ROSEBURG—OAKLAND

THREE DANCE HALL LICENSES GRANTED BY COUNTY COURT

Only three dance hall licenses have so far been granted by the county court under the terms of the new dance hall law. Any dance hall outside the city limits must in the future have a license from the county court, a bond being required, while the application must bear the signatures of 12 freeholders of the school district in which the dance hall is located. Licenses so far have been granted to W. H. Long, Coles Valley; W. C. Brownson, South Myrtle Creek and the Glide Grange. An application has been submitted by the Rainbow Gardens but due to the fact that some of the signers were not freeholders the license has not yet been granted, but probably will be as soon as the application is satisfactorily amended. The law applies only to dance halls outside of incorporated cities or towns, for inside the cities the ordinances apply and govern.

NOTICE TO DOG OWNERS

All persons owning or harboring dogs in the city of Roseburg must pay the annual license thereon which is due on or before the 15th day of January.

You are therefore notified that from and after the first of February all such persons who have not secured the license required by law will be arrested and punished according to law.

I. S. KETCH, Chief of Police.

FAVORS LICENSE CUT.

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

PORTLAND, Ore., Jan. 22. — Following a declaration by Secretary of State Sam A. Kozer yesterday at a joint meeting of county judges, sheriffs and distric attorneys that automobile license fees in Oregon could be cut without impairing the highway program, H. B. Van Duzer, of the state highway commission said in an address today before the county judges, that it would not be safe to undertake any cut in such fees until the eastern Oregon part of the highway program is completed.

While Van Duzer's talk was not given by him as a reply to Kozer's previous talk, he said that he hoped the county judges would not be misled "by statements that had been made public."

He declared that it will take $25,000,000 to complete the system, and urged that in western Oregon, where the system is far advanced toward completion, the county judges should not commit themselves to a policy which might cut down the income of the highway commission while there still pends a great proportion of the eastern Oregon part of that system not yet completed.

WOULD ABOLISH BOARD

PORTLAND, Ore., Jan. 22. — Abolition or restriction of the power of the parole board and establishment of a circuit court of appeals of limited jurisdiction, subordinate to the state supreme court, are recommended in resolutions before the convention of district attorneys of the state, and are under discussion at the session this afternoon.

A resolution was adopted this morning recommending that the state laws be amended so as to give the prosecution and the defense each 1 peremptory jury challenges in cases where a death penalty or life imprisonment is involved, and six challenges in cases of crime punishable otherwise.

Resolutions of commendation of the work of W. S. Levens, state prohibition enforcement officer, were adopted. Resolutions also were adopted commending the attitude of the press and its cooperation with law enforcement officers in making the prohibition law effective.

DIET AND HEALTH

Of course, you understand these directions are not given in the advertisements. Oh, no! Nor do the labels on the jars tell you that these products will reduce you. Do you know why? Because if this statement were to appear on the labels the manufacturers would be arrested for violating the National Pure Food and Drug Act which prohibits fraudulent claims on labels. And if these directions are not given—and taken—the product is useless, for THERE IS NOTHING THAT IS RUBBED ON THE SKIN THAT WILL REDUCE YOU. Nor is there anything to use in your bath that will reduce you. If there were reducing drugs powerful enough to be absorbed through the skin, can't you see how dangerous they would be?

One of these fake preparations was analyzed in the laboratories of the American Medical Association and found to contain oil of turpentine, acetic acid, water, casein (protein part of milk), and perfume. A few cent's worth of vinegar, cottage cheese and turpentine would have the same effect in reducing—which is no effect—as their $5 jars.

Now let me repeat: these things will not reduce you and they may irritate the skin. There are only three ways to reduce without harm to your health: first to increase your activities sufficiently so that the diet you are consuming will not supply your energy needs and your stored fat will be called upon; second, to decrease your diet, taking sufficient to supply all the needs of the body except some of the energy needs, and letting the stored fat supply that deficit; and third, which is the best, a combination of these two.

You have already begun this method of reducing if you have joined our class.

GRANGE TEAM TO EXEMPLIFY 5TH DEGREE HERE JANUARY 30TH

The Douglas County Pomona Grange has procured the Knights of Pythias hall for Saturday, January 30, and at that time will exemplify the 5th degree, the first time that the degree has been put on in this city. At some time in the future Roseburg hopes to be able to bring the stateg range convention to the city. The state grange will meet only in cities where the Pomona grange can put on the 5th degree work. In order to perfect themselves in this degree the team expects to hold several meetings in the future at which time the work will be exemplified.

"SANDY"

By ELENORE MEHERIN

THE STORY SO FAR

Sandy McNeil, in love with life, marries Ben Murillo, a rich Italian, to please her impoverished family. Tyranny by Murillo and frequent quarrels follow. A son dies at birth. Bob McNeil, her uncle, aids in plans for Sandy and her mother to take a trip to Honolulu. There she meets Ramon Worth, who saves her life in the surf. On the same steamer home he declares his love. Murillo says he will never release her. Judith Moore, a cousin, tells Sandy love is everything. Murillo overtakes her as she goes for a tryst with Ramon. He appears, unexpectedly, at a party she is giving for her friends. She leaves his home and accepts the kindly attentions of Ramon, whose home she shares. She leaves for her home when she learns her mother is ill. Sandy's mother dies and she goes to live with her cousin, Judith, after parting with Ramon. Douglas Keith introduces his friend Hal Hume, to Judith. He, himself is fascinated by Sandy, whom he sees frequently.

GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER 83

She told it abruptly and completely, in cold, monotonous tones. She went back and repeated, sparing nothing.

Once he said roughly: "I don't want to hear this. And I don't believe you."

And once she thought he cried.

"You suppose I left in a nice, quiet way, going straight to San Jose and getting a job I didn't. I ran out of the house one midnight, like a crazy person. We quarreled. I taunted him. He lost control of himself. He raised his fist and struck me in the face. . . ."

When she said this, he touched her arm. She looked up to see his eyes dark and glowering. He blinked and said in a harsh mumble that sounded greatly like crying: "You say he struck you? The damned beast struck you?"

"So I tore the door open and went flying down the steps. I went without hat or coat, and I hadn't a cent.

"But I didn't go alone. I went with this man who loved me. . . He took me to a cottage of his near Monterey. He did everything for me . . . So in the end, I was everything to him. Now you know it all—"

"Why did you tell me this, Sandy?"

"So that you would no longer love me."

"You don't want me to stop loving you?"

"I do. At least, a part of me does."

She took her hat off and now sat forward, the hair falling over her face. She thought . . . I can't look at him; I'll never look into his glorious eyes again . . . "I want you to turn from me because I can only hurt you."

"It's a year since you've seen him."

"A year — Almost that long since I've heard from him."

"Do you care for him as you care for me?"

"No."

"In the beginning you thought you did?"

She was silent. He repeated breathlessly: "You did? You thought you cared for him in the beginning?"

"Not as I care for you . . . not at all as I care for you. This is different—different and utterly new. Like nothing in the world I ever felt before. There were never things singing and blazing in me because of anyone else's look. I ever lay awake in the night thinking how sweet it would be to die that you might know how much I care. And I never sat with another longing and longing for him to kiss me. Because you're the only one — the only one I've ever loved. . ."

She stooped and tried to see his face.

But she went on evenly: "I should have waited for you. I didn't. I've made a mess of my life. I'm not weeping about it. I'm not asking anyone to overlook things I've done. Not even you, Douglas. What I am, I am. I can't escape that. Don't think I'm confessing to you. Or apologizing. I'm not asking for a pardon. And I'm not expecting you to understand.

"I'm telling you this to cure you of your feeling for me. I'm not only hopeless, but undesirable. I'm sorry that wt part so wretchedly. I'm sorry to have spoiled your faith—I suppose I should have told you sooner. But I cared for you from the first hour. So it was even then too late."

She raised her eyes, expecting to find his stony and cold. Steeled for this. But they were flushed. And she saw that he hadn't listened to these last sentences of hers; that his thought dwelt on her as she sat before him, pale and seraph-like, the mist in her bright hair.

She saw this because of the husky way he repeated: "Things singing and blazing in you because of me, Sandy? You lie awake wishing to die—for Me? You love me so?"

"Don't Douglas—don't kiss me now . . ."

"Won't I!"

"No — you don't know what you're doing. Listen!"

"I don't want to know. You can't cure me. I won't be cured. If you sit here wishing to be kissed, then kiss me . . . I, too, long—"

All that she said were but words—dim phantoms. Here, before him, was the sweet appealing beauty that he wanted and loved. Here were her hands, soft and flexible as a child's. Here were her deep, shadowed eyes.

They filled now, and she pushed from him: "Don't you understand?"

"That you ran out in the night without hat or coat? That someone raised a fist and struck you?" He took her hands and held them against him. "Anything you did, you had a right to do!"

She closed her eyes, holding back the song that came shouting from her heart.

She said faintly: "You pity me. Tomorrow you will see it otherwise."

"It may be years. I may never be free. I can only wreck your life. Anyone can see it. Douglas—everyone can see it but you—"

"Let them see it, then—" He now stooped and laughed, the sparkle of his eyes: "Say all that again, Sandy—the way you love me—you want me—"

"You don't care about that? I can't believe it."

She turned and looked at the glimpering surface of the lake. The moon's reflection like a tiny silver pool swayed there. "Why did I tell him this? Only evading. I knew this? I'll go away — that's what I'll have to do. I should have done that first. Oh, what do we care. Tomorrow may never come . . ."

And suddenly she thought of Judith—how would she meet Judith—what would Judith say?

"Take me home, Douglas."

He put his arms about her. He said: "I'm sorry about all that. I'll be glad if you said you were only fooling—only trying me out. But I know it's true. I'm sorry on your account. Sandy — you didn't think I'd let this come between us? I think I love you more . . . Yes—I love you more . . . Don't close your eyes. I want to look in them. . . . Put your hands on my face. I like that—"

She crept along close to the wall, making no sound . . . Yet the moment she was in their room, she sensed that Judith had heard . . . that Judith knew where she had been.

But she lay quiet. She wanted to shout: "He loves me! He won't turn from me. I did all I could!"

Then Judith's arm went about her waist. Judith said: "Don't! He so near the edge, Sandy. It's late, isn't it? You hair feels wet. Good night—"

Sandy hid her face in the pillow. "Tomorrow," she thought—"Tomorrow I'll settle it—finally."

JOHN COOLIDGE CAN USE PHONE TO TALK TO SON, CAL

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

PLYMOUTH, Vt., Jan. 23.—President Coolidge now may talk directly with his father any time of the day or night, simply by picking up a telephone receiver in Washington and calling "Plymouth 5,000." The instrument at this end is in the room of Colonel John C. Coolidge, 80-year-old bedridden father of the executive, whose steadfast refusal to have a telephone in his home was weakened since illness caused loss of the use of his legs.

The telephone was installed yesterday. Previously the same connection was available through an instrument in the hall over the general store across the road from the Coolidge place.

KELSO OFFICER WOUNDED IN DUEL

KELSO, Wash., Jan. 23.—E. L. Bailey, night patrolman of the Kelso police force, is in a Kelso hospital expected to die as the result of a gun duel at 3 o'clock this morning in West Kelso between three officers and two unidentified gunmen who escaped.

Bailey and Night Sergeant B. Huntington were patrolling West Kelso in the police car. At Third and Main streets they saw two men standing in front of a closed pool room. The officers stopped to inquire. As they approached the two men opened fire without warning. Bailey's right lung was punctured, and another bullet lodged in his left arm. As the men ran the two officers emptied their guns at them. Bailey firing from the ground where he crumpled after being hit. The only description the police have is that one was tall and light, while the other was of medium height and weight.

HIGH OFFICIAL OF EAGLES LODGE TO VISIT CITY

Charles C. Guenther, grand worthey president of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, is to pay an official visit to the Roseburg lodge on Thursday, January 28. The local lodge is making an effort to have all of their members present at the meeting at which time the initiatory degree will be conferred on a large class of candidates. Members of the order from all parts of the state are expected to be present for the program which will be very interesting. The order has many important projects for consideration among them being an old age pension movement.

LARGE GROUP OF WOOL MEN MEET

PENDLETON, Ore., Jan. 23.—The biggest crowd of wool men in the history of the meetings of the Oregon Wool Mens association, gathered here today for the convention, Secretary MacHake having signified. Election of officers today appeared one of the high lights in prospect, as new officers will be named, President Falconer and Secretary MacHoke having signified their intention of not again running for office. Yesterday the convention went on record as favoring the retention of a full time executive secretary who will be named later by the executive committee.

Tonight the big feature will be the annual banquet for which every seat has long since been sold.

ORDER ISSUED TO EXPEL 20,000 GERMANS, AUSTRIANS

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

VIENNA, Jan. 23.—A Bucharest dispatch to the Wiener Neuste Nachrichten states that the Rumanian minister of the interior has instructed the police to expell 20,000 Germans and Austrians from Rumania by next Monday.

There has been no indication of trouble between the Rumanian authorities and the German and Austrian minorities. The league of nations council last June considered the question of the treatment of the minority populations in Transylvania and in September succeeded in settling the question of the treatment of Hungarian farmers in Rumania whose lands were expropriated, Rumania agreeing to pay an indemnity.
