Driver's Visibility Improved

One of the marked improvements in the present Ford Coupe and Tudor Sedan is the one-piece windshield and narrow roof pillars. These changes have materially increased visibility for the driver.

The lower portion of the windshield is curved, fitting snugly down along the contour of the cowl and secure against the elements.

Exceptional ventilation is permitted by installation of a channel opening extending across the car just back of the windshield. This permits a full sweep of air down behind the instrument board when the windshield, which swings forward, is only slightly open. Lessening of the air draft is effected by swinging the windshield further out and by closing the windshield the air current is cut off completely.

The sun visors now closed at both ends giving it a more substantial appearance. Completely concealed under the cover on the cowl which resembles a cowl ventilator, is the gasoline tank intake.

LASTING GPEACE OF EUROPE NOW UNDER PLEDGE

noded their heads in approval at each other, and then at their German colleagues. When the pact had been signed Secretary Chamberlain rose and handed Chancellor Luther the allied interpretation of Article XII of the League of Nations covenant, taking cognizance of Germany's position as a disarmed nation and paving the way for her entry into the League.

Again the movie cameras ground out their historic pictorial records and again the representatives of the signatory nations spoke in turn, this time to declare that their governments would forever fulfill the obligations to which they had just subscribed.

Peace Common Sentiment.

The British premier, who was the only one to employ the English language, was visibly moved when he announced that his government welcomed the treaty of Locarno. Great Britain, he added, was certain that the treaty would not disappoint the hopes of the world in laying the foundation for that peace which had so long been sought. His sentiment was that of the other speakers. Dr. Stresemann delivered his remarks with vigor and conviction. The only delegate to raise his voice above conversational tone, he repeatedly struck the table as he made his declarations. Nothing, he said, would serve greater purpose in these days of difficulty than the spirit of good will which the treaty evoked. He looked to the future and fruition of the work they had done with great hope.

Premier Briand of France, in a solemn voice, declared there was not a person in the world who was not interested in the proceedings of the day.

"I can see across the table the German chancellor," he said, "and I am sure I can tell him that I have remained a good Frenchman, just as he is coming here has remained a good German—but both of us are Europeans."

Milestone in History.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—After the Locarno ceremony in the foreign office today Chancellor Luther of Germany gave the Associated Press this statement:

"This day of the signing of the Locarno pact is a milestone in the history of European nations. It shows the will of all the partners to the treaty to restore peace. Readjustment to normal economic and political relations will be the ultimate outcome of our endeavors. I consider that this pact is the first step, but a decisive one, in that direction. The pacification of the world and in its wake the prosperity of nations is the final aim. There are still obstacles to overcome but we are at last so far advanced that I can say with assurance the goal is attainable."
