FRANCE READY MAKE CHANGE IN AMBASSADOR

Daeschner to Be Succeeded in America by Victor Berenger, Report.

RESULT DEBT PARLEY

Present Ambassador Said to Have Given Country Wrong Impression U. S. Attitude.

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)
PARIS, Oct. 30.—It is learned on high authority that Senator Victor Henry Berenger will be appointed shortly to succeed Emile Daeschner as French ambassador to the United States.

The decision of the government to change ambassadors in Washington is closely related to the American debt funding negotiations.

Foreign Minister Briand has impressed upon Premier Painleve and others of his colleagues in the cabinet that another effort should be made to settle the debt.

Senator Berenger is regarded as the best man available to bring this about. His financial authority in France, his intimate acquaintance with the subject and the ideas he derived from his recent experiences in Washington as a member of the Caillaux debt mission have persuaded the government that, if something more is to be done he is the man to do it.

There is a disposition in some quarters to criticize Ambassador Daeschner for his dispatches to the foreign office prior to the departure of the French mission for the United States, it being declared that these dispatches left M. Caillaux and his party under misapprehension as to the attitude of the American debt funding commission.

The usual inquiry whether M. Berenger is persona grata to the American government as ambassador has not yet been made, but is expected to follow in due course.

Senator Berenger, seen by the newspapermen as he was about to leave town for the week end, said he had not the slightest knowledge of his prospective appointment.

Failed in French Eyes.
WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—News of an impending change in French ambassadors to Washington was received here with apparent surprise.

So far as disclosed, M. Daeschner's contacts with the American government have all been of agreeable character, and he has made many friends in American official life.

There is no doubt, however, that in one respect the mission to the United States has failed. It was generally understood when he succeeded Jules Jusserand that his major duty would be to pave the way for a settlement of the French war debt and to that end he had many conferences with American officials. It was apparent too, that when the French debt commission, headed by Joseph Caillaux reached Washington, it believed itself to have been fully informed through the French embassy here of the American attitude, but found later that it had indulged in over-confidence as to a settlement on acceptable terms. To what extent the ambassador has been held responsible for this situation and for the failure of the Washington funding negotiations remains to be disclosed. It is a subject on which neither the embassy nor the state department will comment.

COMMISSION TAKES ROAD DISTRICT PLAN UNDER ADVISEMENT

Under the law passed by the recent legislature providing for such improvement districts. In the event the sanction of the highway commission is obtained, the next step in the procedure will be for the governor to call an election in the territory affected, the election determining the final action to be taken.

It is proposed to form a road district having a valuation of $5,000,000 and to vote a levy of 30 mills, which will raise $150,000. The levy would be collected in three annual installments. The money would be used to match the government aid in completing the Roosevelt and Umpqua highways.

ORIENTAL GOODS SHOWN IN WINDOW

During his recent trip to the Orient, Phil Bergh, a well known Roseburg young man and student at the U. of O., secured a collection of Chinese articles that constitute a real study of how people in the far East live and what they wear and use in every day affairs. The collection is at present displayed in the Duds for Men show windows, and a great many people are stopping to see it. Among the lot is a Chinese coolie rain coat. This is something that was secured way up on one of the rivers, and is in great contrast to the American rain coat. Then there is a parasol, hand painted inside and out, a rickshaw umbrella, with Mr. Bergh's name and his Roseburg address hand-painted on the top in Chinese characters; wooden shoes, such as are worn by the little Chinese kiddies; a beautiful hand-carved cane, with the owner's name thereon in Chinese characters, and a lot of other things that will interest many of the good folks of the town.

State Press Comment

What's In A Name?

Change the name of Salem to Chemeketa. That is what The Capital Journal of that city is suggesting and urging on grounds that Salem is a commonplace name and of no significance whereas Chemeketa is the ancient Indian name for the aboriginal village which stood on the present site of Oregon's capital for centuries unnumbered. Undoubtedly any attempt to rechristen Salem would be met with a great deal of opposition and plenty of reasonable objections, yet the fact remains that the contention upon which The Capital Journal bases its plea is sound. There are 26 Salems in as many states of the union. The name of Oregon's capital is a borrowed one and has no historical or descriptive significance whatever. Oregon would have the only Chemeketa in the world and the same would link Oregon's capital city with its own primitive beginnings.

The suggestion of the Salem paper calls attention again to the singular barrenness of Oregon nomenclature, a barrenness which is quite in contrast to the richness of the nomenclature of our neighboring state to the north. Few of the cities of Oregon bear names of any individuality or of any particular significance.

Portland and Albany are further examples of names borrowed from other cities. Astoria is one of the few exceptions to the general rule. Though there is an Astoria on Long Island, it is Astoria, Oregon, that is known and the very mention of the name recalls the birth of western civilization in which this city played such a historic part.

Eugene is not a common name for a city and it has the further virtue of being named for Eugene Skinner, one of the earliest of white settlers on the upper Willamette. The Dalles is both distinctive and descriptive. Corvallis, meaning the heart of the valley, has merit as a name, but let it be remembered that this is not the original name of the college town and supports the contention of the Salem paper that there are plenty of precedents for the move it urges.

Pendleton was named to honor an Ohio congressman who never saw Oregon and where is there to be remembered that this is not as Baker, Ashland, Marshfield, Roseburg, Bend?

Klamath Falls alone of the sisterhood of principal cities of Oregon, bears an Indian name which is linked with the early history of the community. To the contrary note the character and flavor of early Indian names—Seattle, Tacoma, Spokane, Yakima, Walla Walla, Chehalis, Wenatchee, Toppenish—all names reminiscent of the early antecedents of these places and names which belong solely to Washington.

It may be too late for Oregon to correct early mistakes in christening her principal trading marts with unimaginative and prosaic names, but, as the Salem paper points out much older cities have had their names changed. With any individuality to such names as—Astoria Budget.

"Why such stress on cleanness in gasoline"? A fair question. The answer you'll find interesting.

You can readily understand why a physically clean gasoline makes the better motor-fuel. Certainly—and Associated is purified by special processes, one of which is well-defined, complete filtration.

Another kind of cleanness is expressed in terms of chemistry and has to do with "boiling points." Associated Gasoline is distilled by a method which gives to this clean motor fuel, the correct "chain" or range of boiling points. They start at the more volatile parts and gradually rise, on through the heavier or power-producing parts or "fractions".

That is why each charge ignites instantly and "burns" or explodes completely on the down stroke, yielding every ounce of energy, and leaving no unburned or wasted fuel to gum up the cylinders. That describes clean cut action—honest gasoline—"more miles to the gallon"—sustained quality.

Associated Gasoline

—Sustained quality as applied to Associated Gasoline and Cymol Motor Oil means that these two products will give you economical motor operation, always.

More Honors for World Fliers

Decorations have just been given belatedly to Captain Lowell H. Smith, commander of the round-the-world flight, and one of his comrades, Lieut. Eric Nelson. Colonel H. Graham is seen pinning a Distinguished Service Medal on Smith at San Francisco, before decorating Nelson similarly. The two have been awaiting the pair for months. The other fliers got theirs some time ago.
