With the Speed of Champions

Your Typists write
some words as fast as the World's Champion
Typist

STENOGRAPHERS often write certain familiar letter combinations at a rate equal to the sustained speed of the world's fastest typist. It is these sudden bursts of speed that test the mechanical qualities of a typewriter

Twelve Keys a Second!

In the International Typewriting Contest, won for 20 consecutive years on the Underwood, the contestant is penalized for mechanical errors made by the typewriter as well as for mis-struck keys. In winning the 1925 title, Albert Tangora struck twelve keys a second for one hour, and his Underwood did not make a single mechanical error!

This demonstrated mechanical superiority of the Underwood shows why every World's Typewriter Championship has been won on this machine, and why the Underwood is used in business offices wherever the utmost of typewriting speed and accuracy is required.
