, but in six-cylinder automobiles or by first class railroad transportation.

Chief Black Eagle of the Nez Perces, true son of Ian Warriors and one of the three tribesmen who called on President Coolidge earlier this month with an invitation to attend the northwest Indian congress here tomorrow and Saturday is in town, but he is not hovering over a campfire smoking a meditative pipe, or parading in paint and feathers for the edification of the white man.

This morning, attired in a neat business suit and patent leather shoes, he was enjoying the modern luxury of the Davenport Hotel lobby. Some one wanted the chief to attire himself in the historic Indian costume. "He never wore one," superintendent O. C. Lipps of the Nez Perce agency replied, "and he doesn't care to."
