"SANDY"

By ELENORE MEHERIN

THE STORY SO FAR

Sandy McNeil, in love with life, married Ben Murillo, a rich Italian, to please her impoverished family. Tyranny by Murillo and frequent quarrels follow. A son dies at birth. Bob McNeil, her uncle, aids in plans for Sandy and her mother to take a trip to Honolulu. There she meets Ramon Worth, who saves her life in the surf. On the same steamer home he declares his love. Murillo says he will never release her. Judith Moore, a cousin, tells Sandy love is everything. Murillo overtakes her as she goes for a try at Ramon. He appears, unexpectedly, at a party she is giving for her friends. She leaves his home and accepts the kindly attentions of Ramon, whose home she shares. She leaves for her home when she learns her mother is ill. Sandy's mother dies and she goes to live with her cousin, Judith, after parting with Ramon. Douglas Keith introduces his friend Hal Hume, to Judith. He, himself, is fascinated by Sandy, whom he sees frequently.

GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER 86

He looked after Judith lingeringly—Judith gazing up at him with a milk bottle tucked under her arm. Fine way to spend New Year's Eve! She could have come! It wouldn't have hurt her to come. She reached the high flight of steps. The door closed on her. Going in to make the egg-nog. He frowned impatiently. She could have come! Didn't need to go running up the hill like that. He went on reluctantly, filled with regret and a queer sense of loneliness. Meant to go off and leave Jude behind. Why hadn't he thought of asking her sooner? He remembered last year—all those years. Now she wouldn't think he'd forgotten her—forgetting all those dear, happy times.

GIRLS ARE BELIEVED TO BE SHOPLIFTERS

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)
EUGENE, Ore., Jan. 26.—With the arrest of two University of Oregon students today, police believe that they have solved the mystery of a number of shoplifting cases here recently. The two girls placed under arrest are Eleanor D. Butcher, 21, of 781 Marshall street, Portland, a major in journalism and member of the sophomore class, and Laura Pauline Breaker, of Gearhart, major in fine arts, of the sophomore class.

Quantities of women's apparel, including many dresses of fine quality, were found in the room of the two girls in a local apartment house, the police stated. Although no warrant had been sworn here this afternoon, merchants who lost goods in the alleged shoplifting deal, were at the police station with avowed intention of carrying out the case.

DISOLVE PARTNERSHIP

MAN HELD IN PIMSON IDENTIFIED AS SCOTT.

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)
SAN QUENTIN, Cal., Jan. 26.—A man held in the state prison here under the name of John Redding was today positively identified as Robert Scott, Chicago murder suspect, by Floyd C. Carr of Chicago, victim of a hold-up, said by the Chicago police to have been perpetrated by Scott and his brother Russell Scott.

Judith, took spark in his thought; made him holy uncomfortable. But this spark died the instant he saw her. All in white, running down the stairs. Sandy looked like an angel in white; that band of brilliant in her hair. He laughed and caught her soft, appealing hands, thrilled by the fervor of her lips; he stung— "Happy New Year, Douglas. Oh, happy, happy year!"

Almost midnight. They sat at the table. An egg-nog was served. Abruptly and sadly this recalled Judith running up the hill, the milk bottle in her hands. Then he told Sandy about the meeting and that he had asked Judith along. But she wouldn't come, and how strange this seemed if it was true they hadn't quarreled. Bright stains like red petals bloomed on either of Sandy's cheeks.

"Because if you left just because they're crowded, they were crowded just the same months ago."

"What did Judith say?"

"That you wanted to go."

"I had to go! Then feverishly: 'You see, my aunt is against divorce, just as my father is. She would still think I had no right—no right to think of you, Douglas.'"

"Judith wouldn't think this?"

"No—Judith wouldn't." And for the first time the whole evening Sandy's spirits fell. She thought of a flutter of vague despair. "If he didn't take that picture of his the way she did and hide it away—if he saw that look in Judith's face—oh, Lord, if he guessed that Judith loved him!"

Then they rode out to the Marina. It was raining, a fine, gray mist that whirled in great, silvery wheels over the waters. Sandy thought of the night of the housewarming, when all the guests were gone and she had stolen to the big room on the third floor.

How utterly alone she had felt watching that pale finger of light trace across the sky. And as she stood there so, suddenly and shyly like the opening of petals, like the flutter of a song, a faint stir touched along her nerves. Arresting, delicate, unique—the stir of life.

Notes of music dropping on her heart.

Then she was no longer alone. Then she was filled with this warm, yearning sweetness.

Even as now. She closed her eyes, drawing a deep unconscious sigh. This happiness was hers. She felt suddenly an imperious need of assurance.

She reached out soft hand upward and laid it against his cheek. "Douglas, if the noblest and sweetest woman in the world came and said she loved you, would you still think of me?"

"The sweetest and dearest has said it."

"But if someone better?" And now both hands touched his face, held it while her eyes searched and pleaded: "If someone better? Oh, somebody like like Jude?"

Her lips trembled. Then her eyes closed, feeling the sweep of his arms, the laugh of his lips against her own.

"If all the women in the world—if the five hundred wives of Solomon came—"

"It would still be I, Douglas? I first? You see I've always been so near to happiness and always just missed it—"

He saw the tears trembling on her lashes, the whiteness of her lips. He said between a laugh and a cry: "You poor little kid! But you won't miss it this time. I'll make up to you for all that, Sandy—for every last bit of it."

"I wish you'd say that ten thousand times, Douglas. You don't love me as much as I love you. You couldn't! No one in the world loves as I love you!"

And that night, too, Sandy stood at the window, her eyes filling because of all that music in her heart. "I can't help it," she murmured. "I can't help it! It's mine! It's mine!" She found it so easy to laugh—easier still to cry.

They went on seeing each other every day—growing nearer—growing happier until the very summit of joy seemed theirs.

In the act of January Bob McNeil sent a wire to Sandy: "Come down this weekend, will you? Unlocked for complication. Don't get too alarmed. Fear counter charges."

Saturday Sandy was back in Santa Barbara. She stood in the office of Bob McNeil.

Bob handed her a letter: "See here, little kid—don't get so white. He says he has the goods on you. I know it's a lie. But read this—"

Standing there with those burning words leaping from the pages, Sandy felt the desolation that is death.

FIVE PERISH IN TENEMENT FIRES IN NEW YORK CITY

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—Five persons lost their lives in two early morning tenement house fires today. A mother and her three young children were burned to death in one fire, and a man died from suffocation in the other.

Mrs. Anna Falta and three of her children were the victims of the first fire. They were trapped in a blazing bedroom and were dead when firemen succeeded in entering the room.

Her husband, William, in an adjoining bedroom, was awakened by his wife's screams. He tried to fight his way through the flames but was driven back with serious burns. Leading four other children, he fled to the street. George Kisten, the fifth victim, was suffocated from a wound in the head inflicted by a robber several nights ago, and was unable to leave his bed. His wife, a paralytic, was rescued.

touring car belonging to Asa Boies, which was stolen from his garage at Bunker Hill last Monday night, was found near Stayton Saturday, and the driver, H. L. Walsh, ex-convict, taken into custody. It was reported. The license plate on the Buick car was issued to Frank Foster, of Bridge. The car thief is said to have cashed a number of worthless checks and is being held over for the grand jury on a forgery charge.

MEDFORD — Snow at the 7000-foot elevation in the Crater Lake National Park, or at the lake rim, is 5 feet 10 inches deep according to 10 inches received recently from caretaker Daniel Hana. This marks a fall of one foot and 10 inches during the last three weeks, but is only half the amount of last year's depth at this time. On the Ashland-Klamath Falls highway, likewise, the snow depth is far below normal, as it is reported that where there is one inch there should be one foot.

started Thursday, when Gene Robinson commenced setting grade stakes. Actual construction, it is anticipated will require about 10 days to two weeks for completion, according to the Port Umpqua Courier.

The tall spur is to be built by mill company employees under the supervision of the Southern Pacific department.

When the spur is completed, the Umpqua Mills and Timber company will be in a position to operate continuously when they start, March 1.

It is the expectation of the officials of that company that the new camp up Smith river will be in operation by February 16.
