9—Don't give up if you fall from caloric grace and gain occasionally. It is better to have lost and gained than never to have lot at all.

10—WATCH YOUR WEIGHT!

PROMISES:

I promise that if you follow my directions and reduce as I have directed:

1—Better health. Much better health.

2 — Increased efficiency and strength. One hundred fold.

3—Better dispositions. Fat people are not good natured! They are apathetic.

4—Better looks. Clearer skin. No matter how you look during the process, when yu are reduced your look will be improved. Five hundred fold. And youpnger, lots younger!

5—A reorganization of your mode of living. A cure of your habit of unnatural craving for large amounts of concentrated foods, with the creation of a new natural appetite for wholesome foods.

6—A resoration of conjugal felicity. No one loves a fat man or woman.

Tomorrow—Too-too Thin?

The Swanee Serenaders, Roseburg's society dance orchestra, will furnish the music for the big Charleston Contest to be held next Saturday night. You'll miss a big town dance and some good entertainment if you don't attend.

WOMAN'S BODY FOUND ON BANK OF COLUMBIA RIVER

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

KELSO, Wash., Nov. 14.—Finding of the unclothed body of a woman on the bank of the Columbia river, apparently about 40 years old, was reported here by Coroner W. D. Vannote. The upper portion of the remains was but a skeleton, but the lower half which was buried in the sand, was well preserved. She had been dead for several months.

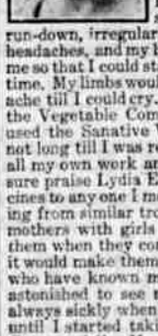
CHILDLESS HOMES

Read Mrs. Benedict's Letter Praising Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Kewanee, Illinois.—"When I was married about a year and a half I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound because of ill health. I did not have any children. I now have two healthy little girls and I am sure I would not have had them had it not been for your medicine. Last spring and summer I got all run-down, irregular, and I had awful headaches, and my back and side hurt me so that I could stay up only a short time. My limbs would get so tired and ache till I could cry. I started to take the Vegetable Compound again and used the Sanative Wash, and it was not long till I was relieved. Now I do all my own work and help others. I sure praise Lydia E Pinkham's medicines to any one I meet that is suffering from similar troubles. I think if mothers with girls would give it to them when they come to womanhood it would make them stronger. People who have known me all my life are astonished to see me now as I was always sickly when in my 'teens and until I started taking the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. MARY R. BENEDICT, 313 Payson St., Kewanee, Ill.



"SANDY"

By ELENORE MEHERIN

Sandy McNeil, forced by her impoverished family into a loveless marriage with Ben Murillo, a rich Italian, sacrifices her love for Timmy, a childhood sweetheart. Murillo's tyranny and insolence cause her to write to Judith Moore, a San Francisco cousin, for help in escaping her marital bondage, but Judith is absent on a long vacation. A son is born, dying almost immediately.

CHAPTER 24

Sandy sat in the garden. She often sat here hours without stirring. She would lean her head against the acacia, her eyes fixed on the blue, stretch of the sea.

She would listen to the breeze as it came mumuring with summer's golden peace. It would run light, teasing fingers through her hair. She would shut her eyes longing for its coolness and peace to touch her thoughts.

She was so tired with the darkness and weight on her. She forgot that she had ever been glad.

In the neighboring yard children were playing with a bean bag. Their voices shrilled with laughter. Sandy breathed heavily, pressing her fingers against her mouth.

* * *

It was three months since they had brought her home. The day she was to leave the hospital she said to her mother: "Let me go back with you."

Her mother's lips had trembled and she had bitten them. But she stooped over Sandy and kissed her: "Everything is arranged dear. You mustn't give in to your grief."

Then Sandy smiled. She smiled all the way driving home. She thought: "I'm going to die as soon as they take me in there. I know I'll die." And she looked forward to it.

That night when they were alone, Murillo pushed her chair to the window. He sat at her side. "Sandy, we're going to begin all over again." He put his face against her hair.

She shrank. She couldn't help it. Every time she looked at her husband she thought of the name he had called her and that he had said: "Do you tink I'd have a —— like you in my house?" She would never get over this — never.

But he took her hand in his: "And things will be different the next time. Isn't it better, perhaps, that the little one was taken? It was so weak. You were so nervous and hysterical all the time beforehand—"

She interrupted with a little moaning: "Oh!" She thought bitterly: "I was the one who hurt it!" She fancied the baby in her arms and whispered to it: "Oh, I was the one who killed you! I hurt you!"

She felt the little body as it lay that last moment against her breast—so quiet—so cold. She ottened awakened at night feeling it.

* * *

Now she tried to draw her hand from Murillo's. But he said: "When you're stronger, Sandy dear, you'll see things in a better light. Then we may have another child. You want this, don't you?"

She put up her hand and hid her face from his eyes.

And for three months she lived, dreading the moment when he would claim her.

Whenever she heard steps on the grass she shivered. He often came and sat next her, holding her hand. He would turn the palm upward and press his moist red lips against it. She had to bear it.

Now she looked out to the water. How blue and free the waves came rushing to the shore. How often she had ridden on their crests. A year ago in the lazy summer afternoons she and Timmy used to strike out, swimming —laughing — flirting. Life was sweet then.

Sandy looked at her hands. They were so white and transparent. Now a tear fell on her knuckles. She watched it in surprise as it trickled through her fingers. Crying — she was crying. Crying because it was not a year ago.

She was so alone these days. No one but her mother and Alice and her Uncle Bob came.

She wanted no one. She thought that she was dying. She wondered how long it would take.

Once in a while she felt a pity for herself. And once in a while a blaze of anger. Then she thought of running away. She would go some place where no one knew her. She would shove behind her all the violent bitterness.

And she would begin all her life new again. She was just 20.

"Twenty." She often said this to herself. And there was nothing before her down all the years —nothing but the companionship of a man grown hateful to her. Not even a child now. Oh, she would never have another—never.

The only times she wept was when she thought of this—having another child to take the place of the little one that was gone. She didn't wish its place to be taken. She wanted that emptiness and hurt to stay there always.

But even her mother said: "God will send you another child." Sandy listened with her heart burning. The way her mother taked of God! It was God they blamed for this marriage — and God who said she mustn't rebel. That was a terrible defiance. God wanted her to be Murillo's wife; wanted her to bow gently to her cross!

Isabel McNeil said these things in her sweet, plaintive way.

And Sandy, fighting for strength, would think blindly: "I don't believe it! It can't be true!"

* * *

One night when she was home four months, she said to Murillo: "Will you let me go away for a while?"

"Where do you want to go?"

"I'd like to get out on the ocean."

"Well, I'll see about it. I may be able to arrange it. I can't be gone more than a month or two."

She said silly: "I want to go alone."

He grew pale, the long eyebrows raised questioningly. Then he came up and took her hands. He drew her to him. "No. I don't think that would be advisable, Sandy. You're a little melancholy. You'll get over this."

She said pleadingly: "Don't Ben— I'm tired!" She thought: "It will kill me—it will kill me —oh, if I could only die!"

Her imagination tortured her incessantly. When he held her hands she remembered the way he had gripped her wrists, screaming: "What about me! What about me!"

But he was holding her and kissing her. He was saying: "Yes—Sandy, darling — we'll go away — wherever you like. We'll begin again."

* * *

Sandy went to her uncle, Bob McNeil. The whiteness of her terrified him. He saw that she couldn't keep her hands from shaking.

She said: "Bob, will you lend me some money?"

"How much do you want, little kid?"

"All you can spare. I know you've not got much."

"No—but I can hock my overcoat, if necessary." He put his hands over hers. He said warmly: "What's the matter, kid."

Sandy pressed her hands against her lips. They were so ashen. "Oh, nothing. I want to get away. I've got to get away."

"Where?"

"Anywhere! I won't stay another night with him — I can't! I'm losing my mind—Oh, I think I've lost it already."

Dorothy Ogle and Dorothy McDonald, two local dance celebrities, have signified their intention to participate in the Charleston contest Saturday. These two young ladies are now appearing with the Legion Minstrels.

MRS. RUDY VALENTINO FILES DIVORCE SUIT.

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

NEW YORK, Nov. 13. — Mrs. Winifred Hutnut Valentino, through her mother, Mrs. Richard Hudnut today confirmed reports that she has instituted suit for divorce in Paris from Rudolph Valentino, the film sheik. The action is based on charges that the motion picture actor refuses to live with her.

TO DEPORT ALIEN.

Louis Farpol, a Peruvian, who has been confined to the county jail for the last three months, was taken to Portland today and will be deported. Farpol, who went under the name of "Firpo" at Reedsport, was arrested early in the summer charged with bootlegging and drew a fine of $300 and 90 days in jail. He has served out the jail sentence. The naturalization bureau has been investigating his case and is deporting him as an undesirable alien.

A chicken dinner will be served by the ladies of the Roseburg Rebekah Lodge between the hours of 11 and 1, Wednesday, Nov. 18, in the salesroom of Newland's Garage, at 50c per plate. They will also hold a bazaar.

PIERCE PARDONS FEMALE CONVICT

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

SALEM, Ore., Nov. 14—On recommendation by the state parole board Governor Pierce yesterday granted a conditional pardon to Belle Goldtrip, who is serving two sentences of three years each in the state penitentiary for arson and grand larceny. She was convicted in Clatsop county and received at the prison November 8, 1924. The two sentences are concurrent.

See the Charleston like it should be done, Saturday night. You'll enjoy it. Something new and novel in dancing.

COMMANDERY TO HOLD BANQUET ON TUESDAY, NOV. 24TH

Ascalon Commandery No. 14 will hold a banquet, honoring the ladies at the Hotel Rose on Tuesday, November 24, at 6:30 p. m. All members are to be in uniform and will be accompanied by a lady. The banquet will be open to all Sir Knights, whether members of the local commandery or not.

The Roseburg Boys' band will play in the lobby of the hotel from 6:30 to 7:00 p. m. under the direction of Mr. Walter Germain, and during the banquet music will be furnished by Mrs. Young's orchestra. This orchestra consists of Mrs. Arthur Knauss, piano; Mrs. Donald Gibbs, saxophone; Mrs. Joe Shockley, trumpet Mrs. Leo Rapp, cello; Mrs. A. J. Young, violin.

There are several Knights who have been members of the local commandery since it was instituted here and they are to be special guests of honor. It is hoped to have Associate Justice O. P. Coshow present at the occasion.

REBEKAHS, ATTENTION.

Those having articles for the bazaar please bring to the salesroom of Newland's Garage on Tuesday, after 3 o'clock, so that they may be placed on display.

If you bring them earlier than Tuesday please leave them at McKean, Darby & Baldwin.
