WEYERHAEUSER BUY WILL BRING MILL AND RAILROAD

DULUTH, Minn., Dec. 8.—Sale of 15,000 acres of land in northern Idaho containing more than 200,000,000 feet of pine timber to the Weyerhaeuser interests for about $1,800,000, was announced here today by Henry Turkish, lumberman and capitalist.

The Clearwater Timber company, a Weyerhaeuser subsidiary, will use the timber for the mill to be constructed at Lewiston, Idaho, and will be served by a 41-mile line of a railroad to be built jointly by the Northern Pacific and Union Pacific railroads.

CONGRESS RECEIVES PLANS FOR A COSTLY STRUCTURE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—All the indoor comforts of a country club are provided on the blue prints for a new office building for members of the house, submitted today by a group of architects, acting at the request of congress.

A gymnasium, swimming pool, lockers and a lounge are included in each of two alternate plans presented. One plan provides for expenditure of $2,000,000 and the other for $1,800,000.

The plans were drawn up as an approach to relief from congestion in the present office building where members have to content with a one-room office apiece and a few large hearing rooms.

PINCHOT MOVES AGAIN TO SETTLE COAL MINE STRIKE

HARRISBURG, Pa., Dec. 8.—Action to "advance the settlement of the coal strike" was taken at a conference today between Governor Pinchot and representatives of business organizations in the Pennsylvania anthracite region, the governor announced at the close of the meeting this afternoon. This action was not disclosed.

FIRE-WALKING CEREMONY IS STILL A MYSTERY

PAPETTE, Tahiti, Dec. 8.—Despite investigations of competent observers, the famous fire-walking ceremony still remains a secret of a small company of natives in the island of Raiatea.

The ceremony was given on this island recently for the first time in many years and outsiders were not excluded from witnessing any stage of the preparation of the fire pit.

When the proper time comes and the celebrants pass through the fire, any bystander asking permission may go through beside them without discomfort.

Observers who have passed through the fire say they felt no sensation of heat except on the face, although, when standing outside, the radiation made the pit difficult to approach.

Those trying to solve the mystery have pulled out a large stone from the pit while the ceremony was in progress and thrown it into a pail of water. The water would go up in steam. Some also have tried crawling to the edge of the pit and touching one of the white stones with the finger. They were rewarded with ugly burns.

Scientists who have seen the fire-walkers have propounded a number of theories, but practical tests always failed to establish such explanations.

The ceremony, harking back to heathen times and the worship of the old gods, is frowned on by the missionaries and the Christians among the natives. Hence it is seldom performed, even in Raiatea, the place of its origin.

MISSIONARY TO SPEAK

Dr. Lucius E. Smith of Benito, West Africa, will give an educational address in the Presbyterian church, Wednesday evening. Slides will be used. He brings a lot of curios. His reputation as a speaker is excellent. The public is cordially invited. The address is free.

"SANDY"

By ELENORE MEHERIN

WHAT HAS HAPPENED IN THE STORY SO FAR:

Sandy McNeil, forced by her impoverished family into a loveless marriage with Ben Murillo, a rich Italian, sacrifices her love for Timmy, a childhood sweetheart. Frequent quarrels follow. A son is born, dying almost immediately. Seeking some escape, Sandy appeals to her Uncle Bob, who enables her to take a Honolulu trip with her mother. There she meets Ramon Worth, who saves her life in the surf. He boards the same steamer home and during the voyage declares his love. At home Sandy tells Murillo she must be freed. He declared he will never release her. Judith Moore, a cousin, tells Sandy love is everything. Ramon meets Sandy on the beach at Santa Barbara. Murillo overtakes her as she goes for a second tryout with Ramon.

GO ON WITH THE STORY FROM HERE:

CHAPTER 44

Murillo smiled. They were about the same height. He now looked evenly into Sandy's stormy eyes.

"Homes," she said sharply. "I'll drive you there, so chances that I'm also homeward bound."

"I'm quite used to walking, thank you. Don't spoil me with the luxury of a machine ride now and then."

"So! But you seem in a great rush. You were almost running. Were you trying to catch up with the time you lost last night?"

"Sandy's head raised slightly, her lips parting.

Murillo watched her intently—the measured breath she was striving so desperately to control.

"Where were you last night?"

She looked straight before her.

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Where were you last night?"

May shrugged, gave a teasing look at Murillo, whose puritanical notions were known and scorned. "Oh, just one of our little old smokies. Mac. Sorry we can't ask you, Ben, but it's a hen party. Come, Sandy?"

"I'll adore to be there!"

"You will? Say, why don't you come in with us on the New Year's party? We're getting it up now. All the old crowd. A progressive dinner. We might have the wine course at your house. I hear how you've an excellent cellar."

Before Sandy could open her mouth, Murillo cut in: "Thank you, Miss Arliss. I've made plans for New Year's."

Sandy looked at him ineluctably: "Have you? Well, I may not approve of those plans, Penny. And perhaps we'll want them, May."

"But you'll come next week, surely? I'll let you know more."

"You bet I'll come!"

She laughed gayly, feeling Murillo's fingers pinching at her arm. She followed him to his car, parked across the street.

He footed with the gears, the blanching, angry look about his mouth. "What did you mean accepting that date?"

"Why not? Do you think I went into solitary confinement when I married you?"

"Did you hear her say it was a smoker?"

"Smoker?!"

"A female smoker! You'll not go. And I don't wish people to call you Mac."

Sandy whistled softly. This was a nickname May had given her when they were passing through their early teens and thought it heroic to assume tough ways.

"And how dared you agree to that New Year's party?"

"Oh, I thought you wanted people to fancy us an ideal couple! I thought you wished to give out the impression that I was an idealized and pampered wife."

"He looked at her furiously.

"How did you dare put Beatrice put that notice in the paper about our trip to Europe and your terrible devotion to your mother in law and your beautiful bride? You couldn't leave her to meet an emergency alone?"

They were driving down the block. Sandy stared eagerly from the window. The doors of the dry goods store were wide open, but the interior was in shadow. She saw someone moving to the threshold. Before she could identify the form as his they had sped past.

She slumped low—a sudden bitterness flowing hotly through her veins—a revulsion against herself—a frenzied conviction that she had once been weak—so weak that a puny fellow like Ben Murillo could now accost her, elude her arm, march her to a machine, force her to enter.

Ramon would wait hours. He would wait up and down the block. She said dully: "Are you remaining home to dinner?"

"Why do you ask? Had you planned to take another walk this evening?"

"My plans are nothing to you, Ben. I ask as I may wish to know."

Murillo now smiled, helped her up the step. "I may have something to tell you later, my dear. Yes, I'm remaining to dinner."

She ran to her room—wondered if she might in any way steal a word to him. She fancied him waiting so impatiently—eagerness and laughter in his eyes. Then the happiness shifting to gloom in the abrupt way his moods sometimes changed. And she remembered the sweet, solemn fervor of his kiss.

Charged with a husband excitement she took the chair Murillo held out so ceremoniously. He said affably: "You misunderstand me, Sandy. I'm perfectly willing for you to have all the friends you wish. I only want you to exercise discrimination in the choosing of them. Beatrice will be only too happy to have you meet as many young girls as you like. They will be the right type for a woman of your position."

Sandy glanced up slowly, facing him with cold hatred.

He went on tensely: "I don't approve of women smoking. And I don't approve of coarseness. Is that more than I've a right to ask?"

She dropped a spoonful of little toasted cubes in her soup.

"I'm trying to talk with you, Sandy."

"I've no wish for your conversation. You're too ridiculous even to taunt. As though you or Beatrice Murillo can teach me anything! As though my position is any longer a matter of coercion to you!"

"No." He leaned forward, his voice cooing. "No, my dear! I've talked with your mother. You've given up the idea of a divorce. That's very nice. So I've resumed the idea of our marriage."

"What kind of an affair, May?"

"What kind of an affair, May?"

"What kind of an affair, May?"

"What kind of an affair, May?"

"What kind of an affair, May?"

"What kind of an affair, May?"

"What kind of an affair, May?"

"What kind of an affair, May?"

TWO WEDDINGS ARE PERFORMED AT COURT HOUSE

Two weddings were performed yesterday at the court house with County Judge Quinn officiating. The first marriage took place yesterday morning, shortly before noon, when Dale Heath of Ashland, and Wanda Young of Macdonald, California were united in marriage in the presence of the parents of the groom. Mr. Heath is an engineer. The young couple will make their home in Ashland.

The second wedding occurred yesterday afternoon, uniting Estel E. Call and Abbie Jones, both of Roseburg. Mr. Call is an employee of the telephone company, serving as an electrician, while Mrs. Call has been employed as an operator.

The Lady Muscovites will have a pot luck supper, Friday evening, Dec. 11th, 7 o'clock, followed by a business meeting and Xmas tree. Members bring a gift not over 25c in value per member. Every member requested to be present.

WOMEN WILL HOLD PRE-CHRISTMAS BAZAAR DEC. 11-12

A pre-Christmas bazaar, at which will be offered a wide variety of fancy work, house dresses, and dainty articles of all kinds, suitable for Christmas gifts, will be held on Friday and Saturday, December 11 and 12 at Newland and Son's Dodge Brothers' garage at the corner of Stephens and Cass streets. The bazaar is being given by the Ladies Aid society of the Christian church and will be one of the largest they have ever held.

In addition to the fancy and hand work to be offered, there will be a sale of cooked foods, including chicken tamales. The sale will open at 9 o'clock each morning, continuing throughout the day. No phone orders taken.

FEWER RENTERS, MORE OWNERS AND FARMS IN OREGON

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—The total number of farms in Oregon increased from 50,296 in 1920 to 55,598 in 1925. This is shown in figures given out by the department of commerce on a farm census of the state.

The census also shows that the number of farms operated by owners increased from 29,852 in 1920 to 45,884 in 1925. Compared with this increase there was a decrease in the number of farms operated by tenants, the figures being 9427 in 1920 and 9406 in 1925.

The acreage of farms in the state aggregating 14,120,943 in 1925, compared with 13,542,318 in 1920.

Farm values in 1925 aggregated $61,174,215 in 1925, compared with $670,213,254 in 1920.

The average value per acre in 1925 was $43.71, compared with $43.89 in 1920.
