OREGON RESISTS BAN ON PINE DUE TO BLISTER RUST

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 5.—A hearing on the question of a pine quarantine against Oregon because of the appearance of the white pine blister rust in that state will be held in the offices of the federal horticultural board January 8.

It is proposed to prohibit the movement from Oregon into other states of all five leafed pines and currant and gooseberry plants, the latter being the intermediate host plant necessary in carrying the disease from one pine tree to another.

The blister rust has been discovered in Tillamook and Clatsop counties, Oregon, which brings the infection within 175 miles of the northern edge of the great sugar pine forests of southern Oregon and northern California.

PEPPERMINT OIL PRICE SOARS OWING TO ACUTE SHORTAGE

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Dec. 7.—A pound of peppermint oil now is worth its weight in silver.

An acute shortage, resulting from unseasonable frost and heat in May in southern Michigan and northwest Indiana, where 60 percent of the world's supply of peppermint is produced, reduced the crop 70 per cent or to approximately 250,000 pounds.

Throughout the late summer and early fall peppermint oil has steadily increased in price until it exceeded $17 a pound. The maximum price last year was $4 and four years ago it was $1.25.

Gradually the growers are drifting toward a single "pool" through which they would market their oil when the demand price is highest. In several instances, farmers have been known to store their oil in safety deposit boxes to await further market advances.

Manufacturers of tooth paste, candies, chewing gum, various toothache remedies and all other products which require peppermint flavoring are interested in the cooperative efforts of the growers. The normal yearly consumption of the oil is 400,000 pounds.

Peppermint plants, the oil of which is distilled from the leaves and stalks, thrives best in heavy, mucky soil, found in the lowlands along the Indiana-Michigan border. The farms usually are small—fifty or sixty acres. Under normal conditions two crops may be harvested each summer.

Peppermint first was introduced into Indiana and Michigan about 1840 from Ohio. A quarter of a century before it had been imported from England.

"SANDY"

By ELENORE MEHERIN

WHAT HAS HAPPENED IN THE STORY SO FAR:

Sandy McNeil, forced by her impoverished family into a loveless marriage with Ben Murillo, a rich Italian, sacrifices her love for Timmy, a childhood sweetheart. Frequent quarrels follow. A son is born, dying almost immediately. Seeking some escape, Sandy appeals to her Uncle Bob, who enables her to take a Honolulu trip with her mother. There she meets Ramon Worth, who saves her life in the surf. He boards the same steamer home and during the voyage declared his love. At home Sandy tells Murillo she must be freed. He declares he will never release her. Ramon mets Sandy on the beach at Santa Barbara.

GO ON WITH THE STORY FROM HERE:

CHAPTER 43

They drove deep into the hills. It was now late—nearly 12. Sandy talked eagerly in a wistful excitement. The almost impenetrable darkness heightened her feeling of exultant terror.

Ramon thought: "She came for the romance of it. She's that young." He stooped down, trying to make out her features.

She whispered: "Isn't it mysterious and thrilling!"

He winced her for a long while remained silent. They were parked under a great pepper that now murmured with gentle monotony to the breeze. Suddenly Ramon said: "And did you mean it when you said you might come to the city?"

"Yes. I'm thinking of it. When my mother gets better and I'm not needed here."

"You're going to work?"

* * *

Sandy drew a quick, impatient breath. "Yes. Oh why did you need to speak of this, Ramon? I've been forgetting who I was and what for the whole of the last hour."

"I haven't forgotten."

"Are you glad I may come to the city?"

"I should be, since I had to drive nearly 500 miles for an hour with you, but I don't know that I am."

"Why?"

"I'm thinking now things may be.'

"What things?"

"Between you and me."

She flushed: "That sounds intriguing."

He scowled, saying almost harshly: 'No—it's not that. I wish I could see your face, Sandy. Did you come down there all alone in the darkness just for the adventure of it? Did you come because of a wish to see me?"

She laughed and shrugged: "Oh, both! But you were the adventure of it, I suppose."

"Do you remember what I told you on the boat just before we left?"

"I think so."

"I told you that I loved you. I mean it. That's why I'm wondering how things may be between us."

"Don't love me in that kind of a way, Ramon. It will be over between us if you do."

"Do you mean, you don't care for me, Sandy? Or that you're never going to be free?"

"I don't know! I don't know."

"That is the way I love you, however, it is with you."

She said disturbed and now unhappy: "I'll have to go home now. Drive me there." Seeing that he was gloomily silent she reached up her hand, touched his cheek: "You're so much nicer when you are laughing, Ramon. Have a kiss before we part!"

He kissed her with a long, fervent solemnity that sent an uneasy pang through her thoughts.

* * *

The house was in darkness. Sunday night. Murillo wouldn't be home. Of late he never came from Friday to Monday.

Sandy let herself in stealthily. As of old she slipped off her pumps and went padding up the stairs. She undressed quickly in the darkness.

She felt a brightness and a glitter in her mind. She saw herself standing in those wavering shadows, leaning on the pier. Saw Ramon spring toward her, arms flung out; heard the gladness of his voice. She shut her eyes, smiling with the feverish sweetness of her thoughts.

She couldn't sleep. She wondered what Alice would think if she knew; what Judith would say. A heat like guilt spread over her, but it was a pleasant sensation. It sent a tingling flush through all her nerves; made her feel daring, courageous; filled her with a glad, stealthy joy.

She didn't regret going. She was glad — boundlessly glad to have run back into the shadows. She would go again. She had a right to this.

Yes—and if Alice had been braver, she too, would have defied them one way or another. If she had, in her secret heart she could look back and exult. But Alice hung a wet dishtowel on the rack, pressed her face against it weeping in that forlorn, dejected way.

Suddenly Sandy heard herself saying in that light tone: "Have a kiss before we part!" Suddenly she felt Ramon's arm lightening—the long, fervent solemnity of his lips pressed on hers.

* * *

She turned her face uneasily against the pillows, closing her eyes. She opened them almost immediately with the swift consciousness that someone had entered the room.

She lay quiet a moment, listening. Her heart flew to her throat. Now she could swear that feet—unshod, light feet moved toward the door—were in the hall—

"I'm crazy," she whispered. But she sat up, switched on the light. No one was there. It was 2 o'clock.

She dismissed the alarm, sinking back drowsily—smilingly. In the morning she had forgotten it.

As she came into her mother's kitchen, Alice greeted her with a smirking glibness, "Good morning! All dolled up, I see."

"Oh, all the time, Ally. That's a trick of mine."

"Have a nice time last night?"

"Yes. Jude says she wishes you'd try to get a week off. She thinks a trip to the city would be great for you."

"Humph! I can think of lots of things that would be great for me. I'm not talking about Jude. Did you have a nice time from 11 p. m. on?"

Sandy blanched: "What do you mean?"

Alice's disdainful smile: "I suppose you haven't the faintest idea, have you? Did you see your fond husband last evening!"

"No. He wasn't home."

"Oh, wasn't he! Well, he was there between 11 and 12 kid."

* * *

It became almost impossible for Sandy to breathe. She said faintly, "Well, I didn't go home after the train left. I met May and Bernice Arliss. You know, it's nearly a year since I've seen any one I care about. We got to talking. Did Ben phone here?"

"Yes dear! He phoned at 11:30 and asked if he should call for you. Your father answered and told him that you'd left hours ago. The sly fellow covered up neatly. He said he hadn't looked in your room. Humph! So you met May and Bernice, did you?"

Sandy took up a battered old cup with a trembling: "Any coffee left?"

"No—have a little tea.'

"How's ma today?' Sandy asked. She felt ill—suffocated — wild with resentment that Alice, eaten with curiosity, was making her beg for the facts. She thought in a fright: "That was he in the room! He knows it was nearly one when I got in. Oh, Lord—"

She was almost in tears.

Ramon phoned at noon. He was waiting over. He wanted to see her in the evening—just for an hour.

She said: "I can't."

"Please—walk down the hill—go into that dry goods store. I'll be there. No one will dream that we knew each other. I want a moment—just a moment.'

And finally she said: "All right.'

And she was walking rapidly, taking a short cut through a lot. She ran a little. A step behind her. Her arm caught: "Where are you you going my pretty maid?"

It was Ben Murillo. He had never overtaken her before.

OREGON DIVORCES INCREASE; NOT SO WITH MARRIAGES

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—The department of Commerce announces that according to returns received, there were in the United States, for the calendar year 1924, 1,178,306 marriages performed and 170,867 divorces granted. For the calendar year 1923, 1,223,924 marriages and 165,096 divorces were reported.

The decrease in marriages reported for 1924, from the number reported for 1923 is 45,718, or 3.7 per cent.

The divorces reported for 1924, with four counties lacking, show an increase of 5,771, or 3.5 per cent over the number reported for 1923. The figures are preliminary and subject to slight correction.

Oregon in 1924 had 6,967 marriages, while in 1923 it had 7,151, a decrease of 184. Oregon's record for divorces was 2,945 for 1924, compared with 2,894 in 1923, an increase of 51. Oregon was one of 30 states showing a decrease in marriages, and one of 29 states showing an increase in divorces in the year.

WOULD SAVE TIME AND PRIDE BY DROPPING NAMES OF STATES

WESTERVILLE, O., Dec. 7.—Much ink, labor and local pride would be saved, in the opinion of Raymond Phelan, professor of business administration, Otterbein College, if the state designations were dropped on letters to important cities.

In a letter, Professor Phelan urges the postoffice department to take under consideration a plan of arbitrarily specifying a list of cities so well known that the state is unnecessary.

FLASHES OF LIFE

ROME—Pope Pius has blessed a golden rose which is to be sent to Queen Elizabeth of Belgium to commemorate the twenty-fifth anniversary of her marriage. It stands in a vase of gilded silver.

LONDON—Physicians have decided that owing to his weak lungs and advancing age, King George must leave foggy, misty England for a two months' sea trip each year. A palatial new yacht is being planned.

ROME—Some Italians are irritated because Rudy Valentino is seeking to become an American citizen; a boycott of films in which he appears is proposed. An announcement thrown on the screen in Rome of a coming Valentino film was hissed and booed.

KHARKOV, Russia—Russia is appealing for aid for thousands of homeless children, "who like packs of wolves haunt the streets of every large city." For their relief a one per cent tax on vodka is proposed.

GLASGOW, Ky.—Leslie Puckett, after struggling in vain to start his coupe, lifted the hood and discovered that some one had stolen the motor.

LONDON—Vermont turkeys sold by Americans at Thanksgiving time when dinners were cancelled, owing to the death of Dowager Queen Alexandra, so tickled the palates of Englishmen that hundreds of others have been ordered for Christmas. Some of those left over from Thanksgiving are being fattened up in Kent for the Christmas tables of the American and Spanish ambassadors and Lord Carnarvon.

MOSCOW—Leon Trotzky thinks American equipment for a new power plant will enable Russia to cultivate "electro-diplomatic relations with the United States," also "electricity plus Russian socialism" will "enable us eventually to dispense with the present Soviet system."

NEW YORK—"Battling" Siki, knocked out by a policeman, is out $5 as a result. His conqueror was Leonard Smith, a Times Square policeman whom he attacked. Limiting the penalty to a fine at the request of the pugilist's wife, the police magistrate warned the battler that he would go to the workout house next time.

TOLEDO, Spain—There's to be a lance 500 feet long in a monster statue of Don Quixote, which it will take seven years to erect near the birthplace of the prototype of his lady love Dulcinea.

NEW YORK—Miss Leonarta Bertini, 20, knows how to deal with mashers. She chased one from an elevated station for several blocks and brought him down with a flying tackle. She was educated as a Philadelphia training instructor.

JIMMY GOODRICH TO MEET ROCKY KANSAS TONIGHT

BUFFALO, N. Y., Dec. 7.—The lightweight championship will be at stake when Jimmy Goodrich, the title holder and Rocky Kansas, veteran challenger, step in the ring here tonight. Both boxers are residents of Buffalo.

Goodrich got the lightweight crown by virtue of his success in the tournament to choose a successor to Benny Leonard when he vacated the throne. Kansas has been a persistent contender for the title. In 1921 he made two unsuccessful efforts to wrest the championship from Leonard.
