NEW YORK—Pure whiskey and third rail bootleg stuff have been provided for Bellevue hospital by General Andrews so that tests shall be made as to the effect of hooch on toppers. The hospital has informed the general that the annual average of deaths from alcoholism in New York is 500. Governor Baxter of Maine, back from abroad, thinks prohibition is aiding the commerce of the United States. Magistrate Corrigan and Gordon disagree as to whether selling liquor constitutes disorderly conduct under the state statutes. The one released a defendant, the other imposed a fine.

CREAMERY WILL ERECT ADDITION TO ITS PLANT

The Umpqua Creamery company has passed through a most successful year and is reaching out for new business, says the Port Umpqua Courier. An addition is being constructed adjacent to the present plant to be occupied by a cheese factory and operated in conjunction with the present butter, milk and cream business.
The new building, when completed, will add 1600 square feet of floor space to the present structure, floor to be of cement. Complete new equipment for making cheese will be installed and H. J. Cook, formerly with the Coos Bay Mutual Creamery company will be employed as cheese-maker. The brand of cheese will be "Mellowest" April 1st has been set as the date for beginning operations of the new plant. This will be the first cheese factory operated in this district since the closing of the Gardiner plant, some 10 or 15 years ago. Climatic conditions and quality of milk are ideal and it is expected that the factory will produce cheese second to none in the northwest.
The location of the cheese factory in Redport will be of great benefit to the local dairymen, as they will thus be able to dispose of both milk and cream, at prices usually higher than that offered for butterfat alone.
The Umpqua Creamery company at a recent meeting of its stockholders increased the capital stock of the company to $10,000, elected new officers and took in new stockholders. Those now interested in the company are: Ray M. Dalley, H. P. Marks, Dave Roberts, Will R. Dalley, Ben C. Roberts, Wayne C. Conger and Karl R. Stone.

WHEAT ADVANCES WITH GROWTH OF FOREIGN DEMAND

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)
CHICAGO, March 13.—With the critical period of wheat growth in the United States coming nearer and with export demand for shipments from North America widening, the wheat market here has suddenly turned upward this week. Compared with a week ago, wheat value this morning were 2 1/2 to 5c a bushel higher.
Reversal of the downward trend which of late has been pulling the wheat market down began with a brisk purchasing movement. Scarcities of domestic receipts of wheat, together with further shrinkage of the meagre stock in Chicago, gave impetus to the new buying movement which set in. Besides, export purchasing of North American wheat was at the rate of 1,000,000 bushels a day as the week drew to a close. At present, the general outlook for the new crop is decidedly favorable, according to advices, although wheat in some sections east of the Mississippi is reported as in doubtful condition.

FARM NEWS

The following list of "don'ts" is given by the O. A. C. dairy department: Forget to wipe cow's udder and flanks before milking; milk with wet hands; run cold milk through the separator; forget to cool the cream immediately after separation is completed; mix water and cool cream; put milk or cream into dirty vessels; forget to wash the separator after each separation; separate the milk without first straining it; fail to operate the separator according to directions; expect the cream can to return to destination unless it is plainly addressed; feed dusty hay or ill-smelling feeds just once; think the cooler than the surroundings where it is kept; skim too thin cream; expect to get top price for cream unless cows, stable, utensils, separator, and mixers are kept clean; forget that there is good money in dairying if it is properly done.
Progressive sheep growers in Oregon are now using paper twine to tie the fleeces, as wool ties with paper twine sell more readily than similar wool tied with twine of jute, hemp, or similar fibres. Fragments of paper twine come out of the wool in the scouring process. Other kinds of paper are used for vegetable fibers, which are removed from the finished cloth only by expensive hand labor. If the use of paper twine were universal, it would be a distinct advantage to owners of farm flocks, says the extension service.

best applied now in the Willamette valley. This is as late as the valley farmers can profitably wait, according to C. L. Long, extension specialist in horticulture at the college, to put on nitrogenous commercial fertilizers.

Oregon cherry growers are liable to have their crops rejected this year unless they spray their trees for cherry worm. Last year many cherries were refused because of cherry worm, says C. L. Long, extension specialist in horticulture at the college, and this year the canners and dealers will reject affected fruit. Spraying for cherry worm eliminates this condition.

Farmers find grubbing tall grasses practical in the more densely forested areas of Oregon. The saving from the preservation of cattle losses in one season often more than pays for the cost of grubbing out the larkspur. The roots are dug out 6 to 8 inches below the surface of the ground as soon as the plants have made enough to be readily recognized. The experiment station recommends that roots dug out be soaked live of soil and piled in the sun. After they are dry enough they are burned.
To prevent larkspur poisoning, farmers in western Oregon are keeping their cattle out areas lately infested with these plants. Sheep are turned in also allowed to eat down the larkspur. Then the cattle are pastured without danger of poisoning. Also larkspur poisoning occurs among the cattle. Horses, although susceptible, are seldom poisoned under range conditions. Sheep are scarcely if at all susceptible, and may eat from two to five times as much as cattle without harmful results. In fact, the experimental station recommends that sheep be grazed upon larkspur areas in order that the pastures may become safe for cattle.

Whitewashing inside of the dairy barns in the production of clean milk, says the Oregon experiment station.
It is best to take the cows off pastures infested with onions, garlic and other strong weeds four hours before milking time, notes the Oregon experiment station.

Oregon cow testing association records show that the purebred bull is the better half of the quality herd, reports the college extension service.
