AT WHARTON GATLEY PRESENTS TROPHY FOR TOURNAMENT

A beautiful golf trophy, a copper, cedar-lined humidor, has been received by the Roseburg Country Club to be offered as a prize at some future tournament. The trophy is a gift from Attorney H. Prescott Gatley, a son-in-law of Hon. Ringer Hermann, and resident of Washington, D. C. Mr. Gatley spent the greater part of the summer here, and as a golf enthusiast spent much time on the links of the country club. He was greatly pleased with the course and became a close friend of many of the members of the club. In appreciation of the many courtesies extended to him, he has sent the trophy to the club to be used as a prize as a handicap trophy.

Arrangements for the tournament have not yet been made, but it will probably be held on Thanksgiving day. The humidor has a plate upon which the winner's name may be engraved. The club will offer additional prizes.

The humidor has been placed on display at the Umpqua hotel, where it will be kept until the tournament is held.

PONZI'S PLAN FOR FLORIDA CLEAN-UP HALTED BY COURT

BOSTON, Nov. 17.—Charles Ponzi, financial "wizard," who is now in Florida with the announced intention of recouping in real estate a fortune lost when his international postal reply coupon bubble burst, may be summarily ordered back to Boston to begin a sentence of from seven to nine years in state's prison as a common thief.

A hearing will be held tomorrow in the county court here on a motion of Assistant District Attorney Caro which asks that a stay of sentence granted Ponzi after his trial here last June, pending filing of his exceptions to the supreme court, be vacated and that the sentence become operative forthwith.

FACTORY GIRL ONE OF THE 98

Will Answer Letters from Women asking about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Lititz, Pa. — "I was very nervous and suffered for a long time with pains in my back and side. I was employed in a factory and for about three months I did no work at all. There were two women who told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I didn't believe what they told me at first, but at last I tried it. It has taken my pains away and my nervousness. I am glad to say that I am one of the 98 out of 100 that it has helped. I recommend it when I can, as I know it is good for women's troubles. I will answer any letter that any woman writes to me. I know the Vegetable Compound has helped me and hope it will help others." — Mrs. CHARLES R. SHUE, R. F. D. 2, Lititz, Pa.

State Press Comment

Co-operative Marketing Proven.
The annual report of the California Fruit Growers Exchange for 1924-25 affords striking proof of the value of the co-operative marketing method.

The statement, which has just been issued by the general manager, shows that despite a crop reduction of more than 11,000 cars over the previous year, a shortage caused by the freeze of last December, the California citrus fruit movement brought its producers $92,581,263, or the greatest return in the history of the industry. "Figured back to the crop," the report says, "the growers received over 75 per cent more than in the preceding year.

The success of co-operative marketing, of course, lies in the ability of the producers to control the distribution of product. There is no dumping of it onto the market—no competitive selling—no organizations trying to sell their goods at the expense of cut prices, no accepting of whatever price the buyer may see fit to give. One central head, acting for all its member growers, sets its own price and gets it. If the crop is short, as it was last year, the grower does not suffer. The price is strengthened sufficiently to compensate for the smaller supply. It is a system which pays. It is the system which the farmers of the nation must employ in the selling of all their products, if they would escape the ill that accrues from dumping their products on glutted markets and from that economically unsound method of letting the buyer establish the market price. For under co-operative marketing, the growers govern the release of their goods. They feed the trade just as the trade needs it, and thus maintain a good demand at all times. — Albany Herald.

Walnuts and Oregon

Oregon, predicts the Salem Statesman editorially, will become the greatest walnut state in the union. The conditions that make for such a consummation are all laid out. We have the climate and the soil, and already there is sufficient walnut culture here, and of sufficiently long duration, to demonstrate the practicability and profit of the industry.

Oregon walnuts bring a preferred price. Last year they led California's by two cents a pound. This year, they lead California's first grade walnuts by three cents a pound and her medium grade walnuts by five cents a pound. Walnuts in Oregon, according to the Statesman authority can be grown for eight to nine cents a pound. It costs 14 cents a pound to raise them in California. In Oregon 12,000 acres are now devoted to walnut culture. In California 70,000 acres. Thus the superior quality in walnuts comes out of Oregon, but the quantity still comes out of California.

The existing situation furnishes the strongest of reasons why walnut culture ought to be extended in Oregon. — Eugene Guard.

SO. PACIFIC WILL START AT ONCE ON EUGENE TERMINAL

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)
EUGENE, Ore., Nov. 17.—Work on the proposed terminal of the Southern Pacific Railway company here will be started at once, and will be rushed, according to E. L. King, superintendent, who was here today.

Work of clearing the 220-acre tract northwest of Eugene will start Monday, under direction of Kelly and Sullivan, contractors. All funds for the work, amounting to $907,000, have been authorized and are now available.

The first unit will include a series of four storage tracks, each with a capacity of 100 cars. The contract for a ten-story rooming house will be let shortly. The largest creosote plant on the coast will be constructed.

Other work will also be rushed to completion as the favorable fall weather has speeded work on the Natron cut-off and first trains will be run over the shortened Eugene-Klamath Falls line on July 1, it is said.

MacMillan Chooses "A Well-Balanced Diet Built Around Meats"

Nothing developed on the trip to cause me to revise my idea about foods; which is that a well-balanced diet built around meats yields the best health results.

On the way north we had fresh domestic meat from the supply taken aboard when we sailed. After we reached the North we relied upon the wild life of the region, using seal, walrus, caribou, muskox, Arctic hare, and many kinds of wild ducks.

Every day we had fresh meat with plenty of fat at at least one meal and usually oftener when supplies were plentiful, and every one came through the four months in excellent condition; in fact, most of the members of the party gained weight.

While we often hear it claimed that eating too much meat is unfavorable to health, it is a fact that such ailments as gout, hardening of the arteries, and other disorders attributed to an excess of meat eating are quite unknown to the Eskimos who eat nothing but meat.

In my own experience I have never known anyone to attempt to live in the Arctic on a vegetarian diet. On the other hand, every Arctic explorer nowadays relies upon the native fresh meats as a sure preventive of scurvy, a much dreaded nutritional disorder which was prevalent in earlier Arctic experience times before we learned a lesson in diet from the Eskimo.
