HOCHRADEL BUYS BUILDING OCCUPIED BY ABSTRACT CO.

Negotiations are being concluded this week which will result in the purchase of the building now occupied by the Douglas Abstract company by A. J. Hochradel. The deal has been pending for some time and has been practically completed, actual transfer being expected about the first of the year. Mr. Hochradel is buying the building as an investment and there will probably be no immediate change made in the occupants. This building, located at the corner of Washington and Jackson streets, was purchased by the Abstract company several years ago and has since been held by them. They made numerous improvements, bringing the front up to the modern style of architecture and making other desirable changes. The lower floor is occupied by the Abstract company and the Chamber of Commerce, while the office in the rear of the building, with an entrance on Washington street is occupied by the Douglas Creditors' Association. The upper floor is used as a lodge hall.

NO COMPLAINT OF TREATMENT BY INSURGNTS

ination of Wallace McCamant of Oregon to be circuit judge of the ninth federal circuit court, against which objections were voiced by Senator Johnson, republican, California, was adopted today by a senate sub-committee.

A bill widening the powers of the commerce department in dealing with radio broadcasting was introduced in the senate today by Senator Dill, democrat, Washington. It would strike at eliminating interference between stations and is similar in many respects to a measure already introduced in the house by Representative White, republican, Maine.

War Debts Create Storm.

Plans of republican leaders to put the debt settlements with Italy and Belgium through the senate before the Christmas holidays led to vigorous protests today from senators on both sides of the chamber.

When Senator Smoot said that four of six debt settlements now before congress corresponded with the British settlement, previously approved, the statement was challenged by Senator Robinson, the democratic leader. The British debt settlement itself then was attacked by Senator Reed as "whitewashing for the international bankers to permit them to make loans to debtor nations at six and seven per cent."

Senator Howell, republican, Nebraska, followed with a charge that under the Italian settlement the United States would not get a cent of the principal of the loan and only 1.8 per cent interest over a period of 62 years.

During the debate Senator Smoot said that France had "bluntly told us they did not owe anything."

"But France has got to make a settlement," he continued, "if she does not the French franc will go the way of the German mark. That will not do this country any good and it will not do the world any good."

Debtors Are Criticised.

The assault on the Italian settlement was taken up by Senator Harrison, democrat, Mississippi, who said it would cost American taxpayers $3,000,000,000. Senator Smoot declared however, that he doubted that Italy could pay even the amount he had promised and said that if he were a banker he would make the best settlement possible.

"And if I were an American banker I would tell a foreign country to deal honestly with my country before it sought to deal with me," retorted Senator Reed.

While Senator Reed was continuing his attack on the debt settlements, the house was being told by Chairman Green of the ways and means committee that it and not the senate was charged with first consideration of the subject because it came under the head of revenue legislation.

If the senate attempted to act on the settlements first, Mr. Green said, he would ask the house to return the senate notification and act on its own initiative.

In the course of his speech in the senate, Senator Reed coupled France's claim of inability to pay and French expenditures in the war in Morocco.

"What are they doing?" asked the Missouri senator. "They are down in Africa stealing—and I use the word stealing in all of its nasty sense—stealing the lands and liberty of a free people."

PARENTS COMPETE WITH STUDENTS IN SPELLING CONTEST

The regular meeting of the high school parent-teacher association was held last night with an exceptionally good attendance. As a result of the outcome of the spelling contest there is apt to be a shortage on spelling books in the future for the parents made such a good showing that they are determined next time to win a decisive victory.

The contest between the students and parents was the source of much keen rivalry. A team of twelve students, comprising the best spellers of the student body were selected to compete against an equal numbr of parents. The students came with a regular rooters section and held a pep rally. Not to be outdone the parents organized a yell team and with their impromptu call of "S. O. S., We Need Help" stimulated the contestants.

After twenty minutes of spelling there were five students and four of the parents left standing.

At the next meeting a team of Freshmen will compete against a team composed of parents of members of the Freshman class. The parents this time will have an opportunity for preparation and have avowed their intention of giving close and studious attention to their youngsters' spellers for the next few weeks.

Following the spelldown a discussion on the topic, 'How can the P. T. A. Best Serve the School and Community?" was led by Hon. R. W. Marsters. He advocated a cafeteria operated by the home economics class for the benefit of students who must otherwise eat cold lunches. A committee was appointed to take this matter up with the school board.

A piano solo by Miss Fonda Giles and a general discussion completed the program.

PEAR GROWERS SET MARK FOR NUMBERS AT MEDFORD MEET

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

MEDFORD, Ore., Dec. 16.—What is believed to be the largest gathering of pear growers in the history of the world assembled in Medford today for a three days' session, under the auspices of the Oregon State Horticultural Society. Pear growers from all parts of the Pacific Coast are in attendance and the three days' program will be devoted to the discussion of pear problems.

Tonight the Chamber of Commerce will give a banquet to the visiting delegates and preparations have been made to provide for 500 guests. Particular attention will be paid to the control of pear blight and the solution of pear marketing problems.

PORTLAND, Ore., Dec. 16.—Except for a period of about 20 days in October there has been no car shortage in Oregon this year, it was stated today at the office of M. R. Whithead, manager of the Portland district of the Pacific Fruit Express.

Refrigerator cars are assigned to various fruit growing states on a percentage basis, based on the number of orders, it was explained. A heavy movement of grapes from California, it was admitted, would reduce the number of empty cars available but California would receive no more cars than Oregon, in proportion to the tonnage of fruit to be shipped.

Perishable fruit from Oregon was moved promptly this year and no shippers complained, said Mr. Whitehead. If cars could not be supplied to all shippers each day they were provided within 24 hours. There was some shortage in the Hood River district and the Yakima district, but on the Southern Pacific lines in Oregon fruit was moved promptly, he said.

F. I. FULLER, VICE PRESIDENT P. E. P. COMPANY, PASSES

PORTLAND, Ore., Dec. 16.—Franklin I. Fuller, vice president of the Portland Electric Power company, one of the oldest street railway executives on the Pacific coast, died at his home here today after an illness of two days of acute indigestion. He had been connected with traction companies in Portland since 1892. He was born at Providence, R. I., in 1858, and came to Oregon in 1883. He was employed on work of the Northern Pacific Terminal company and later engaged in general contracting in Portland and vicinity. When the Portland Cable Car company began operations in Portland he entered the traction business.
