

You Go Out in the Morning

with Tackle from our store, Fishing Rod, Lines, Hooks, Flies, Bait—everything the successful Umpqua River fisherman needs, and

You come back at night

with a string of Fish to PROVE that you are not an Amman—as far as fishing is concerned, anyway.

Let Us Show You the Best Fishing Tackle Assortment in Town

Churchill Hardware Co.

THE IRON MONGERS

GOOD SUCCESS IS BEING MET IN SHOW ARRANGEMENTS

Excellent success is being met by the committee in charge for the arrangements of the All-Oregon products show to be held at the Armory on Tuesday, April 20, under the auspices of the Roseburg Woman's club. Already the names of 40 exhibitors have been secured, insuring one of the largest shows of the kinds that has ever been held in Roseburg. No charge is being made for display space, there will be no charge for general admissions. During the afternoon the club will serve tea, and a silver offering will be taken in connection with that feature. It is possible to accommodate a few

Constipation the result of a weak stomach

Help Nature remedy constipation

If your stomach and liver are weak, your food is not digested. This causes food to be held up in your body. The result is constipation, which causes headache and nervous pain. For years, people have been cured of this condition by using Chamberlain's Tablets for the Stomach and Liver. They help the digestive organs stop chronic constipation. Get Chamberlain's Tablets today at any Drug Store, only 25c.

more exhibitors, and any persons having products grown or manufactured in Oregon should notify Mrs. B. W. Maddox or Mrs. F. R. Dunlap at once in order that reservations may be made.

In the evening at 8 o'clock there will be an All-Oregon banquet at which nothing but Oregon products will be served. There will be a charge made for tickets to the banquet, which, however, is open to the public.

The Boy Scouts have offered their aid to the club, and will make an exhibit in addition to patrol work and participating in the program. An interesting musical and literary program will be presented both afternoon and evening.

TROJAN AND GREEK HEROES PROVIDE NAMES FOR BULLS

DUBLIN, April 14.—Agamemnon, Achilles, Ajax, Agastus, and other names of Greek and Trojan heroes may be heard any day on Vincent Lacle's estate, Portman Castle.

The vicar is a breeder of bulls and he has a fancy for selecting these names for his bulls.

QUEEN VICTORIA LYDIA E. PINKHAM

Two Famous Women Born the Same Year

In the year 1812, two babies were born whose lives were destined to influence the world.

One was born in a small cottage in Old England the other in a humble farmhouse in New England.

Queen Victoria through her wisdom and kindness during the long and prosperous reign has become enthroned in the hearts of the British people. Lydia E. Pinkham through the merit of her Vegetable Compound has made her name a household word in thousands of American homes.

Mrs. Adolph Bracke of 4116 South 15th St., South Omaha, Neb., was in a similar condition for four years before she tried the Compound. "I began to feel better," she writes, "and I have felt my health steadily improving." Mrs. Bracke continued to take the Compound for a year and a half and at the end of that time found herself in excellent health. "I am feeling fine now and do all my work myself," she wrote recently. "I am the mother of six and manage an eight-room house without help."

There had never been anything like this in our home. Even with Marian I was usually polite, often formal. There was no pretense among the Laveys. They were a young world in themselves, and to me a fascinating, inspiring world.

They were as interested in me as I was in them. The girls were a threat for a glimpse of the inner world where I lived. So I had determined to invite them to this very brilliant tea I was to give the morning my mother made her objection. "If I had refused the significance she was to put on the incident, I might have avoided it."

But in the middle of the week a chance call on them decided it. The talk was off the door of the little house in the Bronx.

"Stay out!" That was Bob's imperious young voice. As no one gave further invitation or bothered to open the door, I pushed it back on a corner, discolored from recent contact with the sun. I was to be a young woman, I was to be a young woman, I was to be a young woman.

In one corner was a big velvet top deck with a bookcase on top.

There had never been anything like this in our home. Even with Marian I was usually polite, often formal. There was no pretense among the Laveys. They were a young world in themselves, and to me a fascinating, inspiring world.

They were as interested in me as I was in them. The girls were a threat for a glimpse of the inner world where I lived. So I had determined to invite them to this very brilliant tea I was to give the morning my mother made her objection. "If I had refused the significance she was to put on the incident, I might have avoided it."

But in the middle of the week a chance call on them decided it. The talk was off the door of the little house in the Bronx.

"Stay out!" That was Bob's imperious young voice. As no one gave further invitation or bothered to open the door, I pushed it back on a corner, discolored from recent contact with the sun. I was to be a young woman, I was to be a young woman, I was to be a young woman.

In one corner was a big velvet top deck with a bookcase on top.

There had never been anything like this in our home. Even with Marian I was usually polite, often formal. There was no pretense among the Laveys. They were a young world in themselves, and to me a fascinating, inspiring world.

They were as interested in me as I was in them. The girls were a threat for a glimpse of the inner world where I lived. So I had determined to invite them to this very brilliant tea I was to give the morning my mother made her objection. "If I had refused the significance she was to put on the incident, I might have avoided it."

But in the middle of the week a chance call on them decided it. The talk was off the door of the little house in the Bronx.

"Stay out!" That was Bob's imperious young voice. As no one gave further invitation or bothered to open the door, I pushed it back on a corner, discolored from recent contact with the sun. I was to be a young woman, I was to be a young woman, I was to be a young woman.

In one corner was a big velvet top deck with a bookcase on top.

There had never been anything like this in our home. Even with Marian I was usually polite, often formal. There was no pretense among the Laveys. They were a young world in themselves, and to me a fascinating, inspiring world.

"HER FLING"

By Elenore Meherin
Author of "Chickie," "Sandy" and
"Other Stories of Nationwide Success."
(Copyright, 1926, by Call Publishing Co.)

CHAPTER 27

The Lacey's.

"Lacey? Why, who are these, Gail?" Mother adjusted her glasses, looked again at the list of names on the long sheet of paper I had given her.

"They are friends of mine, mother."

"Surely you are not going to invite them! That unheard of family!"

She shook back the sleeves of her soft gray negligee, took off her glasses, saying me with indignation, "Those are the people, Gail, with whom you are taking that ridiculous course in Socialism?"

"It's a course on the causes and prevention of poverty, mother."

"I care nothing about it!" She turned impatiently to her desk and drew a fine line through three names. "You may take courses with them since I cannot prevent it, but certainly you cannot meet them socially."

"I have already invited them, mother."

"I shall tell Adele what you have done, Gail. She may not wish to come to your tea."

"I have told her already. She is pleased."

Adele Guerin was my one very intimate girl friend. She had been a year in Paris. I was giving a tea in honor of her return.

And the blacklisted guests were the daughters in a family Alice Matthews had introduced to me, the drollest, most unusual people I had ever met. There were three girls, all self-supporting, and two young men, the eldest an engineer, the youngest a law student. One of the girls was a bacteriologist, the second a school teacher and Pat, the flirt of the family, was a stenographer.

This family was a revelation to me. The first time I had dinner with them I was actually trembling lest the meal end in blows. An argument starting peaceably turned into a wild, angry discussion. Clem, the eldest, a sober, earnest fellow about twenty-six, was against it, and Bob, a hot-tempered, flashing-eyed young man, was for it. He was actually screaming in deafening, unintelligible language.

"Not so loud, Bob," the mother, a quiet, old-fashioned, dear little body, softly turned the spoon in a dish piled high with mashed potatoes.

"That's right, mother, take his part. Just like you. Of course, I don't know anything."

"Aw, keep your shirt on. Can't you argue intelligently?" Clem fired in disgust.

"Don't talk to me," Bob flung out an angry hand, "criticized my teeth. 'Of all the fat heads.'"

He turned for sympathy to Margaret, the teacher. "Isn't he the idiot? Aw, never speak to me again."

He stabbed a knife with furious intensity into an enormous bowl of steak, attacked it viciously, in a few moments flung his chair from the table.

"Pardon me," he said, with a cunning grin. "I'm late." With a sheepish flash of white teeth and vivid eyes he tapped his older brother's shoulder. "Lend us a five, Clem."

He got it.

There had never been anything like this in our home. Even with Marian I was usually polite, often formal. There was no pretense among the Laveys. They were a young world in themselves, and to me a fascinating, inspiring world.

They were as interested in me as I was in them. The girls were a threat for a glimpse of the inner world where I lived. So I had determined to invite them to this very brilliant tea I was to give the morning my mother made her objection. "If I had refused the significance she was to put on the incident, I might have avoided it."

But in the middle of the week a chance call on them decided it. The talk was off the door of the little house in the Bronx.

"Stay out!" That was Bob's imperious young voice. As no one gave further invitation or bothered to open the door, I pushed it back on a corner, discolored from recent contact with the sun. I was to be a young woman, I was to be a young woman, I was to be a young woman.

In one corner was a big velvet top deck with a bookcase on top.

There had never been anything like this in our home. Even with Marian I was usually polite, often formal. There was no pretense among the Laveys. They were a young world in themselves, and to me a fascinating, inspiring world.

They were as interested in me as I was in them. The girls were a threat for a glimpse of the inner world where I lived. So I had determined to invite them to this very brilliant tea I was to give the morning my mother made her objection. "If I had refused the significance she was to put on the incident, I might have avoided it."

But in the middle of the week a chance call on them decided it. The talk was off the door of the little house in the Bronx.

"Stay out!" That was Bob's imperious young voice. As no one gave further invitation or bothered to open the door, I pushed it back on a corner, discolored from recent contact with the sun. I was to be a young woman, I was to be a young woman, I was to be a young woman.

In one corner was a big velvet top deck with a bookcase on top.

There had never been anything like this in our home. Even with Marian I was usually polite, often formal. There was no pretense among the Laveys. They were a young world in themselves, and to me a fascinating, inspiring world.

They were as interested in me as I was in them. The girls were a threat for a glimpse of the inner world where I lived. So I had determined to invite them to this very brilliant tea I was to give the morning my mother made her objection. "If I had refused the significance she was to put on the incident, I might have avoided it."

But in the middle of the week a chance call on them decided it. The talk was off the door of the little house in the Bronx.

"Stay out!" That was Bob's imperious young voice. As no one gave further invitation or bothered to open the door, I pushed it back on a corner, discolored from recent contact with the sun. I was to be a young woman, I was to be a young woman, I was to be a young woman.

In one corner was a big velvet top deck with a bookcase on top.

There had never been anything like this in our home. Even with Marian I was usually polite, often formal. There was no pretense among the Laveys. They were a young world in themselves, and to me a fascinating, inspiring world.

They were as interested in me as I was in them. The girls were a threat for a glimpse of the inner world where I lived. So I had determined to invite them to this very brilliant tea I was to give the morning my mother made her objection. "If I had refused the significance she was to put on the incident, I might have avoided it."

But in the middle of the week a chance call on them decided it. The talk was off the door of the little house in the Bronx.

"Stay out!" That was Bob's imperious young voice. As no one gave further invitation or bothered to open the door, I pushed it back on a corner, discolored from recent contact with the sun. I was to be a young woman, I was to be a young woman, I was to be a young woman.

In one corner was a big velvet top deck with a bookcase on top.

There had never been anything like this in our home. Even with Marian I was usually polite, often formal. There was no pretense among the Laveys. They were a young world in themselves, and to me a fascinating, inspiring world.

They were as interested in me as I was in them. The girls were a threat for a glimpse of the inner world where I lived. So I had determined to invite them to this very brilliant tea I was to give the morning my mother made her objection. "If I had refused the significance she was to put on the incident, I might have avoided it."

BAD BREATH

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets Get at the Cause and Remove It

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for cod liver oil, act gently on the bowels and positively do the work. People afflicted with bad breath find quick relief through Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The pleasant, sugar-coated tablets are taken for bad breath by all who know them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets act gently but firmly on the bowels and liver, stimulating them to natural action, clearing the blood and gently purifying the entire system. They do this without the dangerous calomel does without any of the bad after effects.

All the benefits of a healthy, sickening, gripping cathartic are derived from Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets without griping, pain or any disagreeable effects. Dr. F. M. Edwards discovered the formula after seventeen years of practice among patients afflicted with bowel and liver complaint, with the attendant bad breath.

Olive Tablets are purely a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color. Take one or two every night for a week and note the effect. 15c and 35c.

of it, and opposite was a low walnut bureau where ivory toilet articles, a purse, a flower vase, a boudoir lamp, dance programmes, dangle from the mirror and several photographs in oval frames all struggled for space.

Next to the bureau was an oval table littered with papers and notebooks.

Here Jean sat, a narrow drawer filled with small glass slides before her. She was carefully going over the slides and making notes on white cards as she did it.

Margaret, the school teacher, stretched her sinuous length on a couch near the window and Patricia, in a faded, bedragoned blue robe kimono, sat in a chair, a hand mirror before her, selecting with the greatest precision certain hairs to be plucked from her eyebrows.

As I came in Bob scrambled to his feet. Otherwise I was not offended with undue ceremony.

Jean, more serious and more sympathetic than the others, greeted me with unaffected pleasure.

"I was thinking about you, Gail. You know there's a big field for women doctors. You have money and something of a brain, why don't you go in for it?"

"Oh, yes, just like that!" Pat put down her mirror and whistled a breath upward. "Don't pay the slightest attention to that nut, Gail."

"Watch you and conquer the world," Pat sneered.

"Come on!" Bob got up and ushered me down the hall to the kitchen, made me butter the toast as he browbeat it, gave ruthless orders. He was quite a chef. In ten minutes we had a tray ready. Jean cleared a corner of her table, and with them I was actually trembling lest the meal end in blows.

An argument starting peaceably turned into a wild, angry discussion. Clem, the eldest, a sober, earnest fellow about twenty-six, was against it, and Bob, a hot-tempered, flashing-eyed young man, was for it. He was actually screaming in deafening, unintelligible language.

"Not so loud, Bob," the mother, a quiet, old-fashioned, dear little body, softly turned the spoon in a dish piled high with mashed potatoes.

"That's right, mother, take his part. Just like you. Of course, I don't know anything."

"Aw, keep your shirt on. Can't you argue intelligently?" Clem fired in disgust.

"Don't talk to me," Bob flung out an angry hand, "criticized my teeth. 'Of all the fat heads.'"

He turned for sympathy to Margaret, the teacher. "Isn't he the idiot? Aw, never speak to me again."

He stabbed a knife with furious intensity into an enormous bowl of steak, attacked it viciously, in a few moments flung his chair from the table.

"Pardon me," he said, with a cunning grin. "I'm late." With a sheepish flash of white teeth and vivid eyes he tapped his older brother's shoulder. "Lend us a five, Clem."

He got it.

There had never been anything like this in our home. Even with Marian I was usually polite, often formal. There was no pretense among the Laveys. They were a young world in themselves, and to me a fascinating, inspiring world.

They were as interested in me as I was in them. The girls were a threat for a glimpse of the inner world where I lived. So I had determined to invite them to this very brilliant tea I was to give the morning my mother made her objection. "If I had refused the significance she was to put on the incident, I might have avoided it."

But in the middle of the week a chance call on them decided it. The talk was off the door of the little house in the Bronx.

"Stay out!" That was Bob's imperious young voice. As no one gave further invitation or bothered to open the door, I pushed it back on a corner, discolored from recent contact with the sun. I was to be a young woman, I was to be a young woman, I was to be a young woman.

In one corner was a big velvet top deck with a bookcase on top.

There had never been anything like this in our home. Even with Marian I was usually polite, often formal. There was no pretense among the Laveys. They were a young world in themselves, and to me a fascinating, inspiring world.

They were as interested in me as I was in them. The girls were a threat for a glimpse of the inner world where I lived. So I had determined to invite them to this very brilliant tea I was to give the morning my mother made her objection. "If I had refused the significance she was to put on the incident, I might have avoided it."

But in the middle of the week a chance call on them decided it. The talk was off the door of the little house in the Bronx.

"Stay out!" That was Bob's imperious young voice. As no one gave further invitation or bothered to open the door, I pushed it back on a corner, discolored from recent contact with the sun. I was to be a young woman, I was to be a young woman, I was to be a young woman.

In one corner was a big velvet top deck with a bookcase on top.

There had never been anything like this in our home. Even with Marian I was usually polite, often formal. There was no pretense among the Laveys. They were a young world in themselves, and to me a fascinating, inspiring world.

They were as interested in me as I was in them. The girls were a threat for a glimpse of the inner world where I lived. So I had determined to invite them to this very brilliant tea I was to give the morning my mother made her objection. "If I had refused the significance she was to put on the incident, I might have avoided it."

But in the middle of the week a chance call on them decided it. The talk was off the door of the little house in the Bronx.

"Stay out!" That was Bob's imperious young voice. As no one gave further invitation or bothered to open the door, I pushed it back on a corner, discolored from recent contact with the sun. I was to be a young woman, I was to be a young woman, I was to be a young woman.

In one corner was a big velvet top deck with a bookcase on top.

There had never been anything like this in our home. Even with Marian I was usually polite, often formal. There was no pretense among the Laveys. They were a young world in themselves, and to me a fascinating, inspiring world.

They were as interested in me as I was in them. The girls were a threat for a glimpse of the inner world where I lived. So I had determined to invite them to this very brilliant tea I was to give the morning my mother made her objection. "If I had refused the significance she was to put on the incident, I might have avoided it."

But in the middle of the week a chance call on them decided it. The talk was off the door of the little house in the Bronx.

"Stay out!" That was Bob's imperious young voice. As no one gave further invitation or bothered to open the door, I pushed it back on a corner, discolored from recent contact with the sun. I was to be a young woman, I was to be a young woman, I was to be a young woman.

In one corner was a big velvet top deck with a bookcase on top.

There had never been anything like this in our home. Even with Marian I was usually polite, often formal. There was no pretense among the Laveys. They were a young world in themselves, and to me a fascinating, inspiring world.

They were as interested in me as I was in them. The girls were a threat for a glimpse of the inner world where I lived. So I had determined to invite them to this very brilliant tea I was to give the morning my mother made her objection. "If I had refused the significance she was to put on the incident, I might have avoided it."

But in the middle of the week a chance call on them decided it. The talk was off the door of the little house in the Bronx.

K. K. KUBLI FILES FOR STATE SENATOR

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

SALEM, Ore., April 14.—K. K. Kubli, veteran member of the lower house of the state legislature and once speaker of that body, yesterday filed with the secretary of state his candidacy for state senator to represent the joint district of Clackamas, Columbia and Multnomah counties. Other candidates filing late yesterday:

Ray H. Whincup, McMinnville, for Democratic nomination for state senator from Yamhill county.

J. C. Compton, McMinnville, for Democratic nomination for representative from Yamhill county.

Arthur McPhillips, McMinnville, for Democratic nomination for representative from Yamhill county.

James H. Cassell, Portland, for Republican nomination for representative from Multnomah county.

Arlie G. Walker, Sheridan, for Republican nomination for circuit judge for Yamhill and Polk counties.

GRADUATION INVITATIONS
The News-Review job printing department can supply graduates with the finest quality of invitations, personal cards, and all their needs in the way of high school printing. This office is fully equipped for the best quality of work.

FILIPINO WINS IN POOR BATTLE

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

PORTLAND, Ore., April 14.—Johnny Hill, Filipino featherweight boxer, scored a ten-round decision over Bud Thomas of Los Angeles in a tame and uninteresting fight here last night.

In another ten-round Tommy O'Brien, Portland bantamweight, took a decision from Alie Taylor, of Bend. The Calhoun, Portland lightweight, won in six rounds over Al Gracia of Spokane in a special event. Frankie Paragon of Astoria knocked out Eddie Tracey, local lightweight, in one of the preliminaries.

Barnes Beauty Parlor. Expert operator in attendance. Phone 163-3 for appointment.

WOMEN ACTIVE IN PROHIBITION SAYS W. C. T. U. HEAD

EVANSTON, Ill., April 14.—Women throughout the United States are showing an active interest in prohibition and are taking a definite stand, according to an announcement made today by Mrs. Ella A. Roole, president of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

"All these straw votes and the various other spectacular wet activities have only served to arouse America's womanhood to a realization of the real menace of the organized liquor traffic," Mrs. Roole declared.

"The wet are helping us because they are coming out into the open. Women, the great majority of them, will never allow the saloon to come back. Our membership is increasing steadily. We have just begun the routine organization for a call to membership here in the W. C. T. U. and the cause are responding as never before."

"What about dry or unusual activity on our part, 41,000 new women joined the W. C. T. U. last year. We are confident that with this new impetus before the country, we will reach a minimum of 100,000 women this year," said Mrs. Roole.

Hot bar-b-cue, sandwiches and five forever. Penna's Road Stand.

WIFE SLAYER OF PORTLAND FACING DEATH ON GALLOWS

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

PORTLAND, Ore., April 14.—John Datchuk was found guilty of first degree murder by a jury last week on the charge of the killing of his wife with a hatchet at their home here last January. The verdict automatically carries the death penalty. The jury was out about nine hours.

Arrived at the jail. Phone 189-1.

JAPAN AND PENNSYLVANIA EXCHANGE TREE SEEDS

HARRISBURG, Pa., April 14.—Americans of Pa. to Japan within the next decade may be greeted with the sight of native Pennsylvania trees while the Japanese visiting the Keystone state will be reminded of their homeland by the sight of well known Japanese varieties.

This bill is expected to be worked out through an exchange of tree seeds between the Pennsylvania

BIDS WANTED

Sealed bids, addressed, "Building Committee, Douglas Funeral Home Association," will be received at the office of Frank E. Alley, Room 8, Roseburg Apartments, until 10:00 a. m., April 17th, for the construction of a two-story building at the corner of Lane and Pine Sts., Roseburg. Plans and specifications may be seen at the above office.

NOTICE

To members of the order of the Eastern Star, our worthy Grand Matron, Mrs. Carolyn Lewis, will pay Roseburg Chapter No. 8, an official visit Thursday evening, April 15th. All members of the order in good standing are cordially invited to be with us. Bring your receipts.

By order of the W. M. FREE JOHNSON, Secy.

department of forests and waters and Professor M. Fujikawa, forester of Fukuoka, Japan, who spent some time here last year studying the state forests, nurseries and plantations.

J. M. CARR TO BE ASSOCI